CHAPTER X.

Rupert and Cluny.

When the Jeverys arrived in Paris, ey went immediately to the beautiful otel de Fransac, which Sir Thomas ad rented for their residence while the city.

One afternoon Matilda stood at a indow watching the crowds passing cessantly. To the right was the alace of the great King Louis, and ot far away the palace of his Emi- ence, the great Cardinal Mazarin.

She was dressed for her lover, and aiting his arrival, her soul flashing rom her watching eyes, her whole weet body at attention. When to or- linary ears there would have been othing to give notice, Matilda heard step. She let Jane's letter drop to er feet and stood facing the door with hands dropped and tightly lasped.

A moment later the footsteps were very distinct; they were ascending the stairway quickly, peremptorily. A per- fectly ravishing light spread itself over Matilda's face. Then the door flew open and Prince Rupert entered; 'entered," however, being too small a word, for with the opening of the door he was on his knees at Matilda's feet, his arms were round her waist, she had bent her face to his, they were both near to weeping and knew it not, for love must weep when it snatches from some hard Fate's con- trol the hours that years have sighed for.

Rupert loved Matilda. All the glory and the sorrow of his youth were in that love, and as he knelt at her feet in his princely, soldierly splendor there was nothing lacking in the picture of romantic devotion. "Adorable, ravish- ing Mata!" he cried, "at your feet I am paid for my life's misery." And Matilda leaned towards him till their handsome faces touched, and Rupert could look love into her eyes, soft and languishing with an equal affec- tion.

For a little while their conversation was purely personal, but their own interests were so blent with public affairs that it was not possible to separate them for any length of time.

"We have sold all our cargoes," he said triumphantly, "in spite of old Cromwell's remonstrances. What can Cromwell do? Will he go to war with France for a merchant's bill of lading?"

"I will tell you something, Rupert. I had a letter to-day from my friend, Mistress Jane Swaffham. She says her lover, Lord Cluny Neville, must be in Paris about this time, and that he will call on me. He is on Crom- well's business; there is no doubt of it."

"What is the appearance of Neville? I think I saw him this morning."

Then Matilda described the young lord, and the particularity of her knowledge regarding his eyes and hair and voice and manner did not please Prince Rupert.

"A very haughty youth," said Ru- pert when the conversation was re- sumed. "He was with the Cardinal this morning. And now I begin to remember his business was such as in a manner concerns us. 'Twas about a merchant ship which that old farmer on King Charles' throne wants pay- ment for. My men took it in fair fight, and 'tis against all usage to give back spoils."

They talked of these things until Rupert's engagements called him away, then they rose, and leaning to- wards each other, walked slowly down the long splendid room together.

She went then to find her uncle and aunt. But she quickly noticed in them an air of anxiety and gloom, and it annoyed her.

"Is anything particularly wrong, aunt? Have I been making some trouble again?"

"Sir Thomas is very unhappy, niece. He has heard news that frightens him, and we are longing to be in the peace and safety of our own home."

"You are going to lose a little gold, and so you are wretched, and must go to the City-of-the-Miserable."

"I am not going to lose a penny."

"Well, then?"

"There may be trouble because of this very thing, and I do not want to be in Paris with the two women I love better than myself if Cromwell and Mazarin come to blows. I might be taken from you. I should very likely be sent to the Bastile; you would not wish that, Matilda?"

"Dear uncle, shall we not return by The Hague?"

"No. Lord Neville has promised to do my business there. It is only a matter of collecting a thousand pounds from my merchant; but he is going to take charge of your aunt's jewels, and you had better trust yours also with him."

"I will not trust anything I possess to Lord Neville. Nothing!"

"It is enough," answered Lady Jev- ery. "Matilda cannot wish to put in danger your liberty or life."

"My happiness is of less conse- quence, aunt."

"Certainly it is;" and there was such an air of finality in Lady Jev- ery's voice that Matilda rose and went to her own apartments to continue her complaints. This she did with passionate feeling in a letter to Prince Rupert, in which she expressed with- out stint her hatred of Lord Neville and her desire for his punisnment. Rupert was well inclined to honor her wish. He had seen the young Com- monwealth messenger, and his hand- some person and patrician manner had given him a moment's envious look back to the days when he also had been young and hopeful and full of faith in his own great future.

He had not long to wait for an opportunity to meet Neville. While he was playing billiards the following afternoon with the Duke of York, his equerry arrived at the Palais Royale with his horse. Neville had taken the northern road out of the city, and it was presumably the homeward road. Rupert followed quickly, but Neville was a swift, steady rider, and he was not overtaken till twenty miles had been covered, and the daylight was nearly lost in the radiance of the full moon. Rupert put spurs to his horse, passed Neville at a swift gallop, then suddenly wheeling, came at a rush towards him, catching his bridle as they met.

"You will alight. I have a quarrel to settle with you."

"On wnat ground?"

"Say it is on the ground of your mistress. I am Earl de Wick's friend."

"I will not fight on such pretense. My mistress would deny me if I did."

"Fight for your honor, then."

Neville laughed. "I know better. And before what you call Honor, I put Duty."

"Then fight for the papers and money in your possession. I want them."

"Ha! I thought so. You are a rob- ber, it seems. But I warn you that I am a good swordsman."

"Heaven and hell! What do I care? If you do not alight at once, I will slay your horse. You shall fight me, here and now, with or without pre- tense."

Then Neville flung himself from his horse and tied the animal to a tree. Rupert did likewise, and the two men rapidly removed such of their gar- ments as would interfere with their bloody play. They were in a lonely road, partially shaded with great trees. Not a human habitation was visible, and there were no seconds to see jus- tice done in the fight, or secure help after it, if help was needed. But at this time the lack of recognized for- malities was no impediment to the duel. Repert quickly found that he had met his match. Neville left him not a moment's breathing space, but never followed up his attacks, until at last Rupert called out insolently, "When are you going to kill me?"

The angry impatience of the inquiry probably induced a moment's careless- ness, and Rupert did not notice that in the struggle their ground had insen- sibly been changed, and Neville now stood directly in front of a large tree. Not heeding the impediment, Rupert made a fierce thrust with the point of his sword, which Neville evaded by a vault to one side, so that Rupert's sword striking the tree, sprang from his hand at the impact. As it fell to the ground, Neville reached it first, and placed his foot upon it. Rupert stood still and bowed gravely. He was at Neville's mercy, and he indi- cated his knowledge of this fact by the proud stillness of his attitude.

"It was an accident," said Neville, "and an accident is God's part in any affair. Take your life from my hand. I have no will to wish your death." He offered his hand as he spoke, and Rupert took it frankly, answering:

"'Tis no disgrace to take life from one so gallant and generous, and I am glad that I can repay the favor of your clemency;" then he almost whis- pered in Cluny's ear three words, and the young man started visibly, and with great haste untied his horse.

"We would better change horses," said Rupert; "mine is a Barb, swift as the wind."

But Cluny could not make the change proposed without some delay, his papers and jewels being bestowed in his saddle linings. So with a good wish the two men parted, and there was no anger between them—admira tion and good-will had taken its place. Neville hastened forward, as he had been advised, and Rupert returned to Paris. He knew Matilda was expect- ing him, and he pictured to himself her disappointment and anxiety at his non-appearance. Yet he was physically exhausted, and as soon as he threw himself upon a couch he forgot all his weariness and all his anxieties in a deep sleep.

Early next morning he went to Ma- tilda.

"How could you so cruelly disap- point me?" she cried. "You see now that our time is nearly gone; in a few hours we must part, perhaps for- ever."

"My dearest, loveliest Mata, I was about your pleasure. I was following Lord Neville, and he took me further than I expected."

"Lord Neville again! The man is an incubus! Why did you follow him?"

"You wished me to give him a les- son. He was going homeward. I had to ride last night, or let him escape. By my troth, I had only your pleasure in mind."

"Oh, but the price paid was too great! I had to give up your society for hours. That is a loss I shall mourn to the end of my life. I hope, then, that you killed him. Nothing less will suffice for it."

"I was out of fortune, as I always am. I had an accident, and was at his mercy. He gave me my life."

WILL MAKE FIGHT FOR PROTECTION

Colonial Secretary Chamberlain to Carry Preferential Trade Plan to People.

OPINION IS MUCH DIVIDED

Election May Not Be Held for Eighteen Months and Chamberlain Is Likely to Be Endorsed—United States for Example.

London, June 1.—Colonial Secretary Chamberlain's protectionist policy is the all prevailing topic of discussion here. His masterful assertion that he would make reciprocal trade between the mother country and her colonies the question of the hour has been sensationally fulfilled. Columns of comment fill the afternoon newspapers, and everyone is asking "Does it mean dissolution?"

Some people maintain that the government contemplates appealing to the country on preferential trade and old age pensions immediately after the close of the present session of parliament at the beginning of August, while others maintain that the government has not the slightest intention of giving up its unexpired term of office. The Telegraph, generally semi-inspired, says:

"The issue could not be voted on for at least eighteen months, but in the meantime the government will give the people and parliament time to discuss it. A definite decision will probably be arrived at shortly, and will depend almost entirely on the result of the propaganda now undertaken by the press and the members of the house of commons. If the indications show that Mr. Chamberlain is likely to have the country at his back a general election at the end of this year is extremely probable." The colonial secretary himself, the Associated Press learns, is doubtful if he could win out just at present, but he is enthusiastically positive that with political agitation the conservatives can be brought to see the wisdom of his policy. Those who have discussed the preferential scheme with its author say he never exhibited such keen interest in any topic. In this crusade the colonial secretary is in harmony with Premier Balfour and has no design on the premiership. If a general election were held tomorrow, and the secretary's plans were carried out, Mr. Balfour would again take the reins of government. The opposition is almost solidly opposed to a modification of free trade and will endeavor to arouse that public ferment which was associated with the corn tax days.

Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Balfour and such unionists as agree with them will try to extract from the public that degree of support which they may interpret as a popular mandate. All signs point to a lenghty campaign on the lines of protection versus free trade, which is likely to destroy party lines almost as much as did the home rule question. In all the arguments the example and probable attitude of the United States will figure largely. The opponents of the scheme point out that the comparative immunity of the American from taxation precludes his prosperity under protection being applicable to the Britisher, who, as even the government organs admit, is already so heavily taxed that the initial years of protection with higher priced food would be a severe strain on him and possibly create bitter dissatisfaction among the poorer classes.

The sugar convention bill, enabling the British government to carry out the provisions of the Brussels sugar convention, which passed its second reading in the house of commons Thursday, is taken by the liberal papers to be another feature of Mr. Chamberlain's "attack on free trade." The text of the bill provides for the prohibition of the import of bounty fed sugar, that the origin of imported sugar be proved and that there be supervision by the customs or internal revenue officers of all British refineries, which must be worked only by persons authorized by the commissioners.

LAWS TO HIGHEST BIDDERS.

St. Louis Grand Jury Confessions Made Would Appal People.

St. Louis, June 1.—In making its final report the April grand jury reviews the evidence concerning legislative boodling and among other suggestions, strongly recommends that more stringent laws be enacted for punishment of lobbying at the state capital and that the statute of limitations be extended to seven years. It recommends that franchises obtained through boodling methods be forfeited. The report says in part:

"The testimony we have heard has shown a state of affairs most amazing. We have listened to the confessions of state senators, and were we at liberty to make known all they have told the recital would appal and astonish the citizens of this state. The venality existing among the makers of our state laws is alarming to those who believe in free government.

"Our investigations have gone back for twelve years and during that time the evidence before us shows that corruption has been the usual and accepted thing in state legislation, and that too, without interference or hindrance. The tendency has been to hide or to ignore rather to expose and punish this infamous crime.

"Laws have been sold to the highest bidder in numerous instances that we have evidence of. We believe that laws should be passed making it unlawful for lobbyists to ply their profession in the manner that some of them now operate, and providing for the forfeiture of franchises procured by corrupt methods.

"We have found some indictments for bribery and there would be many more were it not for the statute of limitation, which should be extended to seven years from the date of the crime."

The report concludes by thanking Mr. Folk, the circuit attorney, and Mr. Hancock, the assistant circuit attorney, for their assistance in the prosecution of crime.

DESTRUCTION BY WATERS.

Floods Raging In Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa.

Kansas City, Mo., June 1.—Unprecedented floods are raging in central and eastern Kansas, northwestern Missouri, eastern Nebraska and southern Iowa, the result of ten days of almost continuous rain fall. The general situation is considered most grave with no immediate relief in sight. Many lives have been lost and it is estimated that no less than 25,000 persons have been driven from their homes, many of which were washed away and that the property loss will run well up into the millions of dollars.

The greatest damage has been occasioned between Kansas City and Ellsworth, Kas., 200 miles west. The chief sufferer is North Topeka, which has been separated from the main part of the city and become an island. At Kansas City, Kas., and in the suburban towns of Armourdale and Argentine and at Harlem and Sheffield Mo., near Kansas City, Mo., an aggregate of ten thousand persons have been forced to leave their homes and eight thousand employes of the numerous packing houses and railroad shops in the bottoms are out of employment.

The situation summarized is as follows:

Homeless—Kansas, North Topeka, 7,000; near Emporia, 500; Salina and vicinity, 800; Kansas City, Armourdale and Argentine, 10,000; Lawrence, 500; Missouri—Harlem and Sheffield, 700; Iowa—Des Moines, 6,000; Ottumwa, 200; Nebraska—Lincoln, 200; Beatrice, 200.

Financial losses—Kansas—North Topeka, $1,000,000; Lawrence, $100,000; Concordia, $100,000; Abilene and vicinity, $300,000; Salina and vicinity, $150,000; Solomon, Chapman, Detriot and Woodbine and intervening country, $400,000; Des Moines, $500,000.

On Saturday the older inhabitants of our town crossed bats with their sons and the drubbing they received at the hands of the youngsters was something awful. It was Decoration Day and the ungrateful boys instead of "covering over with beautiful flowers" their ancestry, they bedaubed them with white washes. At the appointed hour the clash came, and one after another did John Nissen and Fritz Kluckhohn battery for the juveniles, retire the "has beens" without letting them touch the much sought sphere. Brilliant plays too numerous to mention were made by the younger aggregation. The battery for the "sluggers" was Crawford and Geo. Nissen and despite the fact that Geo. twirled with all his might and Crawford occasionally stole one from the bat the boys made a number of long hits. From the beginning it was evident that the fleet-footed 200 pounders were outclassed, and that a crushing defeat was surely to follow their advent into the arena. The decisions of umpire, Joe Nissen, met with general approval. On the whole it was a great victory for the boys and the older gentleman are now fully convinced that they have forgotten the game. The score was 14 to 8.

Dr. Spooner and son, Lloyd, left on Tuesday for Bridgen, Ontario. The doctor was called to be at the bedside of his nephew, Talbert Spooner, who is a sufferer from heart trouble Chances for his recovery are very poor.

On Monday evening the citizens of our town held a meeting to determine whether or no Klemme should celebrate. There seemed to be quite a strong sentiment against celebrating and in consequence the probabilities are that the glorious Fourth will not be celebrated here. Unless an undivided effort on the part of our business men to make the occasion a success can be had, there would be no need of trying to observe the day.

The carpenters who have the contract for the erection of Aug. Lau's elevator are now idle on account of the failure of the lumber to arrive. This elevator when completed will be one of the largest on this line of the Rock Island and will be very handily arranged all the modern conveniences having been purchased. The demensions of the main building will be 48x28, 35 ft. high. This will enable Mr. Lau to handle his grain business better than ever before.

The cold, damp, rainy weather still continues and crops are very backward. A number of our farmers have but little corn planted and the prospects for another corn crop failure here abouts are good.

Noah Shaw has again taken up a temporary residence in Klemme. He is employed by Bogges & Younglove who have the contract for the erection of August Lau & Sons new elevator. He has numerous friends here who were much joyed to behold his smiling face again.

Britt has finally laid down in the court house fight and the relocation of the county seat to Garner is an assured fact. Garner will certainly have a "reraw" when they move the records this fall.

County Convention.
Missed last week.

At the republican county convention which was held at Garner on Friday, Dr. A. J. Cole, of Britt, was allowed to select his delegation to go to the Senatorial convention. In the representative contest, O. K. Maben was the successful candidate on the seventh ballot and he too was allowed to select his delegation. The convention was an harmonious one, and the business of the convention was done up with precision. John Wichman, of Garner, withdrew from the senatorial fight on account of not being able to get a solid delegation at home and the fight was taken up by A. D. White of Goodell. Mr. White had no intention of going after the nomination until late in the day of the convention and made an excellent showing when the lateness of the day is considered. In the convention he received 43 votes and 51 would have landed for him the Hancock delegation. Each of the nominees were called for. and responded by very appropriate speeches. The Ell township delegation fared well and Chas. Gruetzmacher was chosen by Mr. Maben as one of the delegates to the representative convention and F. A. Arnold was chosen as a delegate to the state convention. Everybody seemed pleased with the result of the convention and each seemed to resolve to work for the furtherance of republican principles untiringly.

CHANGE OF LIFE.

Some sensible advice to women passing through this trying period.

The painful and annoying symptoms experienced by most women at this period of life are easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is especially designed to meet the needs of woman's system at the trying time of change of life.

It is no exaggeration to state that Mrs. Pinkham has over 5000 letters like the following proving the great value of her medicine at such times.

"I wish to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her medicine has done for me. My trouble was change of life. Four years ago my health began to fail, my head began to grow dizzy, my eyes pained me, and at times it seemed as if my back would fail me, had terrible pains across the kidneys. Hot flashes were very frequent and trying. A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it and am to-day free from those troubles. I cannot speak in high enough terms of the medicine. I recommend it to all and wish every suffering woman would give it a trial."—BELLA ROSS, 88 Montclair Ave., Roslindale, Mass.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Minnesota Man's Discovery.

Adrian, Minn., June 1st.—Phillip Doyle of this place says he has found out a medicine that will cure any case of Kidney Trouble. As Mr. Doyle was himself very sick for a long time, with this painful disease, and is now, apparently, as well as ever, his statement carries the confirmation of personal experience.

The remedy that cured Mr. Doyle is called Dodd's Kidney Pills.

In speaking of the pills, Mr. Doyle says:

"In regard to Dodd's Kidney Pills, they are certainly a wonderful medicine—the best that I have ever taken.

"I was very bad for a long time with Kidney Trouble and could get nothing to help me till I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I used altogether about ten boxes, and I can say emphatically that I am completely cured. I am entirely well, without a sympton of Kidney Trouble left.

"I can heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone who is suffering with Kidney Trouble, for they made me all right.

"I have advised several of my friends to try them, and not one has been disappointed."

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, May 30, 1903.

F. W. Cherry has announced the sale of the Des Moines & Southern railroad to A. B. Stickney. It was commonly understood in railroad circles that Mr. Stickney has arranged to dispose of the property to the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. Regarding this Mr. Cherry said he knew nothing. He stated, however, that the sale was made to Mr. Stickney personally and not to the Chicago, Great Western. It is learned that Mr. Stickney, Mr. Cherry and President Harris of the "Q" met in St. Paul a few days ago, had dinner together and discussed railroad projects together. It is also known that Mr. Cherry and Mr. Harris met in Chicago just prior to the St. Paul conference. Superintendent W. H. Hill of Burlington, who took the place of Mr. Bechtel on the "Q," was in the city and saw Mr. Cherry and held a long conference with T. N. Hooper, Mr. Stickney's confidential agent in this section. If the "Q" should build the Des Moines & Southern, Mr. Hill, who is a nephew of J. J. Hill, the magnate of the Burlington property, would superintend it. It is also commonly understood by railroad men that Mr. Stickney and J. J. Hill are very close together, that they have an alliance in terminal matters at St. Paul and that they held long conferences in that city last week. Mr. Stickney absolutely denied that he had any knowledge of the disposal of the property to the "Q" and expressed doubt about it. He denied that his visits with Mr. Harris and with Mr. Cherry had anything whatever to do with the disposal of the road to the "Q" officers. He admitted that at the lunches eaten together by him and Mr. Harris at St. Paul and Chicago, the railroad matter was talked over but nothing was brought to a head and no offer was made him by Mr. Harris.

The severity of the recent tornadoes and wind storms in this state, commencing with that of May 22, is best evidenced by the fact that one company, the old Iowa Mutual Tornado association has already received over seven hundred claims for losses in these storms—and still they come. This company already has a dozen adjusters at work in the field, and is compelled to increase its adjusting force. We are assured by the officers of this company that every one of these losses will be paid within 48 hours after a completed proof is received in the office. On Monday last this association received 302 applications for new insurance and its risks are now $101,000,000. This is the company of which A. N. Buckman is president and J. B. Herriman, secretary, 709-10 Crocker building, Des Moines, Iowa

It appears probable the veterans of Iowa will go to the National G. A. R. encampment at San Francisco, prepared to support the movement for a joint and national reunion of the Blue and Gray, to be held in St. Louis at the time of the world's fair in 1894. The movement for this reunion was first started a week ago by the Oklahoma G. A. R., which caused the matter to be taken up with the exposition management. President Francis and the directors, according to advices received by Secretary Conaway here, are earnestly in favor of the reunion, which it is believed will be the means of bringing many thousands of union and confederate veterans together. Dr. Geo. A. Newman, adjutant of the department of Iowa, when asked concerning the proposed reunion, said he thought such an event would be a very appropriate thing to do. In the territory known now as the Louisiana Purchase there were soldiers of both sides during the war of the rebellion, and the exposition commemorating the purchase was rapidly bringing these people into closer fellowship.

One of the strange freaks of the cyclone in South Des Moines was reported from near the Getchell residence in the path of the storm Three fine trees had been standing near the house. The storm struck them. Two were twisted and broken almost squarely off about ten feet from the ground, while the third seemed to receive all the force of the twister in a downward pressure, and instead of being broken was driven fully eighteen inches down into the solid earth. The roots of the tree were snapped and the earth about its base was carried down with it

Dr. F. M. Powell, superintendent of the institution for feeble-minded at Glenwood, has written a letter to the board of control, telling in detail of the recent storm there. His statements as to the injured correspond with reports already given out, that there were two killed and a few slightly injured. He puts the damage at a high figure and says it will reach $61,500.

Among the numerous improvements at the Iowa State Fair grounds at Des Moines this year will be a new judging pavilion for the swine department Owing to the constantly increasing number of hogs displayed at the fair it has become necessary to provide this pavilion. The contract for the construction of it has been let to C C. Christy of Des Moines. The new building will be large and convenient ly arranged and there will be ample room for showing the swine

The thug—"Say ain't youse de guy wot lectured about 'Civic Morality' last night and said that only a blackguard would carry a gun?" Victim—"Y-yes! That was I." Thug—"Well, I won't bodder youse den. Yer a good pal o' mine. So long."

Ascum—"Another baby, and a girl this time, eh? How does it make you feel to have a daughter?' Popley—"Great! One of the first things you think about is how a foreign nobleman will come courting her some day and how you'll turn him down good and proper."

"I'm perfectly willing," said Senator Boodle, "to comply with any reasonable request of my constituents." "Well," replied the spokesman, "there is only one thing we'd like you to do that you've never done before, and which no one will expect you to do again." "And that is?" "Die, if you please."

GRIPPE HURT KIDNEYS.

The lingering results of La Grippe remain with the kidneys for a long time. They suffer from over exertion and the heavy drugs of Grippe medicines. Doan's Kidney Pills overcome this condition.

AURORA, NEW MEXICO. — I received the free sample of Doan's Kidney Pills which I ordered for a girl nine years old that was suffering with bed wetting, and she improved very fast. The pills acted directly on the bladder in her case and stopped the trouble. J. C. LUCERO.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — My husband received the sample of Doan's Kidney Pills and has taken two more boxes and feels like a new man. He is a fireman on the Grand Trunk R. R., and the work is hard on the kidneys. MRS. GEO. GIFFORD.

PLINY, W. VA. — The free trial of Doan's Kidney Pills acted so well with me, I wrote Hooff, the druggist, at Point Pleasant, to send me three boxes, with the result I have gained in weight, as well as entirely rid of my kidney trouble. My water had become very offensive and contained a white sediment and cloudy. I would have to get up six and seven times during the night, and then the voiding would dribble and cause frequent attempts, but, thanks to Doan's Kidney Pills, they have regulated all that, and I cannot praise them too much. JAS. A. LANHAM.

Aching backs are eased. Hip, back, and loin pains overcome. Swelling of the limbs and dropsy signs vanish.

They correct urine with brick dust sediment, high colored, pain in passing, dribbling, frequency, bed wetting. Doan's Kidney Pills remove calculi and gravel. Relieve heart palpitation, sleeplessness, headache, nervousness, dizziness.

Mothers, do you know that a perfectly healthy baby never cries. When the little one does cry there's something wrong, and generally it's the stomach. Paregoric, Soothing Syrups, Cordials, Teething Syrups and Pain Killers contain opium and morphine. Don't use them. They are harmful—costly too Such drugs constipate and derange the digestive organs.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

is pleasant to take, augments and supplies the natural digestive ferment, acts as a gentle laxative, makes and keeps babies in health and good humor. A trial will convince you.

GENTLEMEN: For constipation I would cheerfully recommend Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. My little girl, aged eight months, had been troubled since birth with constipation, and reading of your valuable medicine I concluded to try it, and I can recommend it highly to mothers for immediate relief. Only two ten-cent bottles cured my baby.

A Natural Question.

The youngster in the art gallery looked long and earnestly at the painting. Then he read the inscription. "Do you like it?" asked his mother. "Oh, I like it well enough," he answered, "but I don't understand it." "What is it you don't understand?" "Why, it says, 'Wild Horses—After Rosa Bonheur.' I see the horses all right, but where's the girl they're after?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Flaw in the Reasoning.

Mr. and Mrs. Chuckster were engaged in one of their frequent arguments. "Now, Amanda, see here——" "Get that right, Oliver," she interrupted. "The proper form, as you will see if you think a moment, is 'look here.'" "What's the difference?" he demanded. "You can't look without seeing, can you?" "Oh, yes, you can. Everybody says you and I look alike, but it's a notorious fact that we don't see alike."

Sleep Keeps Him Young.

One of the youngest looking old men in the English house of commons is Sir John Gorst. He is now getting on to 70, but he has a brisk step, his complexion is ruddy and he speaks with the same brightness, self-possession and acidity which he displayed in the '80s. He attributes his extraordinary youthfulness to the fact that he has for years followed the advice given him by the late Sir Andrew Clark, the celebrated physician, and has, under all circumstances, remained nine hours of every twenty-four in bed.

Bets on Coming Elections.

Frederick H. Brooks of New York handled over $1,000,000 betting money in the presidential campaign of 1896 and nearly as much in 1900. He now announces that certain influential men are ready to bet $100,000 on the Tammany candidate for mayor, no matter who he may be, as against Mayor Low. The election for mayor of New York will be held next November. Mr. Brooks also says that should Judge Parker be nominated for president by the Democrats he (Brooks) will be ready to bet $50,000 that the candidate named will carry New York state.

Feed Your Cows In August.

Nearly every summer, along the latter part of July and August, this state is afflicted with a period of dry weather and pastures become short. This effects the producer of milk more than any other class of farmers. and the production of milk in these two months is usually about half what it was the mouths before. When the cows fall away in their flow of milk on account of the dry feed it is impossible to get them back to a full flow again, and so the loss is carried on into winter. It will pay every producer of milk to provide for some green feed that he can supply his cows in late summer to make up for the short pasturage. Nothing in Iowa will produce like corn or is so easely handled. A few acres of some variety of corn, planted thick, and fed to the cows in late July and August will return more value to the farmer than those acres which he allows to grow to maturity. It is entirely practicable to increase by 15 to 30 per cent the total amount of milk the cows will give if the flow of milk can be kept up through the period of the year when Iowa pastures are almost dry and short. There is money in it.

Another feed stuff that may be used, either green or as a cured fodder, is sorghum. It should be planted at the rate of 100 pounds per acre, so that it will grow thick and fine, and if seeded on a good seed bed free from weeds will make five or more tons of cured fodder that is very palatable and nutritous for feeding cows and young stock. The seed is usually high in price, and the farmer can and should raise his own seed. Sorghum fodder has about the same feeding value as timothy hay and is very palatable.

Rape is not a suitable feed for cows, since it gives the milk and butter a rank, disagreeable taste and so lowers its selling value. It sometimes causes bloat in cattle and sheep and is valuable in Iowa as a pasture for pigs and sheep.

"Antics of the Ants,' by W. H. Scou on and Geo. D. Barnard, is a two step that will be popular in an instant. The third is a masterpiece by W. G. Yule. entitled "A Dream of the Ballet." "I'm after the one who married a girl from Cincinnati.' "Two of them married girls from Cincinnati." "Great heavens! Which one is coming here to join the embassy staff?" "The Marquis De Chambrun. "I mean his wife." "He hasn't any wife; he is a bachelor."

CREST OF FLOOD WAS 60 FEET HIGH

Like a Great Tidal Wave It Swept Down on Pacolet, South Carolina.

OVER FIFTY LIVES WERE LOST

Property Loss By the Destructive Flood Is Now Estimated at $3,500,000—Loss in Clifton District Is Appalling.

Spartansburg, S. C., June 7.—A torrential rain storm visited this region between last midnight and dawn yesterday, resulting in general devastation and destruction of life and property. All the bridges and trestles of the main line of the Southern railway were washed away. The greatest destruction of life and property occurred at the Pacolet and Clifton and Glendale cotton mills.

So many wires are down and communication of all sort is so thoroughly demoralized that it is impossible to form any definite calculation of the loss of life in yesterday's cloud burst and the resultant floods. The mortality list may go to 150, but the more conservative estimates place it somewhere around forty or fifty. The total property loss in the entire section laid waste by the storm is likely to aggregate $2,000,000. The loss at Pacolet is placed at $1,000,000, summarized as follows:

Mills number 1 and 2 are demolished, 28,000 spindles are wrecked, 3,500 bales of cotton, $200,000 worth of cloth goods in the company's store damaged, grist mill, cotton gin, postoffice, shoe shop, blacksmith shop, dental office, livery stable and Presbyterian church all washed away. More than 500 people are homeless and 4,000 out of employment.

There was no wind and no damage by lightning, only by water. This fell in veritable torrents, converting the surface of the earth into a lake of raging water. Rivers overflowed their banks to heights never before known; creeks became rivers and small rivulets roaring torrents, wiping out everything in their course. Railroad bridges were torn from stone and iron piers, cotton mills were crushed like straw before the flood, and grist mills and innumerable smaller industries and cottages were washed away by the angry waters.

At a late hour tonight scores of people were clinging to the branches of trees at Clifton and could not be reached. Unless help comes to them soon it is feared that many will fall into the water and drown.

Columia, S. D., June 8.—Though the great flood of water is passing on to the to the ocean laden with debris of every description and the swollen streams are subsiding in the Piedmont region, the losses of life and property are increasing, and a conservative estimate tonight places the property loss at not less than $3,500,000. The most conservative estimate of the dead is 80. At Clifton alone, 100 operatives are missing from the village and all are believed to have been lost. During yesterday dead bodies were washed ashore here and there occasionally a dismembered limb would float to the banks.

At Converse, 13 dead are reported and 41 at Clifton No. 2. At Clifton No. 2, twenty-six houses are destroyed; 13 at Clifton No. 1 and 20 at Clifton No. 3.

At Converse mills, the newest of Clifton's cluster, the walls were washed away and the looms left standing. The engine room bricks were carried three miles down stream, demolishing the operatives' houses on the way.

Reports from the Seneca river, near the Georgia line, are better tonight. The Blue Ridge road between Seneca and Anderson is intact and the Newry mill is not badly damaged and will be running tomorrow.

Charlotte, N. C., June 8.—Yesterday's developments in the devastated mill settlements at Pacolet and Clifton, on the Pacolet river in South Carolina, do not lessen the horrors of the situation there, although it is believed that the loss of life will not exceed fifty people. The destruction of property by the flood was far-reaching and even yet a number of mill points, where it is feared damage has been done, cannot be heard from on account of the prostration of telephone and telegraph wires. The town of Union, S. C., is totally isolated. The Lockhart mills, located below Pacolet, for whose safety fears have been expressed, are but slightly damaged.

Following is a summary of the damage to the cotton mills:

Pacolet, Nos. 1 and 2 totally destroyed; Pacolet, No. 3, badly damaged. These mills operated sixty thousand spindles and 2,200 looms.

Clifton mill No. 3, at Converse, 51,000 spindles, totally destroyed.

Dexter mills, 30,500 spindles, half destroyed.

Clifton mills, 27,500 spindles, half destroyed.

Glendale mills, badly damaged.

Pacolet warehouse totally destroyed; 3,500 bales of cotton and 4,000 bales of yarn swept down stream.

At Pacolet a Presbyterian church hotel and a number of mill cottages were entirely demolished. The property damage is in the neighborhood of half a million dollars.

KANSAS IS NO LONGER A HOBO PARADISE.

MACHEN INDICTED AND GIVES BONDS

Former Superintendent of Free Delivery Is Held By Grand Jury at Washington.

MACHEN DENIES THE CHARGES

Gives His Explanation of the Passing of Several Checks From Groff Brother, Makers of Box Fasteners, to Him.

Washington, June 6.—The grand jury returned a true bill against Mr. Machen, former superintendent of rural mail delivery.

Machen is charged with illegally receiving $18,987.75. Mr. Machen was in court with his attorney and immediately gave bond, a number of prominent citizens going his surety.

The indictment against Mr. Machen embraces nine counts and consists of twenty-five typewritten pages. It follows closely the form of the warrant upon which Mr. Machen was originally arrested, reciting his connection with the postoffice department, his duties in connection with the purchase of supplies, etc., and the fact of the sale of letter box fasteners to the government by Groff Brothers upon his advice and recommendation. The grand jurors upon their oath find that on June 30, 1900, Mr. Machen "with intent to have his decision and action as superintendent of free delivery in regard to a purchase of Groff fasteners, influenced thereby, did ask of the Groff Brothers a promise that they would pay to him 40 per cent of any sum which might be received by them thereafter from the United States through the postoffice department in payment of such fasteners, the purchase of which might be procured upon Mr. Machen's advice and did receive the promise of the Groff Brothers in accordance therewith." The indictment then recites that in pursuance of this collusive understanding Mr. Machen received on various date specified in the original warrants the sums stated at the time, aggregating in all about $20,000.

In discussing the case with his friends, Mr. Machen says that certain checks which it is maintained were sent to him in payment of his profits in the Groff fastener, and which have been secured by the postoffice inspectors, were sent him by his business partner, George E. Lorenz, of Toledo, Ohio, and formerly postmaster of that city.

Mr. Machen claims that his partnership with Lorenz was a strictly legitimate one, and that the checks transmitted to him by Lorenz were in connection with mining business which the firm conducted. Although the amount of these checks cannot be ascertained, Mr. Machen says that the one for the largest amount represents a personal loan to himself from Lorenz.

Mr. Machen further states to his friends that he was not a partner of the Groff Bros. concern, and that he did not receive any of the profits from the sale of the letter box fastener to the government. He says that no wrongdoing will be proved against him, and that the only possible cause there may be for criticism of his administration so far as the Groff fastener is concerned is that the price paid for the article may be excessive. This was necessary, he maintains, because the article was a patented affair, and the larger price paid for it was in line with the universal practice in the purchase of articles which are patented and where there is no competition.

DISASTER AT SEA.

Steamer Liban Goes Down With Over a Hundred Lives.

Marseilles, June 8.—A terrible shipping disaster occurred a little distance from this port at noon yesterday, when two passenger steamers, the Insulaire and the Liban, both belonging to the Fraissenet Steamship company of Marseilles, came into collision. The Liban sank and over one hundred of her passengers and crew perished.

The steamer Liban left Marseilles in the morning on her regular passenger trip to Bastia, Corsica, and was run down and sunk by the Insulaire off the Maire islands. The collision was witnessed from the pilot boat Blechamp, which was about two miles distant. The Blechamp immediately repaired to the spot to render assistance. The force of the collision had cut a great hole in the Liban's side and she already was making water rapidly. Her captain saw the only chance was to run the steamer aground and the Liban was headed full speed for the shore; but within seventeen minutes of the collision and while still in deep water the forepart of the steamer plunged beneath the waves and a few minutes later she had entirely disappeared.

In the meantime the Blechamp, the steamer Balkan, also belonging to the Fraissenet company, and other vessels, had drawn near the sinking ship and were making desperate efforts to rescue those on board. The Blechamp picked up forty persons, many of whom were at the point of exhaustion. The Balkan rescued thirty-seven passengers, and up to the present it is known that in addition to the passengers, seventeen of the crew were also saved.

Officers of the steamer Balkan describe the scene just before the Liban disappeared as a terrible one. As the vessel was sinking she was inclined to such an angle that her masts struck the water, making the work of rescue most difficult. Many human beings were clinging to the foundering vessel and made despairing cries as she went down. At the same time the boilers exploded, intensifying the horrors. For a few minutes the victims were seen struggling in the sea, then the waves closed over them and all was silence. Of about 200 passengers who were aboard the Liban it is feared that at least half were drowned.

THREATEN TO SPREAD PLAGUE.

Said To Have Secured Bacilli, Which Will Be Used.

London, June 4.—The Sofia correspondent of the Daily News alleges that the Macedonian revolutionary leaders have obtained possession of a large quantity of Indian plague bacilli which they threaten to use to cause an outbreak of the plague if their demands are not conceded.

The correspondent quotes the leaders as saying that if within eight days after their warning the great powers do not guarantee the abrogation of the Berlin treaty then "We may die, but we will not die alone, for there shall follow us into the grave myriads of the people of Europe, the continent which has robbed us of our liberty." It is stated that the determination of the leaders is to infect Constantinople, Salonica and even Berlin.

THE LION'S WHELP

A Story of Cromwell's Time

BY AMELIA E. BARR

"Now, indeed, you pierce my heart. You at his mercy! It is an intolerable shame! It will make me cry out, even when I sleep! I shall die of it. You! You to be at his mercy—at the mercy of that Puritan braggart. Oh, I cannot endure it!"

"You see that I endure it very complacently, Mata. The man behaved as a gentleman and a soldier. I have even taken a liking to him. I have also paid back his kindness; we are quits, and as soldiers, friends. And I can assure you no one's honor suffered, mine least of all."

But Matilda was hard to comfort. Her last interview with her lover was saddened and troubled by this disagreement.

This, then, was the end of the visit from which she had expected so much; and one sad gray morning in November they reached London.

Matilda said to herself in the first hours of her return that she would not see Jane, but as the day wore on she changed her mind. So she wrote and asked her to come, and Jane answered the request in person, at once. Her admiration for her friend's beautiful gowns and laces and jewels, and her interest in Matilda's descriptions of the circumstances in which they were worn, was so genuine, that Matilda had forgotten her relation to Lord Neville, when the irritating name was mentioned.

"Did you see Lord Neville in Paris?" Jane asked.

"No," Matilda answered sharply. "I did not see him. He called one day, and had a long talk with Sir Thomas but aunt had a headache, and I had more delightful company. He prevented my seeing the Queen of Bohemia on my return, because he offered to attend to my uncle's business at The Hague for him, and for this interference I do not thank Lord Neville."

"Nor I," answered Jane. "Had he not gone to The Hague he might have been in London by this time."

Jane had risen as she said these words, and was tying on her bonnet, and Matilda watched her with a curious interest. "I was wondering," she said slowly, "if you will be glad to marry Cluny Neville and go away to Scotland with him."

"Oh, yes," Jane answered, her eyes shining, her mouth wreathed in smiles, her whole being expressing her delight in such an anticipation. Matilda made no further remark, but when Jane had closed the door behind her, she sat down thoughtfully by the fire, and stirring together the red embers, sighed rather than said:

"Why do people marry and bring up sons and daughters? This girl has been loved to the uttermost by her father and mother and brothers, and she will gladly leave them all to go off with this young Scot. She will call it 'Sacrifice for Love's sake;' I call it pure selfishness. Yet I am not a whit whiter than she. I would have stayed in Paris with Rupert, though my good uncle was in danger. I think I will go to my evening service," and as she rose for her Common Prayer, she was saying under her breath, "We have left undone those things which we ought to have done, and we have done those things which we ought not to have done. And there is no health in us."

CHAPTER XI.

Oliver Protector.

The popular discontent with the rapid and radical reforms of the saints' Parliament was not confined to the Royalists; the nation, without regard to party, was bitterly incensed and alarmed. Cromwell was no exception; the most conservative of men, he also grew angry and restless when he saw the reign of the saints beginning in earnest.

Soon the anger outside the Parliament House rose to fury. Doubtless Cromwell had foreseen this crisis. Certainly a large number of the members were of his way of thinking, and on the twelfth of December, Col. Sydenham rose, and accusing the members of wishing to put a Mosaic code in place of the Common Law of England—of depreciating a regular ministry (for what need of one, if all men could prophesy?) and of opposing learning and education, he declared the salvation of the nation lay in resigning the trust committed to them into the hands of the Lord General Cromwell. The motion was seconded by Sir Charles Wolseley. The Speaker left the chair, and followed by a majority of the members, went to Whitehall, and there and then they wrote out their resignation.

No serious opposition was made. Some thirty of the members remained in the House "to protest," but Col. Goff entering with a file of musketeers, the argument was quickly closed. Three days after this event a new Council of State resolved that his Excellency be chosen Lord Protector of the three nations, and on the sixteenth of December be so installed in Westminster Hall.

"And you would think that he had been publicly scorned instead of publicly chosen," said Israel to his wife. "He looks miserable; he is silent and downcast, and talks much to himself. Yet he is in his right place, and the only man in England who can save us from anarchy. Martha, his Excellency and her Highness desire your company, and that of Jane, to the ceremony. You will go?"

"I had better stay at home, Israel. I cannot 'Your Highness' Elizabeth Cromwell. Jane will go."

"And you, too, Martha. I wish it."

"I never go against your wishes, Israel—at least not often."

So it happened that on the sixteenth of December, Mrs. Swaffham and Jane were dressing for Whitehall. Mrs. Swaffham was nervous and irritable; nervous, because she feared her gown was not as handsome as it ought to be; irritable, because she felt that circumstances were going to control her behaviour, whether she approved or not. Jane was unable to encourage or cheer her mother; she was herself the most unhappy maiden in London that day. For eighteen days she had been forced to accept the fact that Cluny was at least eighteen days behind all probable and improbable delays. She had not received a line from him since he left Paris; no one had. He had apparently vanished as completely as a stone dropped into mid-ocean. She had been often at Jevery House, and during two of her visits had managed to see Sir Thomas and ask "if he had any intelligence from Lord Neville?" On her first inquiry he answered her anxiously; on his second his reply showed some anger.

"He offered voluntarily to take charge of Lady Jevery's jewels and to collect my money at The Hague; and unless he was certain of his ability to do these things safely, he ought not to have sought the charge."

And with these words there entered into Jane's heart a suspicion that hurt her like a sword-thrust. She found herself saying continually, "It is im-much credit for their work. They realized a nice lot of money from their efforts.

After all had partaken of ice cream they betook themselves to the show grounds and there beheld a good, clean vaudeville entertainment. The members of the German Medicine company were the artists and gave a good show. This company will be here the balance of the week.

Then came the dance, and a large crowd congregate to finish a day of rare amusement. and lingered here until the wee small hours. The Floyd Williams orchestra, of four pieces, furnished the dancers music. The music was fine, the order good and everybody enjoyed themselves.

The day was a grand success and no mistake. Perfect order prevailed throughout the day and night. When Klemm starts to do anything you may make up your mind it will be done right, and come early and stay late and be prepared to enjoy yourselves. The day has gone but it will be remembered by those present as one worth coming miles to participate in.

"I fear not. They would have told me at once. I haven't seen much of them. There were lots of things undone, and badly done, to look after."

"If Doctor Verity gives you any opportunity will you speak about Cluny, mother?"

"You know I will. He and others will, maybe, have time for a word of kindness now. Now Cromwell has got his way, there will be only Cromwell to please, and surely a whole city full can manage that."

"I don't suppose he has ever thought of Cluny being so long over time."

"Not he! He has had things far closer to him to look after."

"But now?"

"Now he will inquire after the lad. Doctor Verity must speak to him. Dear Jane, do you suppose I don't see how you are suffering? I do, my girl, and I suffer with you. But even your father thinks we are worrying ourselves for nothing. He says Cluny will walk in some day and tell his own story—nothing worse than a fit of ague or fever, or even a wound from some street pad; perhaps a heavy snowstorm, or the swampy Netherlands under water. Men can't fight the elements, or even outwit them, dear. Mother is with you, Jane, don't you doubt that," and she stepped forward and clasped the girl to her breast, Jane's supposition that Doctor Verity would be with her father and that their talk would be only of Cromwell, was correct. Mrs. Swaffham found the two men smoking at the fireside, and their conversation was of the Man and the Hour.

"I am sorry for Oliver Cromwell. Such a load as he has shouldered! Can he bear it?" said Israel.

"Through God's help, yes; and ten times over, yes! He is a great man," answered the Doctor.

"I think more of measures than of men," continued Israel.

"Very good. But something depends on the men, just as in a fire something depends on the grate," said the Doctor. "Oliver will do his work, and he will do it well, and then go to Him who sent him. Verily, I believe he will hear the 'Well done' of his Master."

"And then?"

"The Commonwealth will be over. The soul of it will have departed—can it live afterwards?"

"If I survive the Puritan government," said Israel, "I will join the pilgrims who have gone over the great seas."

"I will go with you, Israel, but we will not call ourselves 'pilgrims.' No indeed! No men are less like pilgrims than they who go, not to wander about, but to build homes and cities and found republics in the land they have been led to. They are citizens, not pilgrims."

At these words Mrs. Swaffham, who had listened between sleeping and waking, roused herself thoroughly. "Israel," she said, "I will not go across seas. It is not likely. Swaffham is our very own, and we will stay in Swaffham."

FLOOD DAMAGES REACH MILLIONS

Public and Private Levees in Illinois Yield to the Pressure.

WATER OVERFLOWS RICH LAND

Attempts to Fill the Gaps With Sand Bags and Other Material Prove Useless—Inhabitants Flee to High Ground to Save Their Lives.

St. Louis, Mo., June 8.—Millions of dollars of damage has been caused by the inundating of tens of thousands of acres of the richest farming land in Illinois by the breaking of levees along the Mississippi river. Still higher water is certain, and the loss may be doubled or trebled before the waters recede.

The Sny levee, the guardian of some of the most fertile land in Illinois, is broken in a number of places and the flood is sweeping over scores of farms. Crops have been ruined and farm buildings carried away.

Sny Levee Breaks.

The Sny is the most important levee on the north end of the river and is seventy miles long. In some places it is twenty-eight feet high and eighty feet across at the base. It incloses a fertile farming section from three to seven miles wide, containing over 100,000 acres.

There are several towns within the district, the population of which is probably 10,000. Many of them remain, and loss of life is certain. This district has not been overflowed since 1888.

The Madison levee, north of the Merchants' bridge, also has broken, endangering the lives and property of the citizens of Granite City. Large forces of men are at work in an attempt to fill the gap, but much damage has been done already by the raging waters.

Government Aid Is Asked.

A telephone message was received from Waterloo, Ill., forty miles below St. Louis, situated in the lowlands several miles from the river, saying that the flood has spread to that point and a levee erected for just such an emergency is in danger of being washed away. Government aid is asked to strengthen the levee and avert the threatened inundation of the town.

The Mississippi has broken through private levees at two points below Oldenburg and is flooding valuable farms in the bottoms. Several hundred farmers are vainly seeking to fill the gaps with brush, planks and sandbags.

Every family in the bottoms protected by the levee, which is a private one, erected to keep out the backwater from above, is fleeing to the high ground at Mitchell, which offers the best protection in that section.

Finds Weak Spots.

The flood forced a passage through the levee at Madison, Ill., just north of St. Louis. This levee is fifteen miles long, and for days men have been at work endeavoring to strengthen it, but the river found its weak point and the water broke through like a geyser. Carloads of bags of sand and all other available material were hurried to the break and dumped in, but the force of the flood washed out the filling and the break constantly widened.

West Granite, a town of 2,000 population, is located in a depression between the levee and a railroad embankment. Ample warning had been sounded and the inhabitants had sought safety when the deluge came. It is believed all escaped, but the town is under water.

Like Old Venice.

The streets of Venice, Ill., almost opposite St. Louis, are waterways and the inhabitants go about in boats. Venice was the first town in this vicinity to feel the full force of this flood, and it has been under water for two days.

In St. Louis the buildings along the river front have practically been abandoned, as the first floors are over a foot under water, which stands tonight two feet deep on the top of the steamboat levee.

In South St. Louis fully 100 families living near the mouth of the River Des Peres were forced to leave their houses by the advancing water, and many families living in houseboats fled to land for shelter.

GIVES GOVERNMENT DECISION

Second-Class Mail Goes Against Publishing House.

Washington, June 8.—The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia decided the second-class mail matter cases in favor of the government, reversing the decision of the lower court. The case was that of the Postmaster General vs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. and involved the admission to the mails as second-class matter of certain publications.

FRAUD IS ALLEGED IN THE SALE OF LAND

Government Inspectors Claim to Have Unearthed Gigantic Swindles in Connection With Timber Deals.

Columbus, O., June 8.—Indictments have been returned by the United States grand jury against John A. Cobb of Bainbridge, O., and W. H. H. Miller, S. E. Struble and G. W. J. Woltz of Newark, O., for misuse of the mails in connection with alleged fraudulent land deals Several other men who have not yet been arrested are under indictment on a similar charge.

The government inspectors claim to have unearthed land swindles of gigantic proportions which, they say, were carried on by men operating in widely separated localities. Large tracts of timber land for which fraudulent deeds were given to purchasers were offered for sale in Tennessee, Kentucky, West Virginia, Missouri, Texas and Michigan.

THINK STEPSON KILLED HER

Arthur Lyon of Shoals, Ind., Is Wanted for Murder.

Shoals, Ind., June 8.—Investigation of the murder of Mrs. Joel Lyon has resulted in Arthur Lyon, her stepson, being accused of the murder. He had threatened to take her life and while she was at home alone he is alleged to have entered the house and fired at her. Mrs. Lyons fled from the house pursued by her assailant, who followed her through the yard into the barn lot, where she fell dead. Two bullets entered her body and two were embedded in her head. Mrs. Lyons was a niece of County Treasurer Joseph Cannon and a sister-in-law of County Assessor Henry Montgomery. Young Lyon has disappeared and a reward has been offered for his arrest.

A Gala Day

Thursday was the day set for the opening ball game of the season and by the noon hour the a goodly number from the surrounding towns and country were here. The ball game scheduled was between Belmond and Klemme and both teams seemed to be in splendid form. The day was rather chilly but despite this fact upwards of 500 people gathered on the diamond all of whom at the close of the game departed feeling that they had witnessed one of the most spicy games ever played in this county. The game was called at 2:30 with the Belmond team at the bat and by a series of lucky taps and blunders on the part of Klemme they succeeded in circling the diamond twice.

The home boys rallied however, and for the next eight innings Belmond succeeded in getting but another pair of those much sought long marks. From the first inning on, real ball was played by both the visitors and the home team and a game that no team need feel ashamed of was played.

Belmond's battery done nice work as did also the balance of the team. Klemme's young wonder, Frank Kluckhohn, was there with his arm and the way he and the ever present Joe Nissen, done their share of the the game, demonstrated that they are not to be outclassed, for amateurs, in Iowa. But two safe hits were made off Kluckhohn. Frank had speed and twirlers to spare, and when Joe said "shoot em" he shot. We are not swelled out of proportion over our battery on account of this one victory but we will lay down for no battery (outside of professionals) in northern Iowa. The balance of the team are each to be congratulated for the support they gave the battery and although the first game of the season each one knew his play and when to make it. In the individual familiarly known as "Nick" Ell, Klemme has the makings of another wonder as a pitcher, and the last two men who came to bat in the ninth he retired in one, two, three order. He pitched a part of the last inning.

The umpires done well, but of course, came in for their share of cussing. Manager Frank Gruetzmacher proved to be the right man in the right place and his hard work in the behalf of the ball boys is much appreciated. M. H. Crissman, "the" rooter was there with his cain. He talked continuously during the entire game—not in an insulting manner, but displayed the large amount of wit and humor which is in his make up, Criss at some time has certainly kissed the "Blarney Stone."

The ball boys feel very grateful to the business men of the town who so very willingly closed their stores during the game.

The Belmond boys are a gentlemanly lot of fellows. We believe they went home feeling that they had been well treated. The score was 7 to 4 in favor of Klemme.

An ice cream social was held immediately after the ball game the proceeds of which went to the band boys. The promoters of this event were Miss Sadie Kluckhohn, Miss Floy Schaefer, Miss Ione Bartholmew and others and the ladies deserve much credit for their work: They realized a nice lot of money from their efforts.

After all had partaken of ice cream they betook themselves to the show grounds and there beheld a good, clean vaudeville entertainment. The members of the German Medicine company were the artists and gave a good show. This company will be here the balance of the week.

Then came the dance, and a large crowd congregate to finish a day of rare amusement and lingered here until the wee small hours. The Floyd Williams orchestra, of four pieces furnished the dancers music The music was fine, the order good and everybody enjoyed themselves.

The day was a grand success and no mistake. Perfect order prevailed throughout the day and night. When Klemme starts to do anything you may make up your mind it will be done right, and come early and stay late and be prepared to enjoy yourselves. The day has gone but it will be remembered by those present as one worth coming miles to participate in.

WESTERN CANADA'S IMMIGRATION.

Rapid Settlement of the Wheat Fields Lying North of the 49th Parallel.

(From the Chicago Record-Herald.)

"Canada has anticipated a very heavy immigration this year, and she now has figures to show that she is actually getting it in a way to meet all her expectations. In the first four months of this year the doors of the Dominion opened to 40,672 persons, according to a report prepared by the committee on agriculture and colonization of the Canadian parliament. This is almost twice as large as the immigration in the corresponding months last year, and fully three times as large as in 1901, the respective figures being 22,482 and 13,393.

"Most of these newcomers have been attracted by the wheat lands of the Northwest territories. They have moved direct to Winnipeg and they have turned that city into a great camp, in which they have been fitting themselves out for the last stage of their adventure for new homes.

"Of the immigration of this spring a little over a third has come from Great Britain, the figure being 16,457. This is three times as large as the British immigration of the corresponding months of the preceding year, and it is within 2,500 of the number of immigrants that the United States attracted from Great Britain and Ireland in the same period this spring. As to the remainder of the immigration into Canada 13,770 settlers came from the United States, a 50 per cent increase over the preceding year, and 10,445 from Continental Europe, a 40 per cent increase.

"These 40,672 immigrants into Canada may appear trifling in comparison with 297,070 persons who entered the United States in the same period, but they are proportionately more important to the country. Canada's population is one-fifteenth of ours, but her immigration is now two-fifteenths as large as ours. It is worth remembering also that Canada's immigrants are almost entirely Anglo-Saxon and Teutonic races, while our immigration is now two-thirds made up of Romance and Slav elements."

"Speculation is natural as to the future of Canada in her relations to the United States when her Northwest territories are filled up, but the one absolutely certain fact of the near future is that the United States is to have a great competitor in the grain markets of the world."

The above editorial article taken from the columns of the Chicago Record-Herald of May 26th, shows the condition of the Canadian immigration, which as pointed out, has had a constant growth—a marvellously increasing growth—for the past six or seven years, until this year, it is confidently assumed the increase to Canada's population, by way of immigration, will exceed 100,000. This is accounted for by the great agricultural resources which abound there. It is no fairy tale, but the mater-of-fact experience of the tens of thousands bear ample testimony to the wealth and riches in store for all who choose to accept of the opportunities offered.

Those who wish to learn more of the country can secure illustrated atlases, pamphlets, etc., giving full and reliable data issued under government authority, by applying to any of the authorized agents of the Canadian government. These agents whose names appear below will quote you the exceptionally low rates that take you to the free grant lands of Western Canada and render you any other assistance in their power:

STORIETTES.

In New York the other day, ten-year-old Annie Cody dropped the nickel her mother had given her to "be good all day" in the janitor's apartments of a double tenement. She lit a match and crawled under the bed to find it, and through her carelessness, the bed caught fire and the flames soon shot up the airshaft. A neighbor rescued Annie and her smaller sister, the tenants poured out in alarm, a dozen engines came, and the fire was put out after doing damage to the extent of twenty-three hundred dollars. However, the loss was not all in vain, for Annie found her nickel.

To demonstrate the vanity of the Filipino, a Manila reader of the Argonaut cites this curious instance: A wealthy Mestiz-Chino Filipino, who was recently the complainant in a civil cause before the Court of First Instance, on losing, appealed to the supreme court. His native lawyer prepared an elaborate bill of exceptions, which, however, did not prevent the decision of the court going against him. Disgusted with Filipino legal talent, he approached one of the most prominent American attorneys in Manila, and asked him to look the case through carefully to see if he could find some way of bringing it before the supreme court of the United States. He ended the interview by saying that he did not mind the cost nor care much if the decision went against him. His principal object was to be the first Filipino to have a case before the supreme court of the United States, and to have a good excuse to offer his friends when he made his contemplated trip to Washington, D. C., this coming fall.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Some one put out poison last week and killed nearly every dog in the town of Underwood. Among the ones killed was the faithful old dog of Shields Bros., known as "Old Dick." He had been at the store for the past ten or twelve years as a watchdog.

In the presence of a large crowd of people at Sioux City William Van der Burg, a non-union blacksmith, solemnly threatened to kill T. J. Berman, president of the Trades and Labor assembly and business agent of the Union Label league, unless the president of the Trades and Labor assembly abated his efforts to drive the non-union man's customers away. Now Berman has had Van der Burg arrested.

An unknown man about 55 years of age was killed by a Great Western passenger train two miles east of Waterloo. He had been at Dewar during the afternoon peddling silver polish and parties who saw him there stated that he was very deaf, which probably accounts for the accident. A letter addressed to A. J. Bushnell, Mount Vernon, Iowa, was found on his person, which is the only mark of identification yet discovered.

A message from Rock Valley says: This place is afflicted with a peculiar insect plague which is driving men from their work, and is causing great discomfort to man and beast. The insect is somewhat larger than the buffalo gnat and the sting is much worse than either that insect or the most vicious mosquito. Local biologists say that the bug has never been seen here before. Men were compelled to leave work on the depot hotel on account of the attacks of the insect, which kept them from directing their efforts to any other purpose than protection from the troublesome pest.

The wet weather has not caused much immediate suffering in Warren county, but has played havoc with the crops. Those who have been about through the county estimate that only about two-thirds of a crop will be raised. This means a loss of nearly if not quite $750,000. Favorable weather from now on will help matters a great deal by allowing the growth of late forage crops, such as millet and Hungarian. It is doubtful if there will be more than half the usual acreage of corn. The county supervisors say, roughly estimating, that the damages to county bridges will amount to $5,000; and that the road and bridge losses to the townships will aggregate $8,000 more.

George Vandenburg made a determined effort to suicide by drowning in the river at Cedar Rapids and was rescued by Joseph Hula, Jr., clerk at Stark's hotel. Vandenburg and his wife were recently taken to Green Bay, Wis., on the charge of raising a check from $7.50 to $17.50. Vandenburg was released, but his wife is held under $100 bonds. She says she was told that she would be released if she would plead guilty. This she refused to do, and stated that she would serve ten years in prison before she would disgrace her children by pleading guilty to a crime she had not committed, and for which some one was trying to make a scapegoat of herself or her husband. Vandenburg has come back to Cedar Rapids, leaving his wife in custody and his four children among friends. His mind is evidently unsettled.

Secretary Wesley Greene of the state horticultural society is receiving reports from the different counties on the condition of the fruit crop the first of this month. The reports are not so good as those of the first of May, the effects of the cold weather and the rains now beginning to be apparent. Nearly all fruits show a falling off. The following shows the per cent of an average crop as estimated for the first of June: Apples, 72; Pears, 23; Plums, 29; Cherries, 28; Peaches, 30; Grapes, 69; Currants, 39; Gooseberries, 37; Red raspberries, 76; Black raspberries, 76; Blackberries, 91; Strawberries, 92. Mr. Greene says the rains are affecting small fruit adversely in no way except to soften the strawberries. It is expected fungi will be plentiful because of the rains. However, June is the month for fungus growths, and little will be known about them until the July report.

Suit has been commenced in the United States court by Attorney General Knox against the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad for the possession of 5,000 acres of land in the northwestern part of the state which is along the line of the road. The company received this land in 1864, acording to an act of congress. The petition filed in the courts, however, states that the proper government officials did not sign the deed, and therefore the land does not properly belong to the company. This happened years ago, and the company since that time has sold the land or disposed of it in various manners, so that they now own little or none of it. Assistant General State's Attorney Crane when he filed the suit said that the land was worth probably in the neighborhood of $15,000, and that the company had long since lost control of it. It is in various counties along the line, and a large amount of it is what was then known as swamp land. The case will come up for trial at the next term of the United States court at Sioux City.

Elliott Post, a young man 19 years of age, whose home was two miles east of Fonda, was drowned in the Cedar river. He had been swimming with other boys and unknowingly reached a treacherous place in the stream and not being a good swimmer went down. His body was recovered after a four hours' search.

It is now expected that the Hossack case will remain on the docket of the courts in the Fifth district for at least another year, and possibly it will be tried again. It will be recalled that a few weeks ago the board of supervisors of Warren county, where the crime was committed, passed a resolution asking the county attorney of Madison county, who has the case in hand, to not prosecute it further, but to file a motion to dismiss the case. The board also indicated that it would not pay any more bills on account of the Hossack indictment. But two of the judges of the Fifth district, who have heard the testimony, are understood to object strongly to the dismissal of the indictment against Mrs. Hossack and have advised the county atorney of Madison county not to now dismiss the case, but let it remain on the docket indefinitely, in the possibility that new evidence may be discovered. Mrs. Hossack is out on bail.

At Des Moines a few days ago, while returning in a carriage from flood stricken Southeast Des Moines, where they had been spending the entire day in the work of charity, Mrs. Geo. B. Hippee, wife of the general manager, and Mrs. Albert G. Maish, wife of the superintendent of the Des Moines City Railway company, were thrown from their carriage and severely injured in a frightful runaway on East Court avenue. In attempting to jump from the carriage Mrs. Hippee was thrown heavily to the pavement, breaking her arm and receiving other injuries of a painful nature. Mrs. Maish was also thrown, her arms being a mass of bruises. The women jumped because the team was heading straight for the river, threatening to dash carriage and all into the seething waters of the swollen Des Moines. They feared that they would be drowned and leaped from the carriage as the last alternative. The equipage turned just as it reached the bridge, dashing onto it, striking a heavy wagon and throwing both horses, besides injuring the carriage. The driver was unhurt.

In his address at Dubuque President Roosevelt said: "How I have felt toward your people I think it hardly needful for me to say. When I came to choose that member of my cabinet who occupies the position which, taken year in and year out, is of most vital consequence to the welfare of the nation, I felt that although I should not ordinarily care to take two men from the same state, yet Mr. Shaw's qualifications for the position were so pre-eminent that in justice to the nation I could not pass him by. (Cheers and applause.) As for Secretary Wilson (cheers and applause,) after having been with him for twenty months, and after having been intimately associated with various different national administrations and knowing many members of the cabinet, I wish to state, without reserve, in point of loyalty, of that probity which makes one feel that one is better for being associated with him, that in point of sound common sense, not always a common quality, and in a capacity to handle his office in the way that one would wish all offices of the government to be handled if one could have ideal conditions, I have never met any man in public life who I feel quite came up to Secretary Wilson. (Cheers and applause.) I can not overstate the degree to which I lean on him and the personal affection that I feel for him." (Applause.)

The state of Iowa will have to refund a little more than $11,000 in collateral inheritance tax, which was paid into the treasury several years ago by the George W. Lovell estate of Monticello. J. W. Doxsee of that place, attorney for the estate, was at the state house a few days ago with a certified copy of the record of the district court containing an order for such refund. This was served on the secretary of the executive council and on Deputy Treasurer McQuiston, in the absence of State Treasurer Gilbertson. It appears the taxes were paid to the state following the decision of the supreme court, which held certain features of the collateral inheritance tax law unconstitutional because no provision was made for notice of appraisement. Later this was remedied by action of the legislature. At the time the payment was made, the taxes were not legally due the state. The last general assembly provided a method of repayment in such cases and in chapter 8 of its acts, provided that when a court of competent jurisdiction determined that collateral inheritance tax had been paid on property not subject to it, repayment should be made when a certified copy of the record of the court showing the fact of non-liability was field with the executive council. The law further provides that in such cases the executive council shall issue an order to the auditor of state, directing him to issue a warrant on the treasurer to refund the tax. It is supposed the executive council will acordingly take the matter up at its next meeting and issue an order on

Des Moines, June 6, 1903.

The street car company has begun the construction of an impervious levee around its power plant. This levee is being built of stone, brick, concrete and clay. It is built under the direction of engineers and is calculated to withstand any sort of water which will not run over the edges. The walls will be put four or six feet above the high water mark of the recent flood. City Engineer Frank Pelton, who was in office during the time the street car company established its power plant in East Des Moines, furnished the water levels to the company for use in planning its plant. The company's floor figures were then placed four feet above the then high water mark. That was prior to 1892. Last year the high water mark of 1892 was exceeded even and this year the high water mark of last year was exceeded by more than two feet.

Attorney General Mullan has delivered an opinion at the request of the executive council on the question of whether the Boone and also the Cedar Rapids and Marion electric lines are assessable by the executive council as interurbans or whether they are assessable locally. The companies have both contended they should not be classed as interurbans, and that they did not need to report to the secretary of the executive council for assessment purposes. Attorney General Mullan does not sustain their contention. He holds the law is clear that when an electric line does not etxend beyond the corporate limits of a city it is assessable by the local authorities alone. But when it extends beyond the corporate limits, then it is assessable by the executive council as an interurban line, and must report to the council. Mr. Mullan takes the view that in assessing interurbans the council must proceed as it would with a railroad and consider gross earnings, the value of terminals and whatever facts have a bearing on the value of the property.

The inebriates continue to escape at a lively rate, according to the institution reports for May. The report from the Mt. Pleasant hospitals shows there were 56 inebriates there May 31, a decrease of 17 since April 30. No less than 37 escaped in May. Eight were returned from escape, 16 admitted for the first time and four paroled. The report of the inebriate department at Cherokee shows 39 inmates May 31 and 53 April 30. Fourteen escaped during the month, 15 were admitted, two paroled inmates returned and two escaped inmates returned, while one died and 18 were paroled. At Independence inebriate department there were 26 May 31 and 36 April 30. Six were admitted and one readmitted, 16 were paroled and one escaped.

Iowa will have no woman's department and no board of lady managers at the St. Louis exposition. This was settled on at a meeting of the commissioners. It was decided, however, as a compromise, to appoint a committee of three women, whose function will be to assist the different departments in the exhibit of whatever pertains to woman's work. The decision not to have a woman's department was caused in some measure at least by recollection of the troubles of such departments in former expositions. The selection of the committee of women has been left to the executive committee, which will report in a week or ten days. The committee will organize by selecting a chairman, vice-chairman and secretary, and will expend no money except as authorized by the executive committee. It will have general supervision over such exhibits as women will be especially interested in, subordinate, of course, to the heads of the departments in which such exhibits are made.

All sorts of suggestions are being made about the protection of the city from flood waters. Views widely differ. There are two schools, so to speak. One wants to narrow the river walls, protect them with masonry, and thus make the current swifter and insure the carrying off of the water in a much shorter time, because of the swift current and the deepened channel. The other class wants the channels of the river greatly widened so that they will take care of the surplus water. Still others want to straighten the channel of the 'Coon.

The Rock Island railroad has had plans made for a new girder bridge to cost about $75,000, across the Des Moines river in Des Moines. What effect the recent flood will have on the project is not evident. The Chicago officers of the railroad have it under consideration at this time.

News comes from Webster City that the talk of the building of an electric trolley line between Des Moines and that city has been revived. L. W. Reynolds, of Boone, is credited with having revived the project. It is now planned to build side lines from the main route to Ames and to Story City and possibly other points. The information from Webster City is to the effect that the line will be built next year.

Married men live longer than bachelors and are less likely to become insane. Another argument for matrimony is found in the fact that there are thirty-eight criminals among every 1,000 bachelors, while among married men the ratio is only eighteen per 1,000.

Slates have been breaking and disappearing from the roofs of homes on the water front at Victoria, B. C. Investigation disclosed the fact that great flocks of crows dig clams on the beach at low tide, and when one catches a bivalve he flies high in the air with it, drops it on to a slate roof, which smashes the shell and a piece of slate, and then descends and eats the opened clam.

Saved His Life.

Whitehall, Ill., June 8th.—Mr. Lon Manley had Bright's Disease and after his home doctor had treated him for some time he finally told him that he could do nothing more for him and that he would surely die.

A friend who had heard of what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done in cases of Kidney Trouble, advised Mr. Manley to try a treatment of this remedy.

He did so and everyone was surprised and delighted to see an improvement in a very short time. This improvement gradually kept on as the treatment proceeded, till now Mr. Manley is well. He says:

"The doctor said he had done all he could for me. He gave me up. A friend advised me to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and in a few weeks I was nearly all right again.

"I am not dead, and can truthfully say that I feel better to-day than I have for years. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful remedy and I will always praise them and recommend them to everyone suffering as I did."

Mr. Manley's recovery has caused a profound sensation, as no one ever thought he would recover.

As a man becomes older, he gradually lops off habits, and at last lops off circus going.

Woman's Nerves

Give Warning of Approach of More Serious Trouble.

Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability, bordering upon hysteria? Are your spirits easily affected so that one minute you laugh, and the next fall into convulsive weeping?

Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound; pain in the ovaries, and especially between the shoulders; sometimes loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia, and almost continually cross and snappy, with a tendency to cry at the least provocation?

If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition, and you are threatened with nervous prostration.

Undoubtedly you do not know it, but in nine cases out of ten this is caused by some uterine disorder, and the nerves centering in and about the organs which make you a woman influence your entire nervous system. Something must be done at once to restore their natural condition or you will be prostrated for weeks and months perhaps, and suffer untold misery.

Proof is monumental that nothing in the world is better for this purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; thousands and thousands of women have written us so.

How Mrs. Holland, of Philadelphia, suffered among the finest physicians in the country, none of whom could help her—finally cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For over two years I was a constant sufferer from extreme nervousness, indigestion, and dizziness. Menstruation was irregular, had backache and a feeling of great lassitude and weakness. I was so bad that I was not able to do my own work or go far in the street. I could not sleep nights.

"I tried several splendid doctors, but they gave me no relief. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I soon began to feel better, and was able to go out and not feel as if I would fall at every step. I continued to take the medicine until cured.

"I cannot say enough in behalf of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine, and heartily recommend all suffering women to try it and find the relief I did."—MRS. FLORENCE HOLLAND, 622 S. Clifton St., Philadelphia, Pa. (Jan. 6, 1902.)

Another case of severe female trouble cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after the doctors had failed.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was in poor health for several years. I had female trouble and was not able to do my housework alone. I felt tired, very nervous, and could not sleep. I doctored with several doctors. They doctored me for my stomach, but did not relieve me. I read in your book about your medicine, and thought I would try it. I did so, and am now cured and able to do my work alone, and feel good. I was always very poor, but now weigh one hundred and fifty pounds.

"I thank you for the relief I have obtained, and I hope that every woman troubled with female weakness will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. I have recommended it to many of my friends."—MRS. MARIA BOWERS, Millersville, Ohio. (Aug. 15, 1901.)

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all of the virtues of this medicine?

How shall the fact that it will help them be made plain?

Surely you cannot wish to remain weak, and sick, and discouraged, exhausted with each day's work. You have some derangement of the feminine organism, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you just as surely as it has others.

Sick Headache

is the result of arrested physiology of the stomach, liver or bowels, and is one of the first symptoms of constipation. Those who suffer with sick headache frequently resort to the use of headache powders, irritating cathartics, which it is true do relieve headache by dulling the sensations of the sympathetic nerves, but such medicines never remove the cause, and to be candid, are really dangerous, death having been known to occur directly from their use.

"Any person having control of any child of the age of seven to fourteen years inclusive, in proper physical and mental condition to attend school, shall cause such child to attend some public, private, or parochial school, where the common school branches of reading, writing, spelling, arithmetic, grammar, geography, physiology, and United States history are taught, or to attend upon equivalent instruction by a competent teacher elsewhere than school, for at least twelve consecutive school weeks in each year. Provided, that this section shall not apply to any child who lives more than two (2) miles from any school by the nearest traveled road except in those districts in which the pupils are transported at public expense, or who is excused for sufficient reasons by any court of record or judge thereof. Any person who shall violate the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall pay a fine of not less than three (3) dollars nor more than twenty (20) dollars, for each offense."

The following very apt statement was made by the speaker in one of our Hancock County churches, recently, "The great purpose of the public school system is to furnish every child of proper age the opportunity of obtaining free of expense, a common school education." It is considered a advantage to the state to have an educated people. A State may well take just pride in a minimum percentage of illiteracy. In harmony with his view of education, compulsory attendance laws have been enacted in several of the great nations of Europe, and in some of the states of of the great American Republic.

GENERAL GRANT'S BON MOT.

Witty Rejoinder That Is Credited to the "Silent Man."

A portrait of Jay Cooke, by Wm. M. Chase, is one of the best pictures at this year's exhibition of the Philadelphia academy of fine arts. Mr. Chase standing beneath the portrait the other afternoon, said:

"When Mr. Jay Cooke posed for me he told me of a bon-mot of Gen. Grant's. Grant was entertaining a clergyman one evening, and the clergyman had to make a certain train on a certain railroad or he would not get home that night. Therefore his host kept reminding him of the hour, but he would put the matter off and begin to talk in his fluent, clerical way again.

"'Now, doctor, remember your train goes at 10:20,' Grant for the tenth time said.

"'That is all right about the train, General,' returned the clergyman; 'the Lord controls the trains.'

"'Yes,' Grant chuckled, 'but if you want to get this A. & B. line train, you had better start now. The Lord has had nothing to do with the A. & B. this many a year.'"—Pittsburg Gazette.

REAL QUALITIES OF WORTH.

Loyalty, Charity and Generosity Most to Be Praised.

As a man grows older he perceives that the moral qualities are worth a good deal more in friendship than the intellectual qualities, and that no brilliancy of mind, no charm of conversation can make up for lack of loyalty, charity and generosity in social intercourse. Young men of brains are disposed to value mainly mental power in other people, and it is a human quality to forgive much in men and women of genius. This is a false appreciation of the respective values of mentality and the moral qualities. The time comes when a man learns that unselfishness and affection are better in wife or friend than intellectual power accompanied by intense self-love. Fortunate the man who does not come to this knowledge too late.—San Francisco Bulletin.

NO ONE TO DO IT.

How Horace Greeley Qualified a Rather Harsh Remark.

Speaking of the traditional policy of the United States concerning South American affairs, Prof. John B. Clark of Columbia university tells a story attributed to Horace Greeley.

The relation was of a conversation between Mr. Greeley and an eminent Englishman on some diplomatic question in which the United States had asserted itself with some forcefulness, and Mr. Greeley remarked:

"The trouble with us is that we want a darn good licking."

"Yes, Mr. Greeley, you do," rejoined the Englishman. But his exultation was shortlived, for Greeley broke in, as if finishing his former sentence:

"But there ain't any one can do it."—New York Times.

Firmness.

The woman was adamant. "I insist," she cried, "I insist upon wearing the what-d'ye-call-'ms in this family." The man took a last desperate stand. "I'll be hanged if I keep the suspender buttons sewed on for you," he howled in a clear, falsetto voice. Thus again did sterling manhood assert itself under adverse circumstances; but even so, he shuddered in fear that she might attempt to keep them in place with a belt. After all, the man dearly loved his wife, and hadn't he once tried to wear a belt himself?—New York Evening Sun.

Lyon & Healy, the well-known Chicago Music House, have just introduced three great piano compositions. The first is by Herbert L. Clarke, "Idle Fracies," a beautiful waltz intermezzo. "Antics of the Ants," by W. H. Scouton and Geo. D. Barnard, is a two step that will be popular in an instant. The third is a masterpiece by W. G. Yule, entitled "A Dream of the Ballet." These late pieces can be heard at your local music dealer, or will be send pospaid upon receipt of price by the publishers.

Wisdom of Experience.

"What is your opinion as to long engagements?" queried the young man whose springtime fancy lightly turned to thoughts of a matrimonial nature.

"They're the worst ever," answered the man who had found it necessary to comb his hair with a towel for lo, these many moons. "A long engagement means a short bank balance to begin housekeeping on."

The Reason.

STRIKERS LEAVE CHICAGO HOTELS

Leading Hostelries of City Are Badly Crippled By Walkout of Employes.

LONG FIGHT IS LOOKED FOR

Waiters Reject All Offers of Arbitration, Declaring that Their Scale of Wages, as Presented, Must First Be Granted.

Chicago, June 13.—The strike in the hotels of Chicago, impending for the last three weeks, materialized yesterday, and twenty-five of the leading hotels of Chicago are tonight badly crippled in all departments. All of the hotels are running, however, and proprietors declare that the establishments will remain open for business at any cost.

The complete list of hotels in which the employes have left, follows:

Auditorium, Auditorium Annex, Sherman house, Grand Pacific, Stratford, Palmer house, Bismarck, Kaiserhoff, Thompson, Victoria, Wellington, Lakota, Chicago Beach, Del Prado, Vendome, Hyde Park, Windermere, Metropole, Kenwood, Holland, Great Northern, Virginia, Brevoort, Union.

The strike promises to be a hard fought one. The hotel proprietors declare that the demands made by the men are unreasonable, and the union claims to have not been fairly treated by the proprietors, in that the latter have refused to treat as individuals with the unions.

The proprietors have agreed to submit nearly every point at issue to arbitration, but this the unions will not consent to. They insist that their demands for higher wages and shorter hours be granted before they will arbitrate anything, and insist also upon the absolute recognition of the union. To this latter demand, the proprietors say they will never agree so long as the strikers maintain their present attitude. The unions demand absolutely that the members of the Hotel Keepers' association come to the offices of the unions as individuals and not as members of any association.

The employes have hopes of bringing to their aid the members of the teamsters' and engineers' unions in order to keep supplies out of the hotels, but the officers of both these unions say they will take no hand in the matter, as the cooks' and waiters' unions have placed themselves in the wrong by refusing arbitration.

THERE IS NO DISSENT.

People of Servia Seem Content With Conditions.

Belgrade, June 13.—The assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga, the latter's two brothers, the Servian premier, minister of war and former minister of war, perpetrated in the dark hours of yesterday morning by a band of officers, and the proclamation by the army of Prince Karageorgevitch, the pretender to the throne, as king of Servia, has apparently, it may be said now that forty-eight hours have passed, been accepted by the capital and Servian people without a murmur. The meeting of the skupschtina on Monday next is now looked forward to to confirm the proclamation as king of Prince Karageorgevitch and to regularize the new situation.

The only new element in the situation is a feeling among the intelligent classes in favor of the abolition of the Servian monarchy altogether and the creation of a republic, and this sentiment is shared by at least one member of the provisional government. Differences of opinion on this point developed yesterday at a meeting of the cabinet, when the new foreign minister, Ljubonir Kalievics expressed himself for the establishment of a republican form of government. The majority of the ministers however, declared themselves in favor of a new king in Prince Peter Karageorgevitch. They strengthened their declaration by the strong argument that it was certain that Austria and Russia would not countenance the creation of a republic. This is the view generally shared by politicians.

The remains of the ill fated king and queen were buried almost stealthily Thursday night in the chapel of St. Marks, where the members of the Obrenovitch family are interred.

The autopsy held proved that the late king received thirty shot wounds many of them deadly. Queen Draga had numerous shot and sabre wounds and it is alleged that her body was torn in a barbaric fashion.

The radical leaders have made fiery speeches today to thousands of people in the open air, declaring that the act was the will of the people as well as of the military.

PRINCE PETER THE NEW KING

Received His Education in Belgrade—Dissipated and a Spendthrift.

Geneva, June 13.—The new king of Servia, Peter, received his education in Belgrade during the reign of his father, being 13 years old when the family was expelled from the Servian soil. Later he went to school in Pesth and Temesvar, and besides repeated visits to Russia, spent several years at the small court of Prince Nicholas of Montenegro at Cettinje. While there he became the suitor of the latter's daughter, Princess Zorka, and married her in 1883. She died seven years later. The issue of this marriage are three children, a daughter of 19 and two sons, aged respectively 15 and 13. Since 1891 Prince Peter has been residing in Geneva. Because of his dissipated and spendthrift habits Prince Peter separated with his father-in-law and lost the good graces of Alexander III of Russia, from whom he received large gifts of money on several occasions. Since the accession of the present czar, however, there has been a sort of a reconciliation with St. Petersburg and the finances of Prince Peter were put and kept on a sound basis, but he has been very poor. It is said that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria assisted materially in this financial rehabiliation. Since 1891 Prince Peter, never wealthy, has nevertheless, been living in modest comfort at Geneva. His younger brother, Arsenius, served for a number of years as an officer in the Russian guards and married since his retirement Princess de Midoff di San Donato, a very wealthy Russian lady, with whom he is living in Paris.

Pope Deeply Shocked.

Rome, June 12.—The pope, when informed of the tragedy at Belgrade, was deeply shocked, and exclaimed: "When will the people learn that thrones attained with blood are not worth having?"

The latest fad in the way of a cure for dyspepsia is bread made of sea water, instead of fresh water. A Philadelphia baker makes a specialty of this bread, and the dyspeptics who use it declare that it aids them. The baker gets his sea water from Atlantic City.

A country editor in Kansas thus neatly refers to an important domestic event in his town: "A handsome girl baby—which is not to be wondered at, considering its mother—came to Jim Brown's house, and will stay until she finds a better fellow than her dad, a thing that will take her many years to do."

Mrs. Charles King of Corpus, Texas, owns more land than any other woman in the world. Her husband was a famous cattle baron, and he left her 1,300,000 acres in Nueces,, Hidalgo, Starr and Cameron counties, and there are now about 65,000 cattle on her ranges. This vast estate must be kept intact until her oldest grandchild comes of age.

The reason why the best hard wheat is grown in Western Canada and in a few short months as compared with elsewhere, is because vegetation grows from seed to maturity with great rapidity, owing to the suddenness with which the sun's heat comes after the seed is sown. The more northerly the latitude in which grain will come to perfection, the better it is. Therefore 62 lbs. per bushel is the standard as 60 pounds in the East. THE ODD CORNER

Harbor Bar.

All in the feathered palm-tree tops the bright green parrots screech,
The white line of the running surf goes booming down the beach;
But I shall never see them, though the land lies close aboard,
I've shaped the last long silent tack as takes me to the Lord.

Give me the Scripters, Jakey, 'n' the pipe atween my lips,
I'm bound for somewhere south and far beyond the track of ships;
I've run my rags of colors up and clinched them to the stay,
And God the pilot's come aboard to take me up the bay.

You'll mainsail-haul my bits o' things when Christ has took my soul,
'N' you'll lay me quiet somewhere at the landward end of the Mole,
Where I shall hear the steamers' sterns a-squattering from the heave,
And the topsail blocks a-piping when a rope-yarn fouls a sheave.

Give me a sup of lime-juice; Lord, I'm drifting into port,
The landfall lies to windward, and the wind comes light and short,
And I'm for signing out, and off to take my watch below,
And—prop a fellow, Jakey—Lord, it's time for me to go.

—John Masefield.

Travels 8,000 Miles to Get Married.

Miss Sara Thompson, a young music teacher of Clarksville, Pa., is now on her way to the gold fields of Alaska to marry the man she loves. She is unaccompanied and in spite of this has no fear of the 8,000-mile journey.

Miss Thompson's fiance is Rev. M. Egbert Koonce, who is stationed at Rampart City. The romance began when the couple lived on adjacent farms near Clarksville. Miss Thompson left home to study music in New York and meantime Mr. Koonce graduated, became an ordained minister of the Presbyterian church, and then went with the American army to Porto Rico as first lieutenant. He was afterward sent as missionary to Alaska, and it was on his return home that the engagement was announced.

Land Dispute 200 Years Old.

Down on the fish wharves of Chester, Pa., where Edgemont avenue runs to the Delaware river, are a number of historic houses that are now attracting the attention of historians. Particular interest centers around the old David Lloyd house, which is fast falling into decay.

Just how old this house is nobody knows, but when on May 4, 1703, Lloyd deeded the property to William Pickles the presence of the structure was noted.

It is supposed Lloyd built the house soon after he gained possession of the land, Dec. 28, 1693. This soon became known as "the disputed Lloyd tract."

Old Lloyd Homestead.

Lloyd obtained his title by deed from the church wardens of the Swedish congregation at Wiccocoe, which act on his part is criticised severely by Rev. Mr. Ross in his letter of June 21, 1714, to the Society of the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

"Ye glebe lands," he said, alluding to this tract, "was irreligiously sold by some Swedes, under ye name of church wardens, to a powerful Quaker, who now plows and sows it and disposes of it at his pleasure; but it is hoped his precarious title will be one day inquired into, and the church restored to her rights again."

This tract, which had been given to the Swedes' church by Armgardt "Pappagoya," could not be wrenched out of the strong grasp of David Lloyd, and, notwithstanding the determined opposition of Jasper Yeates, be succeeded in having the land confirmed to him by the proprietary government.

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION--- PE-RU-NA MADE KNIFE UNNECESSARY.

CATARRH is a very frequent cause of that class of diseases known as female weakness.

Catarrh of the pelvic organs produces such a variety of disagreeable and irritating symptoms that many people—in fact, the majority of people—have no idea that they are caused by catarrh.

If all the women who are suffering with any form of female weakness would write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and give him a complete description of their symptoms and the peculiarities of their troubles, he will immediately reply with complete directions for treatment, free of charge.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes:

"I suffered for three years with leucorrhea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am today in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years."—Mrs. Eva Bartho.

Miss Maud Steinbach, 1399 12th Street, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

"Last winter I felt sick most of the time, was irregular and suffered from nervous exhaustion and severe bearing down pains. I had so frequently heard of Peruna and what wonderful cures it performed so I sent for a bottle and in four weeks my health and strength were entirely restored to me."—Miss Maud Steinbach.

Everywhere the women are using Peruna and praising it. Peruna is not a palliative simply; it cures by removing the cause of female disease.

Dr. Hartman has probably cured more women of female ailments than any other living physician. He makes these cures simply by using and recommending Peruna.

MRS. EVA BARTHO.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Victorious Once More

Number two of the ball games of the season has passed and gone and once more the Klemme base ball team is feeling "jubilent." This drubbing was given the Meservey aggregation and was done to the tune of 13 to 2. Our second wonder, Ed Ell, started what promises to be a brilliant career as twirler, atthe game, and threw the first five innings of the game. He succeeded in keeping the number of scores down to two. Just to loosen up a little Frank Klnckhohn threw the balance of the game and had the Meservey boys entirely at his mercy. No scores were made in these last four innings. The boys gave the battery good support. The game was altogether too tame and was not interesting. Klemme is in the market for ball games. Send on your challenges. On wednesday next the ball team plays at Meservey.

In this issue occurs the statement of the Bank of Klemme. The total footings of this institution have passed the $100,000 mark with over $90,000 diposits. This is certainly a great showing when you consider that the bank started in November last. Cashier Sweigard is certainly a business getter.

The German Medicine Company finished their date here on Saturday night and left on Monday for Miller. On Saturday evening a gold watch and chain was voted to the most popular young lady in the audience and Miss Malinda Lau was voted the prize. The company done a good business here and were profuse in their praise for the treatment they received here. They have some good people with them.

There should be peace and harmony in all towns and small towns in particular. The aim of the inhabitants of all towns should be to further the interests of one another. If something happens by which your are displeased, over-look it, for no doubt, before many moons you will do something which dissatisfies your enemies and they too should be just as forgiving. Frame this motto in your brain, "Forgive and Forget."

NEW DETAILS OF SERVIAN CRIME

Ava Kumovics Telle Story of the Murder of King Alexander and Draga.

PLEADED FOR THEIR LIVES

Mercilessly Shot and Slashed While Promising All the Conspirators Demanded—Servant Who Pointed Out Hiding Place Slain.

Semlin, Hungary, June 15.—From an intimate personal friend of the new premier of the Servian government, Ava Kumovics, the Associated Press correspondent has received an account of the tragedy in Belgrade, which he is assured is absolutely authentic. These facts are more horrible in their details of the murders than any story yet brought out.

Six weeks ago one of the officers in the secret service warned the king of what was going on, when all the officers concerned were transferred to points in the interior, the king fearing to take stronger measures against them. About the same time a certain lady was sent to Geneva to see Prince Peter Karageorgevitch, and submit to him a proposition that he come to Servia as king upon his agreement to accept a new constitution based upon liberal principles.

Prince Peter accepted the conditions. As soon as the conspirators obtained this assurance, that the kingdom would have a new sovereign, they decided to kill King Alexander and Queen Draga.

Colonel Maschin, Queen Draga's brother-in-law, was the leader of the conspiracy. On the night of the murder after the conspirators had entered the palace they searched every nook and corner in vain for two hours. Finally they found the king's adjutant, Petrovics, and compelled him to show them to the hiding place. He took them to the bath room and pointed to a secret door in the wall opening upon a staircase leading to the roof. Behind this door crouched the king and queen. When the conspirators were assured of their prey they promptly shot and killed the adjutant.

Meanwhile the king fell upon his knees and begged for life, offering to yield to every demand, to sign any document, to agree to leave the country, or to send Queen Draga away—anything, everything if only they would not kill him.

The officers answered roughly: "It is too late," and fired at him.

The queen also fell on her knees and asked pardon for her conduct, but one of the officers, calling her a degrading epithet, told her she had been queen long enough.

One of the conspirators, after submitting the queen to gross indignities, slashed her with a sword and the other officers fired at her.

The king was also slashed with sabres.

The conspirators then dragged the king and queen into the front apartments and threw them over the balcony upon the lawn in front of the palace, which is separated from the street by an open iron fence. The king and queen lived for one and two hours afterwards.

Meanwhile two of the officers summoned the queen's two brothers from their homes to the house of the commander of the Belgrade division, where they were offered a glass of water and told to bid each other farewell. In the very moment they embraced each other they were shot down.

The story goes into revolting details as to the murder of Minister of War Pavlovics and the other victims.

It is also learned that the conspirators attempted to destroy the king and queen by poison a month ago. A young Bohemian cook was introduced into the royal kitchen and proved so efficient that he was speedily entrusted with preparing the food for the royal table. One evening the head cook caught him mixing poison in the food, and promptly informed the king. The Bohemian was immediately shot and his parents were notified under penalty of death to say that he had committed suicide. They now tell the facts.

Belgrade remains remarkably quiet, but the provisional government continues to largely increase the garrison.

Belgrade papers, which are entirely controlled by the government, declare unequivocally for Prince Peter Karageorgevitch. They discuss the questions of a republic, but assert that the country is as yet unprepared for such a form of government.

At a ministerial council held this afternoon six ministers voted in favor of the election of Prince Peter Karageorgevitch as king and one in favor of a republic.

It is stated that the last words of King Alexander were: "Zingar Markovics, why have you done this to me?"

King Alexander believed that Markovics was the head of the conspiracy against him

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

F. A. Schaefer & West, the fine cattle men, who have large farms near Raleigh, have just lost three head of thoroughbred cattel. All were poisoned by eating Paris green. The loss is a heavy one, as the cattle were valued at $1,000.

The general merchandise firm of Nason & Whitehall of State Center, were the victims of thieves and firebugs. Their store was discovered to be on fire early in the morning but the fire was extinguished before much damage was done by the judicious use of chemicals. In looking over the stock after the fire, it was discovered that a quantity of goods had been taken, and hence they arrived at the conclusion that the thieves had fired the building in order to cover their crime. The sheriff has been notified of the crime and given a description of the stolen goods, but the probabilities of finding the guilty parties are very poor, as no evidences were left at the building.

A report issued by Secretary Wells, of the Iowa Grain Dealers' association at Des Moines, gives a synopsis of the crop conditions in Iowa up to the present date. This report is compiled from information received from about 900 elevator men throughout the state of Iowa. Each man having given the conditions as he sees them in his territory, an average has been taken on the different kinds of grain, acreage, etc., and has been brought up to the 10th of June. The report shows that the intended acreage of corn on May 1st was 1 per cent more than last year, of which 72 per cent has been planted, up to June 10th. Of the whole amount, 15 per cent of the corn land has been abandoned and will be sown in other crops, while 13 per cent will be planted and replanted in corn.

The state board of control received information that Mrs. Christina Behrens of Davenport, a life convict at Anamosa prison, had hanged herself at the penitentiary. Mrs. Behrens was committed December 18, 1897, for the murder of her husband, whom she was convicted of poisoning, and her case was one that attracted statewide attention. Long-continued despondency drove her to take her life, according to the facts given to Judge Robinson by Warden Hunter. The suicide was sensational in its details. Mrs. Betsy Smith, who was committed form Des Moines for the murder of her husband, was the first person to find Mrs. Behrens and in fact had been with her before she killed herself. The hanging took place near the cell room of the woman's department in a room connected with the bathroom.

Cullen Gregory, a farm hand working three miles northeast of Grinnell, is minus $330, and he is anxious to find his roommate, who left suddenly a few nights ago without saying a word to a single person. It is believed that the roommate, whose name is Charles Knodle, has the money. It seems that Knodle and Gregory worked upon the same farm and that they had become fast friends. In a burst of confidence Gregory told of his savings of years. Next morning when Gregory got up Knodle was gone and the pocket book containing the fresh, crisp bills were also missing. The police have been notified and Des Moines officers have been asked to keep their weather eye out for Knodle. His description is as follows: Short, stout built man, weighing 160 pounds, dark complexion, short mustache and wore a blue suit with white stripe.

While in the performance of his duties as solicitor and collector for The Register and Leader of Des Moines, M. A. Fisher was set upon and dangerously wounded by W. L. Staves and his son, Earl Staves, at Marshalltown. Sometime ago Mr. Fisher obtained a subscription for the paper and later called to make a collection, the agreement being that it was to be paid for at a certain price per month, and payment being deferred called again, and Staves refused to pay for the paper. As Fisher held his signed order for a six months' subscription, he felt he should have his money. Staves then tried to scare the boys that delivered the paper and thratened to do them bodily harm. At this time Mr. Fisher made complaint to the police authorities that his boys were being threatened, and an officer told Staves that if he did not let the boys alone there would be trouble, and thus things drifted along. A few days ago when Mr. Fisher passed 16 East Bromley, where the Staves, father and son, were working as carpenters, they commenced the quarrel again, and finally attacked Fisher, first hitting him with a half brick or piece of stone. The exact circumstances of the assault are not obtainable, as Mr. Fisher is not able to tell about it and the Staves' stories do not hang together. The father was seen in the county jail and stated that the son, Earl, threw something at Fisher and he admitted that he thought it hit him, then the father, W. L. Staves, clinched with Fisher and he stated that he had a knife in his hand and said he was using it to trim a paint brush, but did not intend to cut Fisher. As it is there is an ugly gash in Fisher's shoulder, on the outer angle of the left shoulder, four inches long and an inch wide. In some way Fisher was struck over the head by a hatchet, thought to have been in the hands of Earl Staves, and a dangerous contusion and cut made at the back of his head.

George Landgraf, who lived four miles east of Odebolt, was thrown from his wagon while returning from town and death resulted.

Mrs. Fannie Washington, colored, of Sioux City, was found dead in her bed a few days ago. She was addicted to the clay eating habit—technically speaking, a geophagist. Several in Sioux City are known to be clay eaters.

W. E. McAlpine and L. G. Boyle, of Whittemore, now under arrest in Fort Dodge will be taken to Columbus, Ohio, to be tried for using United States mails with intent to defraud. McAlpine and Boyle are charged with being implicated in a gigantic land swindle concerning the Sanders tract in Tennessee, which was sold and resold by means of bogus deeds. McAlpine is under indictment by the grand jury of the United States court now in session in Fort Dodge, but will be tried first in Columbus. He was arrested some time ago. Boyle was taken into custody on receipt of papers from Illinois. He is a son of a bank president in Whitemore and comes of a highly respected family.

As was expected, Edwin S. Hooley dominated in the annual meeting of the directors of the Des Moines & Fort Dodge railway held in New York. All the old officers were ousted and Mr. Hooley's representatives elected. They are as follows: President, W. L. Stowe; vice-president, Nathan Seeley; secretary and treasurer, Norbert Heinsheimer. Mr. Hooley appears determined to rid the last vestige of Rock Island management in the road so that it will be easier for him to manipulate the deal when the lease of the company expires in 1905. C. N. Gilmore of Des Moines was formerly president of the road. F. E. Hayne of the Rock Island in Chicago was secretary and treasurer, and Carroll Wright, attorney for the Rock Island in Iowa, vice-president.

According to advices from New York, Rock Island authorities say that having been supplied by the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern with a road which serves them as a very good substitute for the Des Moines & Fort Dodge, the lease on the latter will not be renewed on its expiration three years hence. It is stated that even had not the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern been acquired, Rock Island interests would have been content to dispense with the Des Moines & Fort Dodge property. It was practically decided at the time the Hooley party acquired an interest in the road that a new line should be built unless favorable arrangements could be made on the expiration of the lease. The new line would not have involved any serious engineering difficulties. In view of the fact that the Cedar Rapids supplies a suitable line, no building is contemplated.

W. A. Porter, an old soldier, living in Dennison, during a fit of jealousy, shot his wife with a target rifle inflicting a serious but not necessarily fatal wound. He rushed from the house after seeing his wife fall and shot himself twice with a 22-calibre revolver. Neither of these shots were fatal, though one bullet is still lodged in his brain. Mrs. Porter was shot in the mouth, the bullet cutting across the tongue and lodged in the muscles of the neck. Porter's wounds are a scalp wound and a more serious wound, the ball penetrating the brain. Both victims of the shooting are conscious. Porter claims the shooting of his wife was unintentional, and that, thinking he had killed her accidentally, he sought to take his own life. Mrs. Porter, and her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Varner, of Charter Oak, who were witnesses of the shooting, claim that Porter fired intentionally. Porter is a member of the G. A. R., and lost one eye in the civil war. Since the war he has had a bullet lodged in his brain. He receives a liberal pension. The couple have been married many years, and this was the first known that there was any trouble between them.

A farmer named Baker, living near Brooklyn, was mulcted of $1,500 a few days ago by two strangers who interested him in the purchase of the farm of a neighbor. The two men hired a livery team at Fisher's livery stable in Grinnell. They drove at once to Brooklyn where they separated, one who had called upon Baker several weeks ago, going to his place. He had before consulted Baker concerning the purchase of the farm several weeks ago. In some way Baker was promised a large sum in case the deal was completed, as the sale was to be at a ridiculously low price. In order to complete the deal at once it was represented by the stranger that the deal must be spot cash, and it was necessary for Baker to put in $1,500. Each party counted out $1,500 which was placed in a tin box and the two started to buy the farm. They met the second man in the bunco deal, who wanted to hire a team to take him to the station to make an incoming train. The stranger who was with Baker, handed him the tin box and started to the station with his pal, promising to return at once. He did not return and the box was found empty. A trail was started after the fellows and the team was found at Vining, Tama county, where it was left. No trace of the men has been discovered.

GOVERNOR NEWBOLD DEAD.

Succeeded Kirkwood to Position of Iowa's Chief Executive.

Mt. Pleasant, June 12.—Hon. Joshua G. Newbold, at one time governor of Iowa, died at his residence in this city of apoplexy Wednesday night. He was elected lieutenant governor in 1875, and by the election of Governor Kirkwood to the United States senate, he succeeded to the governorship and served out the remainder of the term. Governor Newbold, since residing in this city, has served three terms as mayor, and completed his last term in March.

Ex-Governor Newbold was four times elected as a member of the Iowa general assembly; was speaker of the house during a critical time; was elected lieutenant governor, and served nearly two years as governor in place of Samuel J. Kirkwood, who had been elected to the United States senate.

He was a native of Pennsylvania, and his ancestors were Friends or Quakers. He was born in Fayette county on May 12, 1830, and the first eight years of his life were spent on the farm. When sixteen years of age, he assisted his father in a flouring mill, taught school and studied medicine. Later he abandoned the idea of becoming a physician and turned his attention to the law, becoming a pupil of Hon. Joshua Howell of Uniontown. Coming to Iowa in 1854, he located on a farm near Mt. Pleasant, and at the end of a year removed to Cedar township in Van Buren county, where he engaged in farming and merchandising until 1860.

Governor Kirkwood was elected to the United States senate during the session of the general assembly following his election as governor, so resigned the office of chief executive. In his position as lieutenant governor, Mr. Newbold presided over the senate in the Sixteenth general assembly, and on February 1, 1877, took the oath of office as governor.

"GOD BLESS THE CIRCUS."

Wallaces Show Has The Best Wishes of the Orphans.

Des Moines, June 15.—Of the numerous letters prized by the management of the Wallace show, one is especially highly esteemed. It runs like this: "We had a happy, happy, happy time at the Wallace circus yesterday afternoon. We will never forget it. May God bless the Wallace show." This was followed by forty-eight poorly scribbled but genuine signatures of boys and girls who, through the generosity of their guardians, were able to see the Wallace show for their "first circus."

B. E. Wallace, the sole owner of the big Wallace show, considers the frequency of the visits of the orphans and other unfortunates as a compliment to his show. Many states allow the inmates of their state institutions to attend one circus annually, its officers selecting the show to be attended and the state paying the bill. Recently in an Illinois city where three shows were advertised at the same time, the manager of the asylum for the insane decided that they would take as many patients as could safely be taken to the Wallace circus. Scarcely a day passes but that some generous minded person calls at the show lot early in the day to buy tickets and reserved seats for a number of orphan or poor children.

A big three-ring circus and extensive menagerie like that offered by the great Wallace show is certainly a children's delight. We have other circuses, but there is only one Wallace show, and it is generally conceded that Mr. Wallace has in many ways cleverly provided for the amusement of the little folks as well as presenting scores of actually new and almost miraculous features for the gratification of the adult parents, and these are sufficient reasons for believing that the immense Wallace tents will be packed as usual to their capacity when it exhibits in Des Moines next Friday, June 19. Reduced rates on all railroads.

A most distressing accident, and one decidedly uncommon in occurrence, happened at the G. F. Gatcher farm, four miles northwest of Reinbeck, a few days ago when Mary Gatcher, aged 14, was literally scalped by her hair catching in a cream separator.

Joseph Kratochvil of Cedar Rapids drank four ounces of diluted muriatic acid, and was sent to Mercy hospital. The prospect is that he will recover, although he is in a precarious condition. His wife only a few days ago committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

"And talking of going across seas," he continued, "reminds me of Cluny; either of you seem to care about him, et our Jane is fretting herself sick, nd you might both of you see it."

"Tell Jane to be patient," said Dr. erity. "If Cluny is not back by the ew Year, I will go myself and bring im back. But remember all is to ar- ange and rearrange, order and reor- er, men to put out of office, and men o put into office. The work before he Protector is stupendous."

This opinion proved to be correct. ay after day passed, and no word oncerning Cluny was possible.

One crisp, sunny morning in Janu- ry Jane suddenly resolved to make ome inquiries herself.

"Have you heard anything about ord Neville, Sir Thomas?" she asked. I am very, very unhappy at his long elay."

"So am I," answered Sir Thomas. I sent a trusty man to The Hague, nd it seems Lord Neville collected he money due there, six weeks ago. Ie refused a note on the Leather Merchants' Guild of this city, and in- isted on being paid in gold, and was o paid. Now, Jane, a thousand sov- reigns are not easily carried—and— nd——"

"Well, sir? Please go on."

"A ship left that night for the Amer- cas—for the Virginia Colony."

"But Lord Neville did not go to merica. Oh, no, sir! That is an mpossible thought."

"Why did he insist on the gold? his is the thing that troubles me."

"Who says he insisted on gold?"

"The widow of the man who paid t."

"She may have been mistaken. She ay herself be dishonest. The money ay never have been paid at all. I o not believe it has been paid. Did our trusty man see Lord Neville's uittance?"

"I have not thought of that, Jane. will send again to The Hague."

"Yes, sir, and let your messenger sk to see Lord Neville's quittance."

"I will send a man to The Hague o-day. Why do you not see the Pro- ector? He was fond of the young an. He believed in him."

She only answered, "Yes, sir," and hen adding, "Good-morning, sir," she urned to go. Her whole appearance was so wretched Sir Thomas could ot rid himself of her unhappy atmos- here. His walk was spoiled; he went nto his private room and smoked a ipe of Virginia, but all his thoughts et themselves to one text: "There re many sorrowful things in life, but o hardest of all is loving."

CHAPTER XII.

Hold Thou My Hands.

This day was followed by a week of wretched weather. Jane could do nothing but wait. She fully resolved when she visited Cromwell to show him the heart of a fearless woman—brave, because she doubted neither God nor man.

It was, however, the month of March before this visit could be made. One exquisite morning in March she heard Gen. Swaffham say that the Cromwell ladies were going to Hamp- ton Court. The Protector would then be alone in Whitehall, and she might see him without having to share her confidences with the family. She pre- pared a note asking for an interview, and then called on Mr. Milton and nduced him to go with her to the pal- ace and deliver it into Cromwell's hand. In her simplicity she consid- ered this little plan to be a very wise one, and so it proved. Her fear left her as soon as the door closed, and she was alone with her old friend.

"Jane," he said kindly, "Jane, what is the trouble?"

"It is Lord Neville, sir. Nothing has been heard of him,"

"When did you hear last from him?"

Jane offered Cromwell Cluny's last letter, and asked him to read it. He read it aloud, letting his voice become sweet and tender as he did so.

"My dearest and most honored mistress, I am just on the moment of leaving Paris; my horse is at the door, but by a messenger that will come more directly than myself I send you a last word from this place. My thoughts outreach all written words. I am with you, my own dear one, in all my best moments, and my unchangeable love salutes you. Graciously remember me in your love and prayers.

"Cluny Neville."

"A good letter, Jane. I do think the man that wrote it is beyond guile, beyond dishonor of any kind. I will not hear a doubt of him. He touched a bell, and when it was answered said, "Mr. Tasburg to my presence—without delay." Mr. Tasburg came without delay, and Cromwell turned to him in some passion.

"Mark Tasburg," he said scornfully, "I have not once heard from you in the matter of Lord Neville's delay. The commission for your search is more than a month old; it is, sir, and I like not such delays."

"My Lord Protector, I reported to Mr. Thurloe and Mr. Milton that my search had been of no avail."

"What date does Lord Neville's last letter bear?"

"It was written at Paris on the 11th day of November."

"The same date as your last letter, Mistress Swaffham. Four months ago. This is serious." The turning to Tasburg he said, "Find Col. Ayrton and send him here, to me, without delay."

During the interval between Tasburg's departure and Ayrton's arrival, Cromwell was occupied in writing a letter, and when it was finished, Col. Ayrton entered.

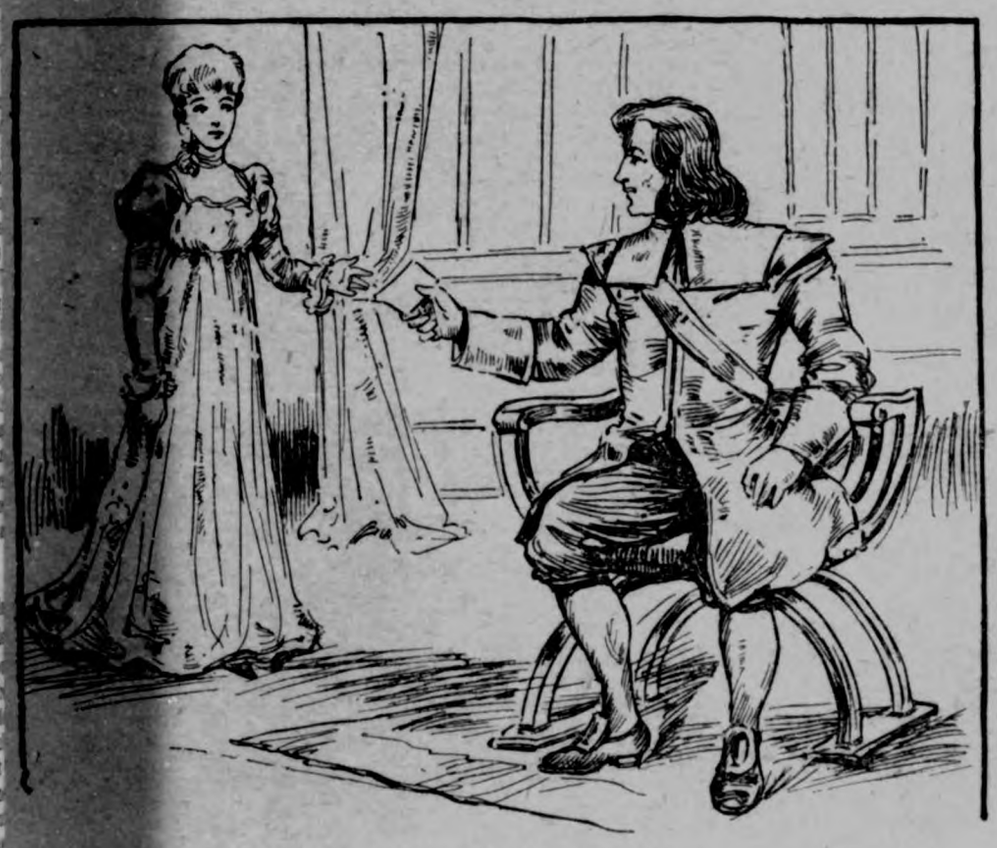
"Colonel," he said, "I think you know Lord Cluny Neville? He has disappeared, I do fear, in some unfortunate way. On the 11th of last November he left Paris, after dispatching the business he was sent on with Cardinal Mazarin. No one has heard of him since. I have written to his Eminence, the Cardinal; here is the letter, and if his reply be not to the point, go next to the lodging of Lord Neville, and from there follow his steps as closely as it may be in your power. The treasurer will honor this order for your expenses. Farewell, and God go with you."

He waited until the door closed, and then he said: "I owe you this and more, Jane; and I like the youth—a dear, religious youth, of a manly spirit and a true heart."

"It is four months, sir. 'Tis beyond my hope, and I fear Cluny is now beyond human help."

"Well, then, Jane, we will trust to the miraculous. We do not do that enough, and so when our poor help is not sufficient, we tremble. Where is the hope and trust you sent to me when I lay between life and death in Scotland? Oh, what poor creatures we are, when we trust in ourselves! Nothing then but tears and fears and the grave to end all."

Comforted by his words, Jane forgot her grief, and as she went homeward she kept repeating to herself Cromwell's parting advice, "Don't doubt, Jane. God nor man nor nature can do anything for doubters. They cannot." She understood what was included in this advice, and she tried to realize it. The moment Mrs. Swaffham saw her daughter, she took notice of the change in her countenance and speech and manner, and she said to herself, "Jane has been with Oliver Cromwell. No one else could have so influenced her." And very soon Jane told her all that had been done and said, and both women tried to assure themselves that a few more weeks of patience would end the suspense.



"A good letter, Jane."

At length April came, and the bare brown garden was glorious with the gold and purple of the crocus flowers and the moonlight beauty of the lilies. Birds were building in the hedges, and the sun shone brightly overhead. The spirit of spring was everywhere; men and boys went whistling along the streets, the watermen were singing in their barges, and a feeling of busy content and security pervaded London.

Suddenly this atmosphere of cheerful labor and abounding hope was filled with terror and with a cry of murder, of possible war. A gigantic plot for the assassination of the Protector was discovered—that is, it was discovered to the people; Cromwell himself had been aware of its first inception, and had watched it grow to its shameful maturity. But to the city of London the arrest of forty conspirators in their midst was a shock that suspended for a time all their business.

Israel Swaffham was the first person called into the Protector's presence. He found him in great sorrow, sorrow mingled with a just indignation. With his clenched hand he pointed out to Israel the personalities of the conspirators. At one name he paused, and with his finger upon it, looked into Israel's face.

"It is a burning shame," Israel said, angrily. "You have pardoned and warned and protected him for years."

"I must even now do what I can; I must, Israel, for his father's sake. A warrant will be issued to-night, and I cannot stay that, and personally I can not warn him of it. What am I to do?"

"My dear lord, do nothing. I can do all you wish. There needs no more words between us. In two hours Abel Dewey—you know Abel—will be on the road. Give him a good horse and he will so manage himself and the beast as to reach his journey's end in twenty-four hours."

Israel then went quickly home. He called Jane and explained to her in a few words what she was to do, and by the time her letter to Matilda was ready, Abel Dewey was at the door waiting for it. Its beginning and ending was in the ordinary strain of girls' letters, but in the center there were some ominous words, rendered remarkable by the large script used, and by the line beneath them—"I must tell you there has been a great plot against the Protector discovered. Charles Stuart and Prince Rupert are the head and front of the same, but there is a report that Stephen de Wick is not behindhand and my father did hear that a warrant was out for Stephen, and hoped he would reach French soil, ere it reached him." She hasted to sign her name and close the letter. Abel Dewey was ready for it, and as she watched him ride away her thoughts turned to de Wick, and she wondered in what mood Matilda might be, and how she would receive the information sent her. Would it be a surprise?

"Not it," answered Mrs. Swaffham. "Matilda knows all about the plot; that is most certain; but its discovery may be news to her, and if so, she will not thank you for it, Jane. Why will she burn herself with fire not on her hearthstone?"

"Prince Rupert is her lover. She will do anything he desires her to do."

"If he truly loves her he would not permit her to be put in danger."

Then Mrs. Swaffham went out of the room, and soon afterwards Dr Verity came in, asking cheerily as he entered, "How is it with you to-day, Jane?"

"I live as best I can, doctor. I watch from the morning to the midnight for a footstep that does not come."

"There is a desire that fulfils itself by its own energy, but this desire is born of unfailing Hope, and of that unfaltering Faith that can move mountains. Have you got it, Jane?"

"I am so weak, Doctor John. Pray for me."

"Pray for yourself. Why should any one pray for you? Pray for yourself, though it be only to say, with the old Acadians, 'Hold Thou my hands!' Go to God, Jane; you are only a little babe in His sight; a little babe crying in the vast void and darkness, and trying to catch hold of something to which you may cling. Say to the Father of your spirit, 'Hold my hands!'"

And she rose and kissed him for his sweet counsel, and that night, and many a night afterwards, she fell asleep whispering, "Hold Thou my hands!"

LIVE STOCK

Grades of Cattle and Profit.

At the University of Illinois are being fed six carloads of cattle for the purpose of ascertaining what grade of cattle will yield the most profit for the operation of feeding. These six carloads consist of sixteen steers each. They were purchased by Professor Mumford, who was careful to select steers for each lot that should be representative. The six grades were, the fancy selected, choice, good, medium, common, inferior. Every load is fed in paved lots of equal size provided with the same kind and amount of shelter and the same exposure. The rations fed to each are of the same kind and of the same amount to a thousand pounds live weight of cattle, except in such instances as the appetites of the cattle belonging to a certain grade clearly show that they are being overfed or underfed as compared with other grades of cattle used in this test.

A committee of three expert buyers of live stock visits the station at intervals of one month and fixes the money value gain that each lot has made per 100 pounds during the preceding month. These three men are John T. Alexander, Geo W. Shannon and James Brown, all of Chicago. The experiment began November 29, 1902. The market value per 100 weight at the beginning of the experiment and the increase of value by May 16, was as follows:

Lot	Purchase Value.	Increase.
Fancy	$4.75	$1.30
Choice	4.55	1.25
Good	4.20	1.20
Medium	3.85	1.20
Common	3.60	1.00
Inferior	3.35	1.15

Below are the average weights of the steers in each lot on November 29 and May 16:

	Nov. 29.	May 16.
Choice	1,115	1.544
Good	1,019	1,401
Medium	1,022	1,370
Inferior	966	1,302

A little examination of these figures shows that on the average a steer of the fancy lot cost $38.365 and was worth on May 16, $82.28, a gain in value of $43.915. A steer of the inferior lot cost $32.361 and was worth on May 16, $58.65, a gain in value of $26.289. But this is figured on a uniform market, which is correct so far as this experiment goes. But as a matter of fact the market has declined, and the fancy grades have suffered more than the inferior grades. It seems altogether likely that, owing to this state of the market, the inferior grade will prove the most profitable. But feeding experiments cannot be adjusted to fluctuations of the market, and much light is certain to be shed abroad by this experiment with carload lots.

Feeding in Summer Drouth.

From the Farmers' Review: The necessity of maintaining a normal flow of milk during a summer drouth will be conceded by all who feed for profit. In complete soiling the Wisconsin Station shows that one acre of soiling crops equals two and one-half acres of good bluegrass pasture for feeding dairy cows. Partial soiling is an economy that no dairy farmer should neglect. Supposing the drouth to come about the 25th of June, your first substitute will be red clover, if you have it. Don't use rye; it will taint the milk. If clover is not on hand, sow Canada peas and oats, each one and a half bushels per acre. For a succession 15 or 20 days later, sow again. If the season proves wet, your first sowing of peas will be a failure, as far as the peas are concerned, for they will lodge and rot off. When cured before ripe enough to shell, this makes excellent winter feed, being rich in protein. Millet, sown one bushel to the acre about the middle of May, will be ready to succeed the peas and oats in 60 days. By this time King Corn has elevated his banner and should be given right of way.

A plat of some of the early varieties of sweet corn, followed by another of Stowell's Evergreen, will carry you through until the field corn is right, and no waste land, for every one of the above mentioned makes good winter feed when cured in the proper condition. The silo is said to be the panacea for dry spells, but as I cannot speak from experience, "silence is golden." Hoping that the star of alfalfa will soon rise east of the Mississippi, meanwhile experimenting a little in that direction, we mainly rely on the method above set forth. Use brains. They are as necessary as feed. Weed out. Don't feed a cow that only returns seventy-five cents for a dollar's worth of rations. In your selections for mating in your herd, be an artist. Produce your ideal, and future generations will bless you for any progress made.—Granville Jones, Knox County, Illinois.

THE DAIRY

Cream Thickening.

From Farmers' Review: A dairyman writes that he is selling cream to a grocer and a restaurant, that the cream tests from 25 to 27 per cent fat and is delivered daily. His customers complain that the cream is too thin, and he wants to know if there is some other way than by ageing the cream to get the desired body. He writes that by giving the cream age it is not fresh enough to endure the carelessness of the restaurant help and there are always complaints about the cream being sour when he attempts to hold the cream a day or so in order to thicken it before delivery to his customers.

He asks if I cannot recommend some preservative. or presrvaline that is harmless and will not interfere with the whipping of cream. He says, "I have tried to get the grocer and restaurant man to use more care with the cream, but it is useless, hence the necessity for some sort of a preservative that will somewhat prolong the keeping qualities of the cream."

My reply to this letter is that there is a law in this state forbidding the use of any kind of a preservative in either milk or cream. I do not know of anything that has been found, up to the present time, to be absolutely harmless to the consumer. I mean by this, that I do not know of any preservative that is offered by the trade that is harmless. There is a substance, however, which has been prepared for thickening cream and I think very likely it will answer the purpose of this man. It is what is called "Wisconsin Viscogen" and it can be obtained by writing to Chas. S. Baker & Co. Grand Crossing Station, Chicago. This is a powder that is sold in pound boxes and sent by mail. The powder is dissolved in water and the solution added to the cream. Directions for using it are sent with the powder.

It is a fact that separator cream usually looks thinner than gravity cream which contains the same per cent fat. There is something about the mechanical separation which breaks up the cream and makes it look thinner than gravity cream. After such cream is a day or more old its thickness resembles that of gravity cream, but many dealers can not wait for the cream to age for the same reason given by this man.—E. H. Farrington, Wisconsin Dairy School.

Milk Exposed to Foul Odors.

Besides bad fermentations, there is another cause of poorly flavored butter, says Oscar Erf. This comes from cream or milk having been exposed to foul odors, which are absorbed and given to the butter. The theory that milk does not absorb odors when warm and cooling has long been abandoned. Experiments show that milk in that condition is even more susceptible to odors than in any other state. In the ripening process this odor can be partly eliminated by aeration or by pasteurization of the cream, but in case of a bad fermentation some antagonistic germ must be added in order to check the progress of the undesirable one. This antagonistic fermentation is commonly known as a starter, and if properly prepared contains the right kind of flavor producing bacteria.

Percheron Breeders Meet.

A special meeting of the directors of the American Percheron Horse Breeders' Association was held at the Grand Pacific hotel in Chicago on Wednesday, May 20. Reports were presented by the secretary and treasurer showing the association to be in good financial condition and that the registrations for the past four months were in excess of those received in the corresponding four months of last year. Resolutions were passed authorizing the treasurer to pay all outstanding bills for advertising, etc. It was voted that $500 in medals be given to the American Royal Show to be distributed as special premiums for Percheron exhibit at their show to be held at Kansas City, Mo., this coming fall; it was also voted that this be duplicated for special premiums to be awarded to Percherons exhibited at the International Live Stock Exposition to be held in Chicago in December. A resolution was carried unanimously recommending that the association give $1,000 in cash to be awarded as special premiums at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition to be held at St. Louis, Mo., 1904.—S. D Thompson, secretary.

As the diffusion of soluble matter in the soil water is probably much hindered by the friction of the soil particles, the roots of plants need to travel farther after food than do the branches, which develop in a freely circulating medium. Especially is this true of plants growing in poor soil.

NEW DETAILS OF SERVIAN CRIME

Ava Kumovics Telle Story of the Murder of King Alexander and Draga.

PLEADED FOR THEIR LIVES

Mercilessly Shot and Slashed While Promising All the Conspirators Demanded—Servant Who Pointed Out Hiding Place Slain.

Semlin, Hungary, June 15.—From an intimate personal friend of the new premier of the Servian government, Ava Kumovics, the Associated Press correspondent has received an account of the tragedy in Belgrade, which he is assured is absolutely authentic. These facts are more horrible in their details of the murders than any story yet brought out.

Six weeks ago one of the officers in the secret service warned the king of what was going on, when all the officers concerned were transferred to points in the interior, the king fearing to take stronger measures against them. About the same time a certain lady was sent to Geneva to see Prince Peter Karageorgevitch, and submit to him a proposition that he come to Servia as king upon his agreement to accept a new constitution based upon liberal principles.

Prince Peter accepted the conditions. As soon as the conspirators obtained this assurance, that the kingdom would have a new sovereign, they decided to kill King Alexander and Queen Draga.

Colonel Maschin, Queen Draga's brother-in-law, was the leader of the conspiracy. On the night of the murder after the conspirators had entered the palace they searched every nook and corner in vain for two hours. Finally they found the king's adjutant, Petrovics, and compelled him to show them to the hiding place. He took them to the bath room and pointed to a secret door in the wall opening upon a staircase leading to the roof. Behind this door crouched the king and queen. When the conspirators were assured of their prey they promptly shot and killed the adjutant.

Meanwhile the king fell upon his knees and begged for life, offering to yield to every demand, to sign any document, to agree to leave the country, or to send Queen Draga away—anything, everything if only they would not kill him.

The officers answered roughly: "It is too late," and fired at him.

The queen also fell on her knees and asked pardon for her conduct, but one of the officers, calling her a degrading epithet, told her she had been queen long enough.

One of the conspirators, after submitting the queen to gross indignities, slashed her with a sword and the other officers fired at her.

The king was also slashed with sabres.

The conspirators then dragged the king and queen into the front apartments and threw them over the balcony upon the lawn in front of the palace, which is separated from the street by an open iron fence. The king and queen lived for one and two hours afterwards.

Meanwhile two of the officers summoned the queen's two brothers from their homes to the house of the commander of the Belgrade division, where they were offered a glass of water and told to bid each other farewell. In the very moment they embraced each other they were shot down.

The story goes into revolting details as to the murder of Minister of War Pavlovics and the other victims.

It is also learned that the conspirators attempted to destroy the king and queen by poison a month ago. A young Bohemian cook was introduced into the royal kitchen and proved so efficient that he was speedily entrusted with preparing the food for the royal table. One evening the head cook caught him mixing poison in the food, and promptly informed the king. The Bohemian was immediately shot and his parents were notified under penalty of death to say that he had committed suicide. They now tell the facts.

Belgrade remains remarkably quiet, but the provisional government continues to largely increase the garrison.

Belgrade papers, which are entirely controlled by the government, declare unequivocally for Prince Peter Karageorgevitch. They discuss the questions of a republic, but assert that the country is as yet unprepared for such a form of government.

At a ministerial council held this afternoon six ministers voted in favor of the election of Prince Peter Karageorgevitch as king and one in favor of a republic.

It is stated that the last words of King Alexander were: "Zingar Markovics, why have you done this to me?"

King Alexander believed that Markovics was the head of the conspiracy against him

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

F. A. Schaefer & West, the fine cattle men, who have large farms near Raleigh, have just lost three head of thoroughbred cattel. All were poisoned by eating Paris green. The loss is a heavy one, as the cattle were valued at $1,000.

The general merchandise firm of Nason & Whitehall of State Center, were the victims of thieves and firebugs. Their store was discovered to be on fire early in the morning but the fire was extinguished before much damage was done by the judicious use of chemicals. In looking over the stock after the fire, it was discovered that a quantity of goods had been taken, and hence they arrived at the conclusion that the thieves had fired the building in order to cover their crime. The sheriff has been notified of the crime and given a description of the stolen goods, but the probabilities of finding the guilty parties are very poor, as no evidences were left at the building.

A report issued by Secretary Wells, of the Iowa Grain Dealers' association at Des Moines, gives a synopsis of the crop conditions in Iowa up to the present date. This report is compiled from information received from about 900 elevator men throughout the state of Iowa. Each man having given the conditions as he sees them in his territory, an average has been taken on the different kinds of grain, acreage, etc., and has been brought up to the 10th of June. The report shows that the intended acreage of corn on May 1st was 1 per cent more than last year, of which 72 per cent has been planted, up to June 10th. Of the whole amount, 15 per cent of the corn land has been abandoned and will be sown in other crops, while 13 per cent will be planted and replanted in corn.

The state board of control received information that Mrs. Christina Behrens of Davenport, a life convict at Anamosa prison, had hanged herself at the penitentiary. Mrs. Behrens was committed December 18, 1897, for the murder of her husband, whom she was convicted of poisoning, and her case was one that attracted statewide attention. Long-continued despondency drove her to take her life, according to the facts given to Judge Robinson by Warden Hunter. The suicide was sensational in its details. Mrs. Betsy Smith, who was committed form Des Moines for the murder of her husband, was the first person to find Mrs. Behrens and in fact had been with her before she killed herself. The hanging took place near the cell room of the woman's department in a room connected with the bathroom.

Cullen Gregory, a farm hand working three miles northeast of Grinnell, is minus $330, and he is anxious to find his roommate, who left suddenly a few nights ago without saying a word to a single person. It is believed that the roommate, whose name is Charles Knodle, has the money. It seems that Knodle and Gregory worked upon the same farm and that they had become fast friends. In a burst of confidence Gregory told of his savings of years. Next morning when Gregory got up Knodle was gone and the pocket book containing the fresh, crisp bills were also missing. The police have been notified and Des Moines officers have been asked to keep their weather eye out for Knodle. His description is as follows: Short, stout built man, weighing 160 pounds, dark complexion, short mustache and wore a blue suit with white stripe.

While in the performance of his duties as solicitor and collector for The Register and Leader of Des Moines, M. A. Fisher was set upon and dangerously wounded by W. L. Staves and his son, Earl Staves, at Marshalltown. Sometime ago Mr. Fisher obtained a subscription for the paper and later called to make a collection, the agreement being that it was to be paid for at a certain price per month, and payment being deferred called again, and Staves refused to pay for the paper. As Fisher held his signed order for a six months' subscription, he felt he should have his money. Staves then tried to scare the boys that delivered the paper and thratened to do them bodily harm. At this time Mr. Fisher made complaint to the police authorities that his boys were being threatened, and an officer told Staves that if he did not let the boys alone there would be trouble, and thus things drifted along. A few days ago when Mr. Fisher passed 16 East Bromley, where the Staves, father and son, were working as carpenters, they commenced the quarrel again, and finally attacked Fisher, first hitting him with a half brick or piece of stone. The exact circumstances of the assault are not obtainable, as Mr. Fisher is not able to tell about it and the Staves' stories do not hang together. The father was seen in the county jail and stated that the son, Earl, threw something at Fisher and he admitted that he thought it hit him, then the father, W. L. Staves, clinched with Fisher and he stated that he had a knife in his hand and said he was using it to trim a paint brush, but did not intend to cut Fisher. As it is there is an ugly gash in Fisher's shoulder, on the outer angle of the left shoulder, four inches long and an inch wide. In some way Fisher was struck over the head by a hatchet, thought to have been in the hands of Earl Staves, and a dangerous contusion and cut made at the back of his head.

George Landgraf, who lived four miles east of Odebolt, was thrown from his wagon while returning from town and death resulted.

Mrs. Fannie Washington, colored, of Sioux City, was found dead in her bed a few days ago. She was addicted to the clay eating habit—technically speaking, a geophagist. Several in Sioux City are known to be clay eaters.

W. E. McAlpine and L. G. Boyle, of Whittemore, now under arrest in Fort Dodge will be taken to Columbus, Ohio, to be tried for using United States mails with intent to defraud. McAlpine and Boyle are charged with being implicated in a gigantic land swindle concerning the Sanders tract in Tennessee, which was sold and resold by means of bogus deeds. McAlpine is under indictment by the grand jury of the United States court now in session in Fort Dodge, but will be tried first in Columbus. He was arrested some time ago. Boyle was taken into custody on receipt of papers from Illinois. He is a son of a bank president in Whitemore and comes of a highly respected family.

As was expected, Edwin S. Hooley dominated in the annual meeting of the directors of the Des Moines & Fort Dodge railway held in New York. All the old officers were ousted and Mr. Hooley's representatives elected. They are as follows: President, W. L. Stowe; vice-president, Nathan Seeley; secretary and treasurer, Norbert Heinsheimer. Mr. Hooley appears determined to rid the last vestige of Rock Island management in the road so that it will be easier for him to manipulate the deal when the lease of the company expires in 1905. C. N. Gilmore of Des Moines was formerly president of the road. F. E. Hayne of the Rock Island in Chicago was secretary and treasurer, and Carroll Wright, attorney for the Rock Island in Iowa, vice-president.

According to advices from New York, Rock Island authorities say that having been supplied by the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern with a road which serves them as a very good substitute for the Des Moines & Fort Dodge, the lease on the latter will not be renewed on its expiration three years hence. It is stated that even had not the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern been acquired, Rock Island interests would have been content to dispense with the Des Moines & Fort Dodge property. It was practically decided at the time the Hooley party acquired an interest in the road that a new line should be built unless favorable arrangements could be made on the expiration of the lease. The new line would not have involved any serious engineering difficulties. In view of the fact that the Cedar Rapids supplies a suitable line, no building is contemplated.

W. A. Porter, an old soldier, living in Dennison, during a fit of jealousy, shot his wife with a target rifle inflicting a serious but not necessarily fatal wound. He rushed from the house after seeing his wife fall and shot himself twice with a 22-calibre revolver. Neither of these shots were fatal, though one bullet is still lodged in his brain. Mrs. Porter was shot in the mouth, the bullet cutting across the tongue and lodged in the muscles of the neck. Porter's wounds are a scalp wound and a more serious wound, the ball penetrating the brain. Both victims of the shooting are conscious. Porter claims the shooting of his wife was unintentional, and that, thinking he had killed her accidentally, he sought to take his own life. Mrs. Porter, and her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Varner, of Charter Oak, who were witnesses of the shooting, claim that Porter fired intentionally. Porter is a member of the G. A. R., and lost one eye in the civil war. Since the war he has had a bullet lodged in his brain. He receives a liberal pension. The couple have been married many years, and this was the first known that there was any trouble between them.

A farmer named Baker, living near Brooklyn, was mulcted of $1,500 a few days ago by two strangers who interested him in the purchase of the farm of a neighbor. The two men hired a livery team at Fisher's livery stable in Grinnell. They drove at once to Brooklyn where they separated, one who had called upon Baker several weeks ago, going to his place. He had before consulted Baker concerning the purchase of the farm several weeks ago. In some way Baker was promised a large sum in case the deal was completed, as the sale was to be at a ridiculously low price. In order to complete the deal at once it was represented by the stranger that the deal must be spot cash, and it was necessary for Baker to put in $1,500. Each party counted out $1,500 which was placed in a tin box and the two started to buy the farm. They met the second man in the bunco deal, who wanted to hire a team to take him to the station to make an incoming train. The stranger who was with Baker, handed him the tin box and started to the station with his pal, promising to return at once. He did not return and the box was found empty. A trail was started after the fellows and the team was found at Vining, Tama county, where it was left. No trace of the men has been discovered.

GOVERNOR NEWBOLD DEAD.

Succeeded Kirkwood to Position of Iowa's Chief Executive.

Mt. Pleasant, June 12.—Hon. Joshua G. Newbold, at one time governor of Iowa, died at his residence in this city of apoplexy Wednesday night. He was elected lieutenant governor in 1875, and by the election of Governor Kirkwood to the United States senate, he succeeded to the governorship and served out the remainder of the term. Governor Newbold, since residing in this city, has served three terms as mayor, and completed his last term in March.

house during a critical time; was elected lieutenant governor, and served nearly two years as governor in place of Samuel J. Kirkwood, who had been elected to the United States senate.

He was a native of Pennsylvania, and his ancestors were Friends or Quakers. He was born in Fayette county on May 12, 1830, and the first eight years of his life were spent on the farm. When sixteen years of age, he assisted his father in a flouring mill, taught school and studied medicine. Later he abandoned the idea of becoming a physician and turned his attention to the law, becoming a pupil of Hon. Joshua Howell of Uniontown. Coming to Iowa in 1854, he located on a farm near Mt. Pleasant, and at the end of a year removed to Cedar township in Van Buren county, where he engaged in farming and merchandising until 1860.

Governor Kirkwood was elected to the United States senate during the session of the general assembly following his election as governor, so resigned the office of chief executive. In his position as lieutenant governor, Mr. Newbold presided over the senate in the Sixteenth general assembly, and on February 1, 1877, took the oath of office as governor.

"GOD BLESS THE CIRCUS."

Wallaces Show Has The Best Wishes of the Orphans.

Des Moines, June 15.—Of the numerous letters prized by the management of the Wallace show, one is especially highly esteemed. It runs like this: "We had a happy, happy, happy time at the Wallace circus yesterday afternoon. We will never forget it. May God bless the Wallace show." This was followed by forty-eight poorly scribbled but genuine signatures of boys and girls who, through the generosity of their guardians, were able to see the Wallace show for their "first circus."

B. E. Wallace, the sole owner of the big Wallace show, considers the frequency of the visits of the orphans and other unfortunates as a compliment to his show. Many states allow the inmates of their state institutions to attend one circus annually, its officers selecting the show to be attended and the state paying the bill. Recently in an Illinois city where three shows were advertised at the same time, the manager of the asylum for the insane decided that they would take as many patients as could safely be taken to the Wallace circus. Scarcely a day passes but that some generous minded person calls at the show lot early in the day to buy tickets and reserved seats for a number of orphan or poor children.

A big three-ring circus and extensive menagerie like that offered by the great Wallace show is certainly a children's delight. We have other circuses, but there is only one Wallace show, and it is generally conceded that Mr. Wallace has in many ways cleverly provided for the amusement of the little folks as well as presenting scores of actually new and almost miraculous features for the gratification of the adult parents, and these are sufficient reasons for believing that the immense Wallace tents will be packed as usual to their capacity when it exhibits in Des Moines next Friday, June 19. Reduced rates on all railroads.

A most distressing accident, and one decidedly uncommon in occurrence, happened at the G. F. Gatcher farm, four miles northwest of Reinbeck, a few days ago when Mary Gatcher, aged 14, was literally scalped by her hair catching in a cream separator.

Joseph Kratochvil of Cedar Rapids drank four ounces of diluted muriatic acid, and was sent to Mercy hospital. The prospect is that he will recover, although he is in a precarious condition. His wife only a few days ago committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid.

NOTES FROM THE CAP

Des Moines, June 1[illegible]

The fire, lightning and tornado companies of Iowa are seriously considering a reduction of rates on live stock as an inducement to have farmers extend the use of the newly discovered means of grounding the circuit of barbed wire fences when struck by lightning. The losses on cattle, sheep, horses and swine have grown to enormous proportions from this cause. In fact 90 per cent of the losses, lightning runs for several hundred yards from the point where it proves fatal to the animal, occasionally extending a wire from the ground several feet near the fence and connecting it with a[illegible] the fence, the circuit can be broken. J. S. Clark, president of the Anchor Fire Insurance company, says the leading companies of Iowa have practically agreed to reduce the rates, making it a stipulation of the reduction that the farmer shall provide the above specified means of breaking the circuit. The present Iowa rate on live stock is 3 per cent for a term of five years. Cattle risks are considered the most hazardous of farm properties. During a storm they collect on fence corners and are easy victims of the lightning.

The third season of Ingersoll Park is now in full swing and will continue through four months. The record of the past two years will be surpassed in every way. The management of the park has expended over $[illegible] improving the park and adding innovations and features designed exclusively for the amusement and entertainment of Des Moines people during the hot summer months. During the week of the Elks' carnival, June 16, the Beggar Prince Opera company of 35 people will present comic opera each evening, with several matinees. Admission is absolutely free.

The Marks' Music House, 315 5th st., Des Moines, offers very special prices on fine Pianos during next few days, and will allow railroad fare to any out of town purchaser. The stock of Pianos is considered finest in the city. Immense stock of sheet music and all musical instruments.

An attractive feature at the Garland Chautauqua this summer will be the funny work by G. Paul Smith and Willard Gorton. Together they will dialect stories and G. Paul Smith, an electric pastel artist whose sketches are irresistable. A feature his work is sand etchings on a black ground of velvet. Mr. Gorton is a costumed character impersonator.

The last ten days of May, 1903, will long be remembered by the fire, tornado and lightning insurance companies doing business in Iowa. But yet, reports of new losses are coming to the companies, the majority of whom have headquarters for the state in Des Moines. While none of the losses have been especially large they have been numerous and run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Farmers' Mutual, which has the main offices in Des Moines had reports of more than 1,200 losses in a day, with an aggregate loss between $50,000 and $75,000. The damage was widespread, extending to almost every section of Iowa. For northern Iowa, the vicinity of Rolfe suffered most severely. A severe wind and electrical storm swept this section and did inestimable damage. For the southern section of the state Creston appears to have been the central point, although the damage there did not equal that of Rolfe and vicinity.

Over 150 business men, corporations and firms of Des Moines, all of them shippers, have joined with the business men of Muscatine, Lone Tree, Kinross, Webster, Thornburg, Montezuma, Searsboro, Reasnor Sully, Lynnville and Monroe in an effort to induce the Rock Island to open a new route into Des Moines from the southeast part of the state. By its purchase of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern road, the Rock Island acquired a line extending from Muscatine through Lone Tree and Webster to Montezuma. This line stops at Montezuma. As conditions now exist the shippers in Des Moines to reach points on this line must either pay the local rate over the Rock Island to Grinnell, a local over the Iowa Central to Montezuma and another Rock Island local beyond that point, or pay a distance tariff via West Liberty. The one costs as much as the other. The same condition applies to shippers from points on this line to Des Moines. What is wanted is that the Rock Island build a road from Montezuma through Searsboro and Lynnville to Monroe. It would necessitate the building of about twenty-two miles of road through a country that it is comparatively easy to build through and would bring all points on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern division out of Muscatine from twenty to seventy miles nearer to Des Moines and give shippers in Des Moines and along the road the benefit of a short haul and one billing rate, that it is believed would result in building up a splendid business over the line. The connection would give the Rock Island a continuous route across the state from Des Moines via its Valley division to Monroe and thence through Montezuma and Muscatine to Davenport, which would be from sixteen to twenty-two miles south of its main line and fifteen miles shorter between Des Moines and Davenport than its present route.

The Fayette County Good Roads association is organized with ten members. Regular meetings will be held. J. H. Kerwin of Oelwein is president.

"All talking of going across seas," she continued, "reminds me of Cluny; neither of you seem to care about him, yet our Jane is fretting herself sick, and you might both of you see it."

"Tell Jane to be patient," said Dr. Verity. "If Cluny is not back by the New Year, I will go myself and bring him back. But remember all is to arrange and rearrange, order and reorder, men to put out of office, and men to put into office. The work before the Protector is stupendous."

This opinion proved to be correct. Day after day passed, and no word concerning Cluny was possible.

One crisp, sunny morning in January Jane suddenly resolved to make some inquiries herself.

"Have you heard anything about Lord Neville, Sir Thomas?" she asked. "I am very, very unhappy at his long delay."

"So am I," answered Sir Thomas. "I sent a trusty man to The Hague, and it seems Lord Neville collected the money due there, six weeks ago. He refused a note on the Leather Merchants' Guild of this city, and insisted on being paid in gold, and was so paid. Now, Jane, a thousand sovereigns are not easily carried—and—and—"

"But Lord Neville did not go to America. Oh, no, sir! That is an impossible thought."

"Why did he insist on the gold? This is the thing that troubles me."

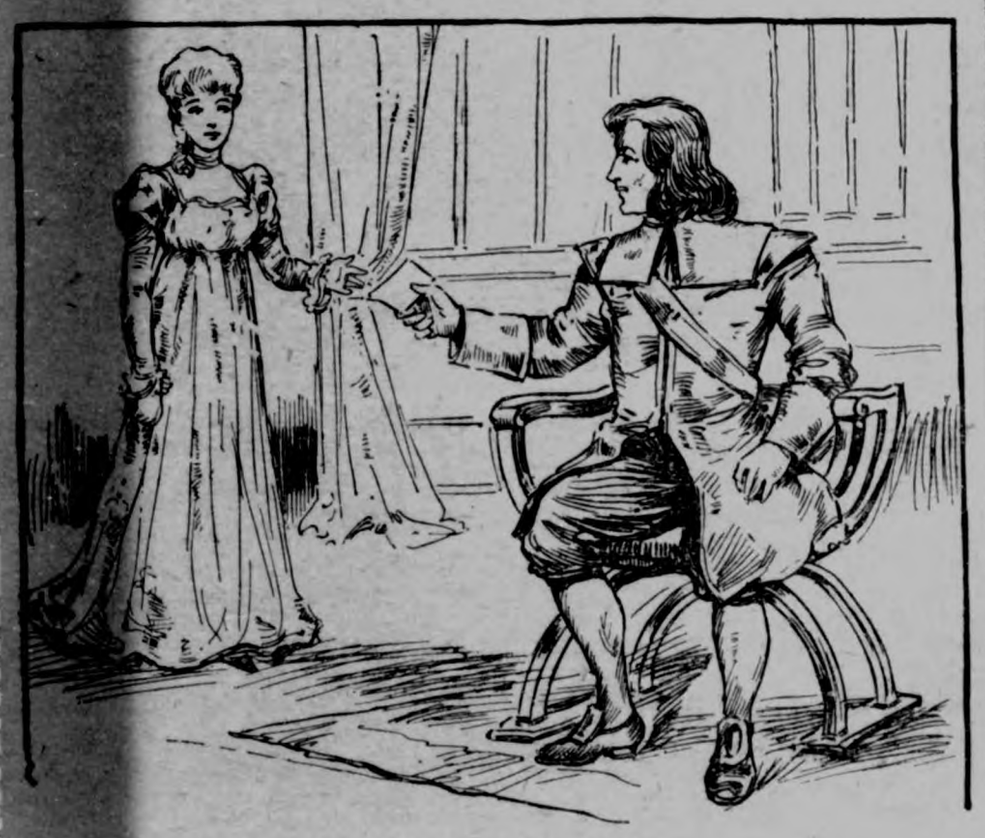
"Who says he insisted on gold?"

"The widow of the man who paid it."

"She may have been mistaken. She may herself be dishonest. The money may never have been paid at all. I do not believe it has been paid. Did your trusty man see Lord Neville's quittance?"

"I have not thought of that, Jane. I will send again to The Hague."

"Yes, sir, and let your messenger ask to see Lord Neville's quittance."



"A good letter, Jane."

"I will send a man to The Hague to-day. Why do you not see the Protector? He was fond of the young man. He believed in him."

She only answered, "Yes, sir," and then adding, "Good-morning, sir," she turned to go. Her whole appearance was so wretched Sir Thomas could not rid himself of her unhappy atmosphere. His walk was spoiled; he went into his private room and smoked a pipe of Virginia, but all his thoughts fixed themselves to one text: "There are many sorrowful things in life, but the saddest of all is loving."

CHAPTER XII.

Hold Thou My Hands.

This day was followed by a week of wretched weather. Jane could do nothing but wait. She fully resolved when she visited Cromwell to show him the heart of a fearless woman—brave, because she doubted neither God nor man.

It was, however, the month of March before this visit could be made. One exquisite morning in March she heard Gen. Swaffham say that the Cromwell ladies were going to Hampton Court. The Protector would then be alone in Whitehall, and she might see him without having to share her confidences with the family. She prepared a note asking for an interview, and then called on Mr. Milton and induced him to go with her to the palace and deliver it into Cromwell's hand. In her simplicity she considered this little plan to be a very wise one, and so it proved. Her fear left her as soon as the door closed, and she was alone with her old friend.

"Jane," he said kindly, "Jane, what is the trouble?"

"It is Lord Neville, sir. Nothing has been heard of him,"

"When did you hear last from him?"

Jane offered Cromwell Cluny's last letter, and asked him to read it. He read it aloud, letting his voice become sweet and tender as he did so.

"My dearest and most honored mistress, I am just on the moment of leaving Paris; my horse is at the door, but by a messenger that will come more directly than myself I send you a last word from this place. My thoughts outreach all written words. I am with you, my own dear one, in all my best moments, and my unchangeable love salutes you. Graciously remember me in your love and prayers.

"Cluny Neville."

"A good letter, Jane. I do think the man that wrote it is beyond guile, beyond dishonor of any kind. I will not hear a doubt of him. He touched a bell, and when it was answered said, "Mr. Tasburg to my presence—without delay." Mr. Tasburg came without delay, and Cromwell turned to him in some passion.

"Mark Tasburg," he said scornfully, "I have not once heard from you in the matter of Lord Neville's delay. The commission for your search is more than a month old; it is, sir, and I like not such delays."

"My Lord Protector, I reported to Mr. Thurloe and Mr. Milton that my search had been of no avail."

"What date does Lord Neville's last letter bear?"

"It was written at Paris on the 11th day of November."

"The same date as your last letter, Mistress Swaffham. Four months ago. This is serious." The turning to Tasburg he said, "Find Col. Ayrton and send him here, to me, without delay."

During the interval between Tasburg's departure and Ayrton's arrival, Cromwell was occupied in writing a letter, and when it was finished, Col. Ayrton entered.

"Colonel," he said, "I think you know Lord Cluny Neville? He has disappeared, I do fear, in some unfortunate way. On the 11th of last November he left Paris, after dispatching the business he was sent on with Cardinal Mazarin. No one has heard of him since. I have written to his Eminence, the Cardinal; here is the letter, and if his reply be not to the point, go next to the lodging of Lord Neville, and from there follow his steps as closely as it may be in your power. The treasurer will honor this order for your expenses. Farewell, and God go with you."

He waited until the door closed, and then he said: "I owe you this and more, Jane; and I like the youth—a dear, religious youth, of a manly spirit and a true heart."

"It is four months, sir. 'Tis beyond my hope, and I fear Cluny is now beyond human help."

"Well, then, Jane, we will trust to the miraculous. We do not do that enough, and so when our poor help is not sufficient, we tremble. Where is the hope and trust you sent to me when I lay between life and death in Scotland? Oh, what poor creatures we are, when we trust in ourselves! Nothing then but tears and fears and the grave to end all."

Comforted by his words, Jane forgot her grief, and as she went homeward she kept repeating to herself Cromwell's parting advice, "Don't doubt, Jane. God nor man nor nature can do anything for doubters. They cannot." She understood what was included in this advice, and she tried to realize it. The moment Mrs. Swaffham saw her daughter, she took notice of the change in her countenance and speech and manner, and she said to herself, "Jane has been with Oliver Cromwell. No one else could have so influenced her." And very soon Jane told her all that had been done and said, and both women tried to assure themselves that a few more weeks of patience would end the suspense.

At length April came, and the bare brown garden was glorious with the gold and purple of the crocus flowers and the moonlight beauty of the lilies. Birds were building in the hedges, and the sun shone brightly overhead. The spirit of spring was everywhere; men and boys went whistling along the streets, the watermen were singing in their barges, and a feeling of busy content and security pervaded London.

Suddenly this atmosphere of cheerful labor and abounding hope was filled with terror and with a cry of murder, of possible war. A gigantic plot for the assassination of the Protector was discovered—that is, it was discovered to the people; Cromwell himself had been aware of its first inception, and had watched it grow to its shameful maturity. But to the city of London the arrest of forty conspirators in their midst was a shock that suspended for a time all their business.

Israel Swaffham was the first person called into the Protector's presence. He found him in great sorrow, sorrow mingled with a just indignation. With his clenched hand he pointed out to Israel the personalities of the conspirators. At one name he paused, and with his finger upon it, looked into Israel's face.

"It is a burning shame," Israel said, angrily. "You have pardoned and warned and protected him for years."

"I must even now do what I can; I must, Israel, for his father's sake. A warrant will be issued to-night, and I cannot stay that, and personally I can not warn him of it. What am I to do?"

"My dear lord, do nothing. I can do all you wish. There needs no more words between us. In two hours Abel Dewey—you know Abel—will be on the road. Give him a good horse and he will so manage himself and the beast as to reach his journey's end in twenty-four hours."

Israel then went quickly home. He called Jane and explained to her in a few words what she was to do, and by the time her letter to Matilda was ready, Abel Dewey was at the door waiting for it. Its beginning and ending was in the ordinary strain of girls' letters, but in the center there were some ominous words, rendered remarkable by the large script used, and by the line beneath them—"I must tell you there has been a great plot against the Protector discovered. Charles Stuart and Prince Rupert are the head and front of the same, but there is a report that Stephen de Wick is not behindhand and my father did hear that a warrant was out for Stephen, and hoped he would reach French soil, ere it reached him." She hasted to sign her name and close the letter. Abel Dewey was ready for it, and as she watched him ride away her thoughts turned to de Wick, and she wondered in what mood Matilda might be, and how she would receive the information sent her. Would it be a surprise?

"Not it," answered Mrs. Swaffham. "Matilda knows all about the plot; that is most certain; but its discovery may be news to her, and if so, she will not thank you for it, Jane. Why will she burn herself with fire not on her hearthstone?"

"Prince Rupert is her lover. She will do anything he desires her to do."

"If he truly loves her he would not permit her to be put in danger."

Then Mrs. Swaffham went out of the room, and soon afterwards Dr Verity came in, asking cheerily as he entered, "How is it with you to-day, Jane?"

"I live as best I can, doctor. I watch from the morning to the midnight for a footstep that does not come."

"There is a desire that fulfils itself by its own energy, but this desire is born of unfailing Hope, and of that unfaltering Faith that can move mountains. Have you got it, Jane?"

"I am so weak, Doctor John. Pray for me."

"Pray for yourself. Why should any one pray for you? Pray for yourself, though it be only to say, with the old Acadians, 'Hold Thou my hands!' Go to God, Jane; you are only a little babe in His sight; a little babe crying in the vast void and darkness, and trying to catch hold of something to which you may cling. Say to the Father of your spirit, 'Hold my hands!'"

And she rose and kissed him for his sweet counsel, and that night, and many a night afterwards, she fell asleep whispering, "Hold Thou my hands!"

Grades of Cattle and Profit.

At the University of Illinois are being fed six carloads of cattle for the purpose of ascertaining what grade of cattle will yield the most profit for the operation of feeding. These six carloads consist of sixteen steers each. They were purchased by Professor Mumford, who was careful to select steers for each lot that should be representative. The six grades were, the fancy selected, choice, good, medium, common, inferior. Every load is fed in paved lots of equal size provided with the same kind and amount of shelter and the same exposure. The rations fed to each are of the same kind and of the same amount to a thousand pounds live weight of cattle, except in such instances as the appetites of the cattle belonging to a certain grade clearly show that they are being overfed or underfed as compared with other grades of cattle used in this test.

A committee of three expert buyers of live stock visits the station at intervals of one month and fixes the money value gain that each lot has made per 100 pounds during the preceding month. These three men are John T. Alexander, Geo W. Shannon and James Brown, all of Chicago. The experiment began November 29, 1902. The market value per 100 weight at the beginning of the experiment and the increase of value by May 16, was as follows:

Lot	Purchase Value.	Increase.
Fancy	$4.75	$1.30
Choice	4.55	1.25
Good	4.20	1.20
Medium	3.85	1.20
Inferior	3.35	1.15

Below are the average weights of the steers in each lot on November 29 and May 16:

	Nov. 29.	May 16.
Choice	1,115	1.544
Good	1,019	1,401
Medium	1,022	1,370
Inferior	966	1,302

A little examination of these figures shows that on the average a steer of the fancy lot cost $38.365 and was worth on May 16, $82.28, a gain in value of $43.915. A steer of the inferior lot cost $32.361 and was worth on May 16, $58.65, a gain in value of $26.289. But this is figured on a uniform market, which is correct so far as this experiment goes. But as a matter of fact the market has declined, and the fancy grades have suffered more than the inferior grades. It seems altogether likely that, owing to this state of the market, the inferior grade will prove the most profitable. But feeding experiments cannot be adjusted to fluctuations of the market, and much light is certain to be shed abroad by this experiment with carload lots.

Feeding in Summer Drouth.

From the Farmers' Review: The necessity of maintaining a normal flow of milk during a summer drouth will be conceded by all who feed for profit. In complete soiling the Wisconsin Station shows that one acre of soiling crops equals two and one-half acres of good bluegrass pasture for feeding dairy cows. Partial soiling is an economy that no dairy farmer should neglect. Supposing the drouth to come about the 25th of June, your first substitute will be red clover, if you have it. Don't use rye; it will taint the milk. If clover is not on hand, sow Canada peas and oats, each one and a half bushels per acre. For a succession 15 or 20 days later, sow again. If the season proves wet, your first sowing of peas will be a failure, as far as the peas are concerned, for they will lodge and rot off. When cured before ripe enough to shell, this makes excellent winter feed, being rich in protein. Millet, sown one bushel to the acre about the middle of May, will be ready to succeed the peas and oats in 60 days. By this time King Corn has elevated his banner and should be given right of way.

A plat of some of the early varieties of sweet corn, followed by another of Stowell's Evergreen, will carry you through until the field corn is right, and no waste land, for every one of the above mentioned makes good winter feed when cured in the proper condition. The silo is said to be the panacea for dry spells, but as I cannot speak from experience, "silence is golden." Hoping that the star of alfalfa will soon rise east of the Mississippi, meanwhile experimenting a little in that direction, we mainly rely on the method above set forth. Use brains. They are as necessary as feed. Weed out. Don't feed a cow that only returns seventy-five cents for a dollar's worth of rations. In your selections for mating in your herd, be an artist. Produce your ideal, and future generations will bless you for any progress made.—Granville Jones, Knox County, Illinois.

THE DAIRY

Cream Thickening.

From Farmers' Review: A dairyman writes that he is selling cream to a grocer and a restaurant, that the cream tests from 25 to 27 per cent fat and is delivered daily. His customers complain that the cream is too thin, and he wants to know if there is some other way than by ageing the cream to get the desired body. He writes that by giving the cream age it is not fresh enough to endure the carelessness of the restaurant help and there are always complaints about the cream being sour when he attempts to hold the cream a day or so in order to thicken it before delivery to his customers.

He asks if I cannot recommend some preservative. or presrvaline that is harmless and will not interfere with the whipping of cream. He says, "I have tried to get the grocer and restaurant man to use more care with the cream, but it is useless, hence the necessity for some sort of a preservative that will somewhat prolong the keeping qualities of the cream."

My reply to this letter is that there is a law in this state forbidding the use of any kind of a preservative in either milk or cream. I do not know of anything that has been found, up to the present time, to be absolutely harmless to the consumer. I mean by this, that I do not know of any preservative that is offered by the trade that is harmless. There is a substance, however, which has been prepared for thickening cream and I think very likely it will answer the purpose of this man. It is what is called "Wisconsin Viscogen" and it can be obtained by writing to Chas. S. Baker & Co. Grand Crossing Station, Chicago. This is a powder that is sold in pound boxes and sent by mail. The powder is dissolved in water and the solution added to the cream. Directions for using it are sent with the powder.

It is a fact that separator cream usually looks thinner than gravity cream which contains the same per cent fat. There is something about the mechanical separation which breaks up the cream and makes it look thinner than gravity cream. After such cream is a day or more old its thickness resembles that of gravity cream, but many dealers can not wait for the cream to age for the same reason given by this man.—E. H. Farrington, Wisconsin Dairy School.

Milk Exposed to Foul Odors.

Besides bad fermentations, there is another cause of poorly flavored butter, says Oscar Erf. This comes from cream or milk having been exposed to foul odors, which are absorbed and given to the butter. The theory that milk does not absorb odors when warm and cooling has long been abandoned. Experiments show that milk in that condition is even more susceptible to odors than in any other state. In the ripening process this odor can be partly eliminated by aeration or by pasteurization of the cream, but in case of a bad fermentation some antagonistic germ must be added in order to check the progress of the undesirable one. This antagonistic fermentation is commonly known as a starter, and if properly prepared contains the right kind of flavor producing bacteria.

Percheron Breeders Meet.

A special meeting of the directors of the American Percheron Horse Breeders' Association was held at the Grand Pacific hotel in Chicago on Wednesday, May 20. Reports were presented by the secretary and treasurer showing the association to be in good financial condition and that the registrations for the past four months were in excess of those received in the corresponding four months of last year. Resolutions were passed authorizing the treasurer to pay all outstanding bills for advertising, etc. It was voted that $500 in medals be given to the American Royal Show to be distributed as special premiums for Percheron exhibit at their show to be held at Kansas City, Mo., this coming fall; it was also voted that this be duplicated for special premiums to be awarded to Percherons exhibited at the International Live Stock Exposition to be held in Chicago in December. A resolution was carried unanimously recommending that the association give $1,000 in cash to be awarded as special premiums at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition to be held at St. Louis, Mo., 1904.—S. D Thompson, secretary.

As the diffusion of soluble matter in the soil water is probably much hindered by the friction of the soil particles, the roots of plants need to travel farther after food than do the branches, which develop in a freely circulating medium. Especially is this true of plants growing in poor soil.

"THE WOMAN IN BUSINESS."

She Explains Difference Between Engagement and Wedding Rings.

"As a new woman," he said, "I suppose you will object to the wedding ring as a symbol of man's tyranny?"

"Of course I shall." she replied. "Under no circumstances would I consent to wear such a thing. It is not essential to a marriage, and it stands for all that is objectionable in the marriage relation."

"And on the same theory," he continued, "I suppose you will refuse to wear an engagement ring also?"

"Well—no," she answered slowly and thoughtfully. "That's a very different matter."

"But theoretically it——"

"There is no use arguing," she interrupted. "I don't care what it is theoretically. Practically it is very often a diamond, while the wedding ring is only plain gold, and that makes all the difference in the world."

Ambition for Yankee Soldiers.

A Congressman from one of the border states tells an interesting story illustrating the makeshifts on which pension claims are based, and incidentally affording a laugh at the expense of his Northern colleagues. "A good old colored auntie," said he the other day, "recently came to me to plead for financial assistance. By way of emphazing her husband's special claim to my bounty she said querulously, 'you done orter to had got my ale man a pension; dat's what yer orter had done.' Somewhat surprised I asked the old lady what her husband's claim on Uncle Sam's benevolence consisted in. 'He done go wif Marse Sherman in de wah. He done tote ambition for de Yankee sodjers.'"—New York Tribune.

Democratic Convention.

A Delegate convention of the Democrats of Hancock county was held at Garner on Saturday and candidates from the various county offices selected. For the office of treasurer, H. A. Sweigard was tendered the nomination. This was entirely unsought and unexpected by Mr. Sweigard and he promptly declined to accept the honor which the convention sought to thrust upon him. Had he accepted the nomination he would have made a strong candidate. T. R. Reams, of Madison, was nominated for sheriff. S. S. Williamson, of Garner, is the nominee for county superintendent of schools, while James Forrest, of Garner, carried of the nomination for surveyor. Jim is a bright young man, thoroughly competent and will make a good run. Here's to you, James, we may be tempted to scratch that ballot for you. We are unable to say whether the convention endorsed Bryan or Grover, but rather think Grover as the delegates from here were, W. R. Bloom, R. M. Day and Chris. Lau

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

The capitol improvement commission has anounced the award of the contract for the heating, ventilation and electric lighting of the state house, including the installing of new elevators, to L. H. Kurtz of Des Moines. Mr. Kuraz will begin work as soon as practicable and by the terms of the contract the improvements will be completed by December 1.

Mrs. John Thordson, who is confied in the county jail at Council Bluffs awaiting trial on the charge of chicken stealing made her second attempt to commit suicide. About a week ago she turned on the gas in her room and was discovered barely in time to save her life. Since then she has been very despondent and a careful watch has been kept on her. A few days ago she took a large hair ribbon from her hair, tied it around one of the bars of her cell and then around her neck. The ribbon was not strong enough to bear her weight and when she fell to the floor the attention of Jailer Martin was attracted. Mrs. Thordson's husband is now in the penitentiary at Fort Madison for taking part in the deals for which his wife is now awaiting trial.

Three men were killed and four injured as the result of a collision of a Rock Island passenger train and a gravel train at Elmira, twenty miles south of Cedar Rapids a few days ago. The accident was caused by the failure of the gravel train to clear the main track before the passenger arrived. The dead are: Eldon Herring, Lisbon; Earl Herring, Lisbon; Fred Risler, Davenport. The injured: Engineer T. A. Myers, skull probably fractured; Baggageman J. R. Barnes, leg and arm broken; J. R. Barnes, fireman on gravel train, cheek bone fractured; Ernest Veal, fireman on passenger, feet and elbow bruised; Theodore Heckt, Traer, Ia., slightly injured; James Morlock, Ottumwa, thumb cut; Mrs. J. Edward Cate, Chicago; Wm. Armstrong, Pullman porter, bruised. No wreck that has occurred within such a short distance of Cedar Rapids has presented the thrilling spectacle as did this one. The passenger train is a total wreck and the baggage car is badly smashed. It was thrown crosswise of the track, while the mail car and the smoker behind it were derailed. When the trains came together three sudden and distinct crashes like reports from a cannon were heard. The coaches weer well filled and for a few minutes after the collision pandemonium reigned among those on board. From all that can be learned of the catastrophe it appears that the gravel train crew were responsible for the wreck.

The banks of Iowa are in good condition according to the statement issued from the office of State Auditor Carroll, showing the state of their affairs at the close of business May 6. As compared with conditions at the close of business February 6, at the time of the last preceding call, there has been a gain of $1,037,000.71 in deposits. At the same time there has been a gain in the capital stock, a decrease in the amount due to banks and others, and an increase in the undivided profits and the surplus. The savings banks, however, make by far the best showing. They have increased their deposits since the last preceding call by considerably more than $2,000,000, while those of the state banks have fallen off about $1,000,000. In respect to overdrafts and the amounts borrowed from other banks, the advantage is also with the savings banks.

Robbers broke into the postoffice at Rhodes and took all of the stamps and the cash they could get hold of. The postmaster had just received a new invoice of stamps, probably three or four hundred dollars' worth. They are gone. The robbers broke in the front door by the aid of an iron bar, the same kind of an instrument used in robbing a store in Rhodes last fall. J. B. Satterfield is the postmaster.

Fred Reimers, the young man who has been missing from Iowa Falls since May 29th, turned up a few days ago unconscious that his disappearance had occasioned any excitement or had resulted in a search being made for him at Kansas City and other points He had been in Kansas City since the first of the month but had not written to relatives, and supposing the young man had met some ill-timed fate, search for him was instituted but without success.

General F. M. Drake has proposed that he will be one of three to give the $10,000 needed to put the Mason City Memorial university in condition to open for work this fall. James E. Blythe visited him in the interest of the university and the ex-governor assured him that he was ready to extend the university a helping hand. General Dodge of Council Bluffs has been considering giving one-third of the $10,000, and it is expected that General Russell A. Alger of Michigan will give the remaining third. He has not yet made known his decision. General Drake has been contemplating doing something for the university for some time and was glad of the opportunity to put it in shape to begin work.

Thomas Peterson, a young grocery clerk, about 21 years of age, committed suicide at Avoca recently. The young man was very popular, was quiet and had no bad habits. A few mornings since, after milking, he was apparently in the best of spirits and joked with a neighbor boy. Ten minutes later he went into a little cubby hole in the barn, tied himself to the rafters with a rope and kicked the box from under him. His grandfather heard the struggles and rushed into the barn. He attempted to release Peterson, but could not get into the small bin because of the kicking of the boy. When Peterson was cut down it was too late. None is able to give any plausible cause for the act. A peculiar coincidence in connection with the fact is that a young man employed in the same store also killed himself less than three months ago.

The democrats of Union county, in county convention, adopted the following resolution with reference to the tariff:

"We do not believe the policy of the republican party with reference to the tariff is just to the American people. We believe it to be inimical to the interest of the producing classes. That it enhances values without stimulating trade. That it thrives only in a restricted market. That it is a destroyer of the law of supply and demand, and cannot live in an open field of competition, and to that end we approve and endorse the Iowa idea as expressed in the last republican state platform, to-wit: 'We favor such amendment of the interstate commerce act as will more fully carry out its prohibition of discrimination and rate making and any modification of the tariff schedules that may be required to prevent from affording a shelter to monopoly.' And we charge the republican party of the state of Iowa in the year 1903 of repudiating this whole some doctrine."

LINCOLN MONUMENT AT CLERMONT.

Gift of Former Governor Larrabee to Town of Clermont.

BIG DAY FOR CLERMONT.

Lincoln Monument Presented and Henderson Statue Dedicated.

Clermont, June 20.—In the little town of Clermont, marked only as the home of Former Governor Larrabee, yesterday over 6,000 people assembled in recognition of the reunion of the Twelfth Iowa regiment, the presentation of the Lincoln monument and the unveiling and dedication of the magnificent bronze statue of Hon. D. B. Henderson, both works of art being the gift of Hon. William Larrabee.

While the presentation of the Lincoln monument and the address by Mr. Larrabee was attended by an unusual amount of interest, it was the magnificent bronze statue of Col. Henderson toward which the eyes of the comrades of the Twelfth Iowa turned. The ceremony was most impressive. As the folds were released by Miss Helen Larrabee, the youngest child the magnificent work of art, there were none present who failed to catch the solemnity of the occasion, while Col. Henderson, at the base, allowed his tears to fall unrestrained.

Upon the statue were draped two flags, one the flag which led his company into the engagement in which Col. Henderson lost his leg, and which is still dyed in the blood of Lieut. Cole, who lost his life there. The other, a flag made and presented by Miss Sorens, then preceptress of Upper Iowa university, and whose presentation speech was most effectively read by Miss Beulah Wright, of U. I. U.

Another pleasing feature was the same song by Mrs. Chas. D. Neff, of Upper Iowa University, sung from the same score used at the presentation of the flag. when the hoary heads now bowed with age, were the brave and gallant boys who enlisted in their country's cause from old Upper Iowa university. Some of these boys came from far-off states, but they were nearly all there, 150 of them, who looked at and listened to Col. Henderson with unconcealed admiration, and it was they who occupied seats of honor and cheered, laughed and cried with every word of their beloved Dave.

Senator Dolliver made the leading address of the day and this was responded to by Col. Henderson. Among those of note who were upon the platform were Hon. and Mrs. Larrabee, Hon. and Mrs. Henderson, Col. Sweeney, former member of congress from the Fourth district of Iowa; Col. Simpson of Kansas, Col. Rood of Mt. Vernon, Congressman Haugen of Northwood, Major Reed of Chicago, Major Terrill of Manchester, Abner Dunham, color-bearer; Hon. V. B. Dolliver of Fort Dodge, Mrs. S. B. Zeigler of West Union, Mrs. Otis, nurse of Twelfth Iowa, Capt. Merry of Dubuque, Col. Sturdevant of Minnesota.

ELEVEN KILLED IN A WRECK.

Passenger and Freight Trains Come Together Near Raymond.

Waterloo, June 20.—Eleven killed and two injured is the result of wrong reading of orders by a freight crew. At 2:45 o'clock yesterday passenger train No. 2 on the Illinois Central collided head on into a freight one mile west of Raymond, the first station east of here. Had it not been for the make-up of the passenger train the death list would have been appalling, as the passenger was crowded with travelers. The Pullmans had been placed in the center of the train, with the coaches on behind. The weight of the Pullmans counteracted the force of the collision and steadied the train. The list of dead: John R. Griffin, engineer of passenger; E. J. Bantz of Waterloo, fireman on passenger; Fred Scooman of Waterloo, engineer of the freight; J. C. Mills of Waterloo, fireman of the freight; E. R. Stickney, brakeman of the freight, of Waterloo; three tramps, unidentified; one immigrant, unidentified; Postal Clerk Groom of Dubuque.

The accident took place upon a curve. Neither engineer knew of the approach of the other until the headlight of the opposing engine popped up in front with only ten feet apart. The passenger was going at the rate of fifty miles an hour, and inside of a second both engines were fit only for junk, and the lives of the engine crews had been wiped out of existence. It was all due to the misreading of orders by the freight crew. They had no right to the track and had just left Raymond, although they should have remained until the passenger had passed.

The worst damage was done to the freight train, there being seventeen cars piled on top of the other, with the baggage car upon top of the bunch. Pieces of steel from the engine were hurled a distance of two hundred feet, and the fact that none of the passengers in the three sleepers were injured seems almost miraculous.

Cyrus Smith, one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens of Webster City, died a few days ago. Mr. Smith came to Webster City in 1855 from New Hampshire. In the same year he was appointed the first postmaster of that city by Franklin Pierce. At that time Mr. Smith became engaged in the general merchandise business and built the largest store building on the Boone river. The nearest railroad at that time was the Illinois Central at Dubuque, a distance of 173 miles, from which place Mr. Smith hauled his goods by wagon. In 1857 he was elected recorder and treasurer of the county. He continued in the merchandising business until 1886, when he started the Renwick State bank at Renwick. Later he became interested in the Hamilton County State bank of Webster City and was its chashier from 1886 until 1893, since whcih time he has been actively and extensively engaged in the real estate business.

Changes at De Wick.

...en Matilda received a letter from ...ony Lynn, she was immediately ...in that the old man's conscience ...led him in the presence of death, ...hat he wished to return de Wick ... rightful owner. Sir Thomas and ... Jevery were of the same opinion, ...he two ladies started for de Wick ...ce.

...thony Lynn stood at the door to ... them. He looked ill and frail, ...hardly like death, and when he ...essed the delight of the ladies at ...hanges made in de Wick, his face ... almost young in its pleasure. ...y room in the house was a fresh ...rise; for through all that was ...rable through age or family asso...on, and all that was valuable and ...tiful had been preserved, yet so ... of modern splendor and worth ...been mingled with the old that ...rooms were apparently newly fur...ed. Matilda said enthusiastically: ...r. Lynn, seeing that the de Wicks ...to leave their ancient home, I am ... it has fallen to you—and I am ... my father is glad, also."

...en the old man burst into that ... wild passion of weeping so sig...ant of age, and so pitiful in its ...lessness. "It is your father's do... Lady Matilda," he sobbed. "It is ...dear lord's wisdom. Pardon me ... This evening I will tell you all." ...went away with these words, and ...two women looked at each other ...mazement.

... the evening he came to them. ...en these dreadful wars first be..." he said, "Earl de Wick foresaw ... ending, and after Marton Moor ...said to me, 'I know this man, Oli... Cromwell, and there is none that ... stand against him. It is my duty ...ave de Wick; will you help me?' ... I said to him, 'My dear lord, I ... you all I am, and all I have.' ...n it was agreed that I should join ... Puritan party, that I should pre... a disapproval of the Earl and his ...ys—but a disapproval tempered ...h regret—so that men might not ...pect my opposition. The king was ...n then sending to de Wick for ...ney, and I was supposed to supply ...n the de Wick silver and valuables. ...reality, the Earl sent these things ...my care, and he himself gave the ...d. Then there came a time when ... Wick was bare, and the king still ...about money. And the Earl prom...d to borrow from me one thousand ...unds, in consideration of letters ...al making the Lady Matilda Coun... de Wick in her own right, if her ...ther Stephen had no heirs of his ...y. Here are the papers relating to ...r succession, and here are those ...ating to my trust in the matter of ... de Wick silver and valuables."

Thus Matilda virtually became mis...ss of her old home. Anthony was ...dom seen, but Stephen de Wick ...me and went, and brought with him ...n whose names were not spoken, ...d whose business meant much more ...an the packs of cards which ap...ared to be all they cared for. In ...t, Matilda was soon neck deep in ...ince Rupert's plot, and there was no ...ubt in her mind that the month of ...y would end the life of Oliver Crom...ll, and bring the king to his throne ...d the de Wicks to their earldom.

She was sitting, one afternoon, talk...g to Stephen, when a servant en...red. "My lady," he said, "here has ...me a man with a letter, which he ...ll deliver to none but you." Matilda ...dered the messenger to her presence ... once. Hastily she glanced over the lines, until she came to the discovery of the plot.

"Oh, indeed, here is the burden of Jane Swaffham!" she cried in a passion. "We are discovered. Stephen, you are in instant danger. You must away at once."

"And pray, how? or where? I will not run. I will stand or fall with the rest."

"What drivel, what nonsensical bombast are you talking? You must take the North Road to Hull; you are sure of a ship there."

He rose as she spoke, and she kissed him with passionate tenderness. When he left the room, she ran to the roof of the house to watch which road he took. In about a quarter of an hour she saw him riding at great speed northward, and watched him until he became a speck on the horizon.

Then she went to her room and in a leisurely manner put on her garden hat and walked to the stables. She went at once to a young man known to be Stephen de Wick's constant attendant whenever he was in the neighborhood. She knew he could be relied on, and as they stood together by Matilda's Barbary mare, she said with the critical air of one talking about a favorite animal, "Yupon, you know the three large oak trees, just beyond the boundary of de Wick?"

"I know them well, my lady."

"Be under the oaks to-night, at 8 o'clock. Have with you a lantern and a coil of strong rope. You will see Earl de Wick there, and when he speaks, join him on the instant. Can he rely on you?"

"By my soul he can, even to bloodletting."

"Be this our bargain then. Eight o'clock—no later."

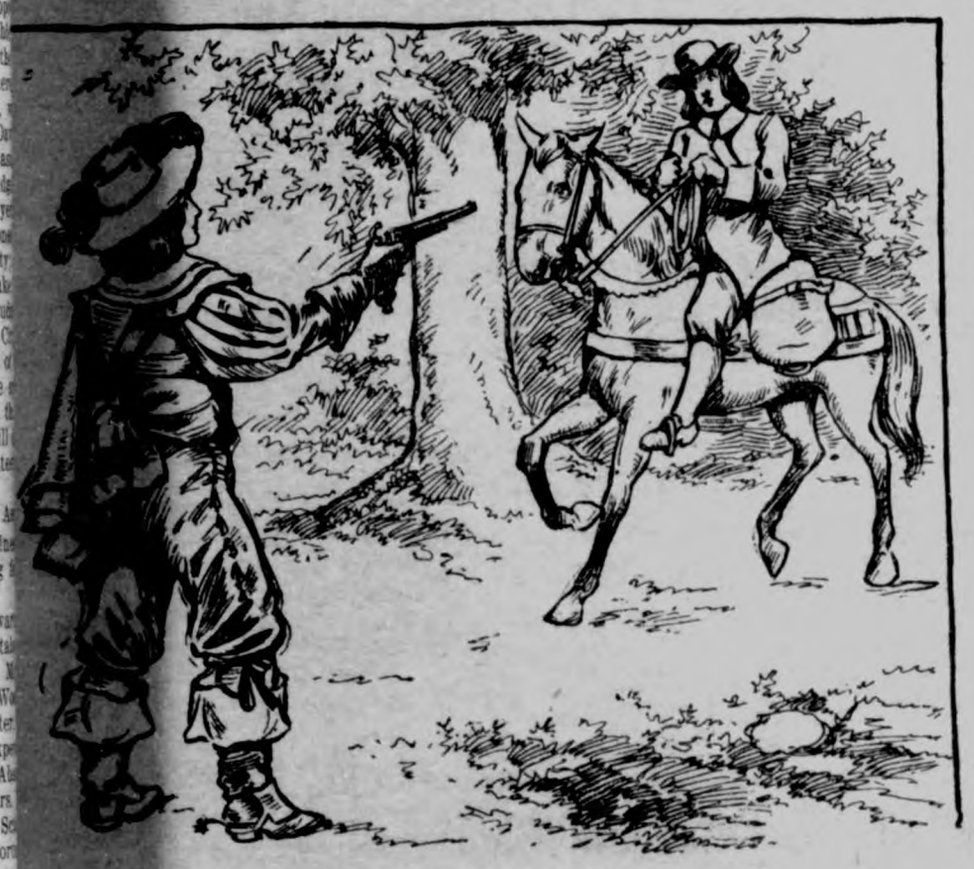
"Let me perish if I am not there."

All the man's words had the savor of a strong, faithful spirit, and Matilda went back satisfied. About 7 o'clock she went to her brother's room and brought away a suit of his clothing, and when she had dressed herself in it, and put a pistol and hunting knife in her belt, and a large plumed hat on her head, she looked in the mirror with the utmost satisfaction. She was her brother's double; quite his height, and singularly like him in carriage, face and manner.

Matilda walked quickly through the garden, and without molestation she arrived at the three oaks. Yupon Slade was already there. For nearly an hour Matilda walked up and down the road, keeping well within call of her companion. But about nine o'clock the sound of a horse coming at an easy gallop was heard, and Yupon was softly called. He was at Matilda's side as the rider came near them. She advanced to meet him, calling pleasantly, "Miles Watson, a word, if it please you."

The voice was familiar and kind, and Miles drew rein and asked, "Who calls me? I am on the Commonwealth's business, and cannot be delayed."

Then Matilda, pointing the pistol in his face, said, "You must light from your horse, Miles Watson." The pistol was dangerously near; Yupon's rough order "to tumble" was not unaccompanied by threats, and Watson thought it best to obey quietly, where he could not resist. When Yupon had bound him securely, Matilda took the lantern, and drawing from her girdle the sharp hunting knife, she cut open the leathern mail bag and turned the light upon its contents. The small private letters she hardly noticed, but there were three ominous looking papers closed with large red seals, and these she instantly seized. They were all directed to the sheriff of Ely, and she felt sure they were the authority for Stephen's arrest. She took possession of the whole three, bade Yupon set loose the horse, and leaving the other contents of the rifled mail bag on the grass by the side of the bound carrier, she slipped away into the shadows and darkness of de Wick chase.



"You must light from your Horse, Miles Watson."

There was still fire on her hearth, and she pushed the dying logs together, and lit a candle by their blaze. Then she opened one of the letters. It was a warrant for the arrest of Squire Mason. The next opened was a warrant for the arrest of Lord Frederick Blythe; but the third was, truly enough, the warrant for the arrest of Stephen de Wick, for treason against the Commonwealth and conspiracy against the life of the Protector. She drew her mouth tightly, and tore the whole three warrants across, and threw them into the flames. When they were ashes, she turned quickly, divested herself of her brother's clothing, and put on her own garments. Then she carried Stephen's suit to his room, and afterwards put out the candle and went to bed.

Matilda's plan had, however, been too hastily formed and carried out to admit of a thorough consideration, and in her hurry of rifling the mail, it had not occurred to her that one of those small, unimportant looking letters might also be for the sheriff. This in fact was the case. When daylight brought rescue to the bound carrier the rejected letters were gathered up, and one of them was a letter of instructions regarding the three warrants to be served. It directed the sheriff to take Mason and Blythe to Ely for trial, but to bring Stephen de Wick to the Tower of London.

The sheriff was in a passion of disappointment, and hastily securing a warrant to arrest Stephen de Wick for mail robbery, he went to de Wick to serve it.

It was Delia who, about the noon hour, came flying into her lady's presence with the news that the sheriff was in the stables talking to Yupon Slade, and that he had two constables with him.

"What do they want, Delia? I suppose I must say whom do they want? Is it Mr. Lynn, or Lady Jevery, or myself?"

"I think it will be Earl de Wick they are after, my lady."

"'Tis most likely. Bid them to come in and find Earl de Wick."

The men were about an hour making their search, and during this interval Lady Jevery had been summoned, and Anthony Lynn had received the stimulating drug on which he relied. But he was very ill, and Lady Jevery, who adored her nephew, was weeping and full of anxious terror. Matilda vainly assured her Stephen was safe.

At this point the sheriff re-entered the room. He was in a vile temper, and did not scruple to exercise it. "The man has gone," he said to Anthony Lynn; "and I believe you know all about the affair. You are none of Cromwell's friend. Many people beside me say that of you."

"I am glad they do me so much honor. Cromwell! Who is Cromwell? A man to joy the devil. No, I am not his friend!" and with a radiant smile, "I thank my Maker for it."

The sheriff turned to his attendants.

"You hear the traitor!" he cried. "You heard Anthony Lynn turn his back on himself! I knew him always for a black heart and a double tongue. We must have a warrant for him, and that at once."

"Fool!" said the trembling, tottering old man, with a superhuman scorn, as his clay-like face suddenly flamed into its last color. "Warrant! warrant! Oliver Cromwell has no warrant to fit my name. I go now on the warrant of the King of kings. Matilda! Stephen! I am going to my dear lord—to my dear King—to my dear God!" and as a strong man shakes off a useless garment, so Anthony Lynn dropped his body, and in that moment his spirit flew away further than thought could follow it.

"What a villain!" cried the sheriff.

"Villain, in your face," answered Matilda passionately. "Out of the presence of holy death! You are not fit to stand by his dead body! Go, on this instant! Sure, if you do not, there are those who will make you!"

With these words she cried out for her servants in a voice full of horror and grief, and the first person to answer her cry was Cymlin Swaffham. Matilda went to his side, clung to his arm, pointed to the dead man on the hearth and the domineering figure of the sheriff above it, and cried, "Cymlin, Cymlin, send him away! Oh, 'twas most unmercifully done!"

"Sir," said Cymlin, "you exceed your warrant. Have you arrested Stephen de Wick?"

"The man has run, Mr. Swaffham, and madame there knows it."

"You have nothing to do with Lady Matilda. If the house has been searched, your business here is finished. You can go."

AGRICULTURE

Progress at the Kansas Branch Station.

From the Farmers' Review: The heavy snows and early rains put the ground in good shape for spring work. The 200 acres of fall wheat sown is excellent. Of the 165 varieties sown, all but 22 came through the winter. Of those that did not get through the larger part failed on account of poor seed as no stand was secured. A few winter killed. Only one of the nine varieties of rye sown gives promise. The area devoted to each variety varies from the small space given a few grains to over twenty acres. The larger number are hybrids of the best varieties in this section, and varieties that have been introduced from other countries where conditions are similar. It is the object to watch each variety carefully, with the hope of finding better yieldings, and more desirable varieties. Careful notes are taken frequently regarding each variety. Some of them have already shown great promise. The Macaroni wheats are also receiving attention. Five varieties were sown on sod last spring, and in addition thirteen new varieties have been sown, covering an area of nearly 40 acres. Also 22 varieties of barley, and 18 varieties of oats have been sown this spring. This makes 230 varieties of small grain on an area of 340 acres. The work with grains and grasses is largely in co-operation with the United States Department of Agriculture. Work in irrigation is also being begun in co-operation with the irrigation investigation. Large wells are being put down, and centrifugal pumps will be used to raise the water, which will be applied to various crops in comparison with the same crops not irrigated. Quite a number of varieties of corn will also be tried. These have been collected from Old Mexico and other places in the drier parts of the country. As a beginning in horticulture and forestry, 400 fruit trees, consisting of apples, peaches, plums and cherries, and 300 berries have been planted. One thousand forest trees have been set for shelter and shade. Four thousand small seedling cedars and pines are planted under a partial shade to give them as nearly as possible natural conditions. After two years in the nursery they will be transplanted along the creek banks to beautify the twelve miles of timber that grows along the stream. The legislature last winter appropriated $32,500 for equipment and maintenance for the next two years.—J. G. Haney, Fort Hays, Kans.

Value of Barnyard Manure.

Few realize the great value of barnyard manure, in comparison with other fertilizers. In the regions devoted to market gardening, barnyard manure is found to be a necessity, if large quantities of commercial fertilizers are to be used. In some way it assists the elements found in the manure, even though these elements may be the same as in the manure. In Germany some experiments along this line have given rather surprising results. The greatest yields of root crops were obtained only when barnyard manure was used in conjunction with the commercial fertilizers. The experimenters there express the belief that this is due to the mechanical effect on the soil of the barnyard manure. Another surprising result was the discovery that even though a very heavy application of nitrate of soda was made, the plants took up less nitrogen than when barnyard manure was used in conjunction with it, and a dressing of barnyard manure alone gave heavier crops of potatoes and turnips than when nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash were applied in their commercial forms. A new fact seems to be brought to light, as it is said that a quantity of nitrogen taken up from the barnyard manure produced more substance than when the same quantity was taken up from the commercial fertilizer. Just how much the difference was we do not know, but if considerable, it should lead to some experiments to find the cause of this.

The barnyard manure was found to be less valuable than manure from stalls where it had not been exposed to the weather.

These experiments teach lessons that are applicable to soils of old lands, or such as are deficient in nitrogen. It is evident that in soils having an abundance of available nitrogen and humus the application of barnyard manure would have little or no effect. For it is manifestly impossible to scientifically treat any soil without knowing its mechanical construction, its content of available plant food and its usual supply of humus and moisture.

What do we live for, if not to make life less difficult for each other?—George Eliot.

Orchard Treatment.

From the Farmers' Review: Old orchards, four times out of five, means nothing more nor less than neglected orchards, for trees of the fruit-bearing class grow old rapidly when ill-treated. The first point to consider is the common custom of treating fruit-bearing trees as if they were ordinary forest trees, without any needs in the line of soil cultivation. There are many reasons why orchards should be cultivated quite the same as annual crops. The soil needs opening up, that air and sunshine may penetrate to some depth, also weeds and grass use water needed by the trees, to say nothing of the fertilizer they consume. Perhaps the most important point in this connection is the very matter of water consumption. A soil thoroughly broken up by tillage holds water like a sponge, and will draw it from great depths; now, if kept free of weeds, and the top two or three inches is kept thoroughly pulverized by means of a fine-toothed harrow, an earth mulch is obtained which is every bit as good as a mulch of chopped straw or grass clippings. It prevents the soil water from loss from surface evaporation, and as the trees are continually using the water within reach of its roots from every direction about the tree there is a flow through the soil towards these roots, but for the earth mulch, this flow would be towards the surface, where the winds would carry it off. It is not alone the loss of water to be guarded against. This soil water carries in solution more or less plant food, and when it is drawn to the tree by means of what might be called root suction, the fertilizer goes with it. If the water is lost by surface evaporation, this plant food does not reach the tree. It is important to note, however, that a bare soil must be kept pulverized on the surface. If it is allowed to bake and form a crust, surface loss of water commences at once. In short, the orchard, if it is expected to do good work, must be cultivated quite as thoroughly as a field of corn.

The question of plant foods for orchards has been neglected fully as much as tillage, though for less cause, as we all know now that plants must be fed regularly to make useful growth. Annual crops remove plant food ingredients from the soil we all admit, but many of us do not regard fruit trees in the same light. Trees make more or less annual growth both above and below the ground, also the leaves and blossoms form a very respectable weight of material, all of which is comparatively very rich in potash and phosphates. To these must be added the fruit crop, which also needs a very considerable amount of plant food. The fruit is what we want, and it is the fruit which takes its supply of plant food last. Between the new wood and root growth, blossoms and leaves, and the crop of fruit, the yearly needs of an orchard in plant food is every bit as large, if not larger, than grain crops of the more exhausting kind. Therefore, if an annual grain crop needs plant food, it is just as certain that orchards on the same soil also need manuring. There is, however, a difference in the plant food needs of a grain crop and a fruit crop. To grow fruit also a crop of leaves and wood in the shape of branches, roots, etc. Now, leaves are rich in potash and phosphates; the wood, etc., is higher in potash than in phosphates, and the fruit shows many pounds of potash to every pound of phosphoric acid. The natural conclusion is, therefore, that fruit manuring is largely a matter of mineral manures,—potash and phosphates.

We have now shown that plant food should be used, the next point is how much and what kind. Manures rich in ammonia (nitrogen) may be all right for grain, but they will not do for fruit,—make too much leaf and green wood growth. The plant itself suggests potash and phosphates. Phosphates may be obtained as ordinary acid phosphate, bone meal or bone tankage; potash as German potash salts, such as kainit or muriate. Do not trust too much to fertilizer of high sounding name only. With us bone and tankage products are cheap, and a mixed fertilizer is apt to contain ammonia and phosphorus, but very little potash. There is not any potash to speak of in bone or tankage. Look at the analysis, and see that the potash (actual potash) is at least as high as the phosphoric acid. If it is not possible to get a fertilizer satisfactory, use per acre three parts of bone meal to one part of muriate of potash, and use it every year.—R. Garwood.

Meservey Easy.

On Wednesday the Klemme ball team went to Meservey to play a return game with the Meservey aggregation, and, of course, won in a walk. The game was called about three o'clock and as the Meservey boys took their positions it made one's blood run cold—for they were a husky lot of fellows and were clad in all the colors of the rainbow. The ground was in good shape—but few of the bogs visible — balance being hid by the grass.

For five long innings did the Meservey team strive in vain to circle the diamond, and at the beginning of the sixth the Klemme boys out of compassion for them and to save the embarrassment of a shut-out on their own grounds and that before their sweethearts and admirers gave way and allowed them to score. Then by a series of decisions favorable to Meservey and by a few costly errors on the part of the Klemme boys they succeeded in getting five scores during the balance of the game, and this was really more than we expected to give them.

Ed. Ell was there with the goods and the Meservey team seemed unable to find his "crooked ones." A more highly elated lot of fellows would be hard to find than the Meservey boys because they happened to get a hit or two off Kluckhohn, but as the game was well in hand there was no occasion for Kluckhohn to spread himself. The brilliant playing by the Meservey team was done by Chas. Ell, of Thornton, and Allie White, of Goodell.

For the benefit of strangers who have never heard of Meservey we will say that it is a small town southeast of here situated on the banks of a marsh, without a hotel, and has an umpire. The score was 9 to 5 in favor of Klemme.

RUSSIA DEMANDS SERVIAN REVENCE

Says King Peter Cannot Let Traitorous Criminals Escape Hands of Justice.

WELCOMES THE NEW KING

Expresses Confidence That King Peter Will Investigate the Abominable Deed and Mete Out Punishment to the Criminals.

St. Petersburg, June 19.—An official note was published in the Gazette yesterday recognized Peter Karageorgevitch as king of Servia and welcoming his accession. In brief, the note declares that it is incumbent upon King Peter to avenge the assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga, and expresses the conviction that he will know how to severely punish the regicides, whose misdeeds should not be visited on the entire Servian nation or army. The note adds that it would be dangerous to the tranquility of Servia to leave the crime unpunished.

The text of the note follows:

"A week has now elapsed since the day of the bloody revolution at Belgrade, an intimation of which could not be given to the imperial government in the customary official form because legal authority was lacking in Servia. Strictly adhering to her standpoint of non-intervention in the internal affairs of the Balkan states and at the same time finding it impossible to hold any intercourse with the persons who have arbitrarily usurped power, Russia has awaited the conclusion of the trouble in order to clear her attitude toward the events in the kingdom of Servia. The Skuoschtina assembled in extraordinary session June 16, the legal order of things being re-established and Prince Peter Karageorgevitch unanimously elected king. The prince, complying with the request of the national assembly, has consented to ascend the throne of Servia under the name of Peter I. Immediately after the proclamation the new king telegraphed to the czar asking his imperial majesty to recognize him as king, whereupon the reply of his majesty in confirmation of this was sent.

"The imperial government, while hailing the election of the new monarch, scion of a glorious dynasty and wishing all success he has so well begun, to the supreme head of the Servian people, which is allied to Russia by the cause of religion, can nevertheless not refrain from expressing the confident hope that King Peter will be able to give evidence of his sense of justice and firmness of will by adopting measures at the outset to investigate the abominable deed that has been committed and mete out rigorous punishment to those traitorous criminals who have stained themselves with the infamy attaching to regicides. Of course, the entire Servian nation or army cannot be held responsible for the crime which revolts public conscience, yet it would be dangerous to Servia's internal peace not to exact expiation for the revolution carried out with violence by the military. Such neglect would inevitably react in an unfavorable manner on the relations of all the states with Servia and would create for Servia serious difficulties at the very commencement of the reign of King Peter I.

"Their Russian co-religionists offer to God supplications for the repose of the souls of King Alexander and his consort, who have met an untimely end and they invoke the blessings of the Almighty on the rule of King Peter for the welfare and prosperity of the Servian people."

CLEVELAND DOESN'T WANT IT.

Wants to Spend Remaining Days With Family at Princeton.

New York, June 20.—The World publishes a dispatch from Princeton, N. J., quoting Ex-President Cleveland as saying:

"It is perfectly absurd to suppose for an instant that I have any desire to re-enter public life. Nor have I remotely entertained the thought since I left Washington, more than six years ago. The matter is as far from my thoughts as it was in 1896, when, all must admit, it was not within my hearing or sight. I have no higher aspiration than to pass my days in peace with my family around me, and take no part in politics which any private citizen cannot take with the utmost propriety.

"I have never spoken to anybody on the subject of a fourth candidacy. I have never written to a single political friend one way or the other, nor have I been written to or spoken to by them. There is not a political leader of any prominence endeavoring to advance any movement to nominate me in any state, so far as I have been advised, nor do I anticipate that any such effort will be made by any leader, prominent or obscure, in any locality.

"I have on several occasions within a year undertaken to perform the labor which usually falls to the private life in the ranks, but there has not lurked within me the hope of any reward save the consciousness of having made an effort to assist in bringing about salutary conditions in the party."

THE PICKET WINS

Kentucky Colt Captures American Derby From Big Field.

Chicago, June 22.—The Picket, a horse that never before flashed first past the post, won the American derby. He set the pace every step of the distance, was never challenged and won in a gallop by six lengths. He ran the derby distance, a mile and a half, faster than it was ever run before in that race. His time was 2:33. Claude, the winner of three derbies, was second. Bernays, the Cincinnati candidate, was third.

It was a race without the thrill of an exciting finish. The crowd of 70,000 people which witnessed the sixteenth running of the event, saw a contest that was decided when the field turned into the stretch. In front of a struggling field The Picket ran so easily and truly as to leave no doubt where he would finish.

The derby was a record breaking turf event in more than the fast time that was made. Nineteen horses went to the post, the largest previous field being fifteen. The largest crowd that ever gathered on a western race track covered the Washington park grounds. The race worth $32,275 gross value, the richest in the history of the race, with one exception. Betting on the result began in March and continued until the horses went to the post. More money, it is asserted, was wagered on the derby than on any other race ever run in America.

ONE JUROR FOR ACQUITTAL.

Eleven Men at Jackson Would Have Convicted Jett of Murder.

Jackson, Ky., June 20.—But for one juror, Curtis Jett would have been convicted here yesterday for the murder of Marcum, and a majority of the jury favored the conviction of Thomas White, also. Both are now one hundred miles from home, in jail at Lexington, and their next trial will be at Cynthiana, over one hundred miles from Jackson, away from the mountains and in the blue grass region, under very different conditions from those existing in Breathitt county. The interest in the change of venue yesterday was second only to the verdict. With general confidence in the surroundings of the next trial, there is a belief here that "everything is for the best after all." If the verdict had been one of conviction, the residents here feel that violence would have followed, and that it would have extended to others than witnesses, jurors and those who had taken part in the prosecution. It is thought now that after the trials of Jett and White in Harrison county the cases of other assassins who are known here, and who have never been arrested, will be taken up with some assurances of justice on a change of venue.

ATTEMPT ON LIFE OF CZAR

Matter Has Been Kept a Profound Secret and Would-be Assassins Not Named.

THE REPORT IS STARTLING

Claimed Members of the Imperial Family Would Look Calmly On Such a Proceeding—Report Involves the Czarina.

Berlin, June 22.—The attempt to assassinate the czar of Russia, just made known, has revealed to all Europe that the ruler of Russia stands in danger of sharing the fate of King Alexander of Servia, and of his own ancestor, Czar Paul, who was murdered more than a century ago.

An even more startling report than that of the attempted assassination is contained in the leading review, Die Lanationa, and is to the effect that members of the Russian imperial family look with equanimity on the ruler's danger. Some say the czarina shares in this view. The malcontents may deem it patriotic to murder the czar in his own palace. The attempt upon the life of the czar was made at Tsarakee Selo, on the eve of the departure of the count for the imperial villa at New Peterhoff.

The would-be assassin attempted to gain admittance to the presence of the czar in the uniform of a superior officer of the gendarmeri.

An effort was made to hush up the affair, because of the nervous condition of the czar since the Belgrade royal massacre. Nothing has yet been made public, however, as to the identity of the would-be assassin. The most amazing report yet received, however, is that the czarina shares in the general condemnation of her husband's weakness and would view without great regret his assassination. The amiability of the czarina's character has long been known in Europe and the report is not generally credited. Apparently the attempt on the czar's life has been kept a profound secret from the public by himself.

BLOODY BATTLE IN MOROCCO.

Forces of El Menebhi Cut to Pieces By Forces of Bu Hamara.

London, June 22.—Word has been received here of a bloody battle in Morocco, in which the forces under El Menebhi were cut to pieces by the rebels under Bu Hamara. The battle is said to have taken place near Ammeduina, and the losses are put down at more than six thousand fighting men.

From the same source on February 12 a report was received that El Menebhi had been killed in a battle with the rebels led by Bu Hamara, the pretender to the throne.

Since the rebellion began in Morocco, months ago, and the pretender gave battle at the gates of Fez, one of the most active in the campaign against the rebels has been El Menebhi, who, in addition to being minister of war, is considered the closest political friend in the household of the sultan.

It was El Menebhi who was sent to the coronation of King Edward. On that occasion the British cruiser Diadem was put at his disposal for the trip. The Moorish representative brought with him a retinue of twenty-nine persons, including a few wives.

The rebellion in Morocco is said to have been caused by the sultan being too progressive. In the past few years he has introduced telephones, railways, newspapers and bicycles into his dominion, and made an effort to abolish the torture of prisoners.

On one occasion the sultan was cooped up in Fez, and it looked as though the rebellion would be a success. He made peace with his brothers, who liberated him from prison, and thousands of Bu Hamara's men are fighting in his ranks.

It was reported then and several times after that the pretender, as Bu Hamara is called, had been killed. He escaped to the mountains and continued his war. El Menebhi, with a large force, took the field against him. The first report of the result of the expedition says he has been defeated, with a loss of six thousand men.

TO INVESTIGATE PEONAGE.

Judge Speer Orders Grand Jury to Go to Bottom of the Matter.

Macon, Ga., June 19.—In the United States court yesterday Judge Emory Speer, in his charge to the federal grand jury, sprung a surprise. He called attention to the fact that it had been charged that a system of peonage existed in certain parts of the southern district of Georgia, in contravention of the constitution of that state, which provides "there shall be no imprisonment for debt," and that the constitution of the United States provides neither slavery, nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist in the United States or any place subject to its jurisdiction. He called the attention of the jury to a case presented to him; charged the jury to make diligent inquiry and if it found the statement true, it was its duty to return an indictment against the guilty parties

STORIETTES.

Luigi Arditi, under the guidance of his pupil, Mme. Valleria, and her husband, once paid a visit to Stratford-on-Avon, where he was shown all the relics connected with the immortal Shakespeare. "Ah!" exclaimed the enthusiastic conductor, when matters were explained to him, "Shakespeare, Romeo e Giulietta, Macbet, Hamlet. Ah! I understand, ze librettist."

A subscriber of the Argonant says that some days before the arrival of President Roosevelt at Vallejo, a dentist of that city had a Lake County lady in the chair and acquainted her, in the course of their conversation, with the approaching presidential visit. Whereupon the highly interested lady remarked: "Is Mrs. Cleveland coming along, too?" The dentist, it is said, did not recover for an hour.

A statement was printed in the Topeka Capital that Wm. Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, wore a plug hat at the dinner given to President Roosevelt in Topeka. Soon after Mr. White returned to Emporia he sent this dispatch to the Capital: 'Deny story that I wore plug hat. Mob forming around office. Sheriff refuses protection. Wife consulting attorney, seeking divorce. Printers threatening strike."

In his "Outre Mer," Paul Bourget declared that "life can never get entirely dull to the American, because whenever he can not strike any other way to put in his time, he can always get away with a few years trying to find out who his grandfather was." To which Mark Twain replied: "I reckon the Frenchman's got his little stand-by for a dull time, too, because when all other interests fail he can turn in and see if he can't find out who his father was."

When the skeleton of the first gorilla brought to Europe by Paul du Chaillu was on show in London, the public was admitted on presentation of cards. The late Duke of Argyll wrote to Du Chaillu that on such and such a day "the Duke of Argyll proposed to visit the gorilla." Dd Chaillu, who was of very quick temper and refused to be patronized, at once wrote back that the gorilla was to be seen every day between certain hours, and that if the duke presented his card he would no doubt be admitted like the rest of the public.

At a recent meeting of the London Authors' Club, Canon Teignmouth Shore spoke of having met James Russell Lowell shortly after that gentleman had gone as minister to England. "That distinguished man was cogitating over his first public utterance in this country, and wondering to what length he should speak. He had thought of speaking for about forty minutes. He had asked a countryman of his what his view was, and had received this answer: 'Well, Mr. Lowell, my advice to you is that if you find that, after you have been speaking two minutes you have not struck oil, you had better give up boring.'"

A Cure for Dropsy.

Sedgwick, Ark., June 22d.—Mr. W. S. Taylor of this place says:

"My little boy had Dropsy. Two doctors—the best in this part of the country—told me he would never get better, and to have seen him anyone else would have said they were right. His feet and limbs were swollen so that he could not walk nor put on his shoes.

"Wnen the doctors told me he would surely die, I stopped giving him their medicine and began giving him Dodd's Kidney Pills. I gave him three pills a day and at the end of eight days the swelling was all gone, but as I wanted to be sure, I kept on with the pills for some time, gradually reducing the quantity, till finally I stopped altogether.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved my child's life. Before using them he was a helpless invalid in his mother's arms from morning till night. Now he is a healthy, happy child, running and dancing and singing. I can never express our gratitude.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills entirely cured our boy after everybody, doctors and all, had given him up to die."

THREATEN TO LYNCH INDIANA TEACHER

Mob Is Enraged at Story of Girl Pupil, Who Charges Instructor With Paternity.

Brazil, Ind., June 22.—Wild excitement followed the hearing in the case of Gus White, held on a paternity charge filed by Miss Mabel Sanders, a pretty 16-year-old girl, and his pupil. The friends and relatives of the girl had closed about the prisoner, and Justice Couch hastily bound him over to the circuit court and ordered him taken to jail. As the officer was descending the stairway the cries of "Lynch him" came from the angry crowd that had been frenzied by the girl's pathetic story. Prompt action of cooler heads prevented serious trouble, and White was hustled off to jail. White has taught in the public schools for years, and last season held the principalship at Beeridge school. He has for years been an active church worker.

IN EVERY WALK OF LIFE.

People in every walk of life have bad backs.

Kidneys go wrong and the back begins to ache.

Cure sick kidneys and backache quickly disappears.

Read this testimony and learn how it can be done.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that I was obliged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicine I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I was unfit for anything. Mrs. Boyce noticed Doan's Kidney Pills advertised as a sure cure for just such conditions, and one day when in Trenton she brought a box home from Chas. A. Foster's drug store. I followed the directions carefully when taking them and I must say I was more than surprised and much more gratified to notice the backache disappearing gradually, until it finally stopped."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Boyce will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

Makes Casks of Cordwood.

A resident at Guelma, in Algeria, has taken out a patent for the manufacture of casks in corkwood. An interior coating isolates the contents from contact with the cork. A barrel of eleven gallons weighed thirty pounds instead of eighty pounds, which is the weight of a wooden cask of the same capacity. Cork being a bad conductor of heat and cold the necessity of adding alcohol for the preservation of wine would be unnecessary, and the liquid would no longer be subject to the fluctuation of temperature. In warm climates these casks might be useful for conveying ice, meat, fish or fruits. A great saving on the freight expense would also be obtained, considering a cork barrel weighs two-thirds less than a wooden one. The influence of heat can not warp the staves, consequently the hoops remain in place.

Male Teachers Decreasing.

The number of men employed as teachers in the public schools of this country, according to United States Commissioner of Education Harris is slowly but steadily decreasing. In 1870 41 per cent of the teachers were males, and in 1900 the percentage had fallen to 29. The reason for the abandonment of school teaching by men is that it does not pay well enough.

Canada's Timber Lands.

The impression that British North America is covered with valuable timber is fallacious. Black walnut, red cedar and white oak are not found north of Toronto. A line drawn from the city of Quebec to Sault Ste Marie will designate the northern limit of beech, elm and birch. The north shore of Lake Superior will mark the northern boundary of sugar hard maple.

Cash Against Credit.

Every question has at least two sides and usually its advantages or disadvantages. This is especially true of buying goods on time or on credit.

The mer chant who sells for cash has every advantage over the one who sells on credit, for the reason that he always has the cash to pay for his goods and thus gets the cash discount and further more he can buy goods at a lower price; this also gives him the advantage in selling, he not only owns his stock cheaper but has no expense for collections, nor any loses from poor accounts.

No merchant ever sold goods on credit without losing a part of what he had on his books. Why then is he successful? Is it not because the people who pay for what they buy, pay enough more than they should for their goods, to make good the loss? In other words you pay for your goods and other fellows too, don't you?

I have conducted business under both systems, and have fo .nd that a great many people prefer the cash system. Everybody buys as cheap as he can, and if he finds that he can buy cheaper by paying cash——well what will he do? What will you do?

I have a fresh lot of groceries of the best quality, at prices lower than you can buy elsewhere also a line of seasonable hardware, such as, hay forks, hay fork carriers, hay rope, common forks, scythes, paints, machine oils, axle grease and etc. also kerosene and gasoline stoves, all of which I will sell you for less than you have been in the habit of paying.

Come in and get our prices before buying elsewhere.

Yours for business.

A Touching Incident Indeed.

The Japan Times reports a remarkable case of the engineer being hoist with his own petard. Our esteemed contemporary says: "Two convicts were executed at the Ichigaya prison on Wednesday. One of them, Matsutaro Sohtome, was a carpenter, and said while climbing up to the guilotine that it had been built by himself during his previous service at the prison some years ago for the offense of larceny. He was much touched by this strange incident." Who would not be?

KANSAS CITY PLATFORM IS REJECTED

Reaffirmation Forces Go Down to Defeat, Fighting to the Last.

J. B. SULLIVAN FOR GOVERNOR

Judge Van Wagenen's Name Did Not Go Before the Convention and No Contest Developed for Any Nomination.

For Governor—J. B. Sullivan, of Union.

For Lieutenant-Governor—J. B. Butler, of Iowa.

For Judge of the Supreme Court—John R. Caldwell, of Tama.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—A. R. McCook, of Howard.

For Railroad Commissioner—W. S. Porter, of Hardin.

Des Moines, June 25.—Those democrats who were in favor of reaffirming the declarations of the Kansas City platform on the money question went down in defeat in the state convention yesterday. They were beaten by a vote of 354 to 563. Just as last year, the great struggle of the day was over the substitution of a minority report of the resolutions committee favoring reaffirmation for a majority report against that proposition. But while last year the reaffirmationists lost by a vote of 344 to 384, yesterday the majority of the anti-reaffirmationists was swelled to 109 votes, thus fulfilling, and more than fulfilling, the predictions of the steering committee of the reorganizers that they would have 100 majority.

And while reaffirmation was beaten and badly beaten, the government ownership proposition was even more hopelessly defeated. By a vote of nearly four to one, the convention set itself on record against it. J. M. Parsons, of Rock Rapids, presented an amendment to the majority report of the committee, signed by himself alone, for government ownership. The motion to annex this to the plank of the platform relating to government control of shipping was defeated by 628 1-2 to 199 1-2. With government ownership relegated to the rear, Judge Van Wagenen, of Sioux City, who championed this cause, did not permit his name to go before the convention as a candidate for governor and the nomination went to J. B. Sullivan, of Creston, a reaffirmationist, but not a friend of government ownership, by acclamation.

The victory of the reorganizers was foreshadowed early in the day, when they got control of the resolutions committee in the district caucuses. They were able to carry seven of the eleven caucuses, those of the First, Second, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Ninth and Eleventh districts. In the Sixth district, ex-Senator W. A. McIntire, of Ottumwa, was elected as a member of the resolutions committee, but was instructed for reaffirmation by a vote of one majority. Thus tied up, McIntire voted with the silver men but refused to sign the minority report and was condemned by the reaffirmationists for bolting his instructions.

The ticket as given above was nominated by acclamation. On the whole, the close of the convention left the delegates in a better frame of mind than could have been expected. There was far less bitterness than was noticed last year. The reaffirmation leaders, while not pleased over the defeat they met, were gratified over the nomination of Mr. Sullivan, who has always stood by the silver men, and who voted the Union county delegation yesterday in favor of the adoption of the minority report. The reorganizers were particularly well satisfied with the day's work. "The democratic party is in the best shape it has been since Boies was governor," was heard about the lobbies on every hand last night. A large campaign fund was promised, and an early and vigorous campaign will be entered upon, it is declared.

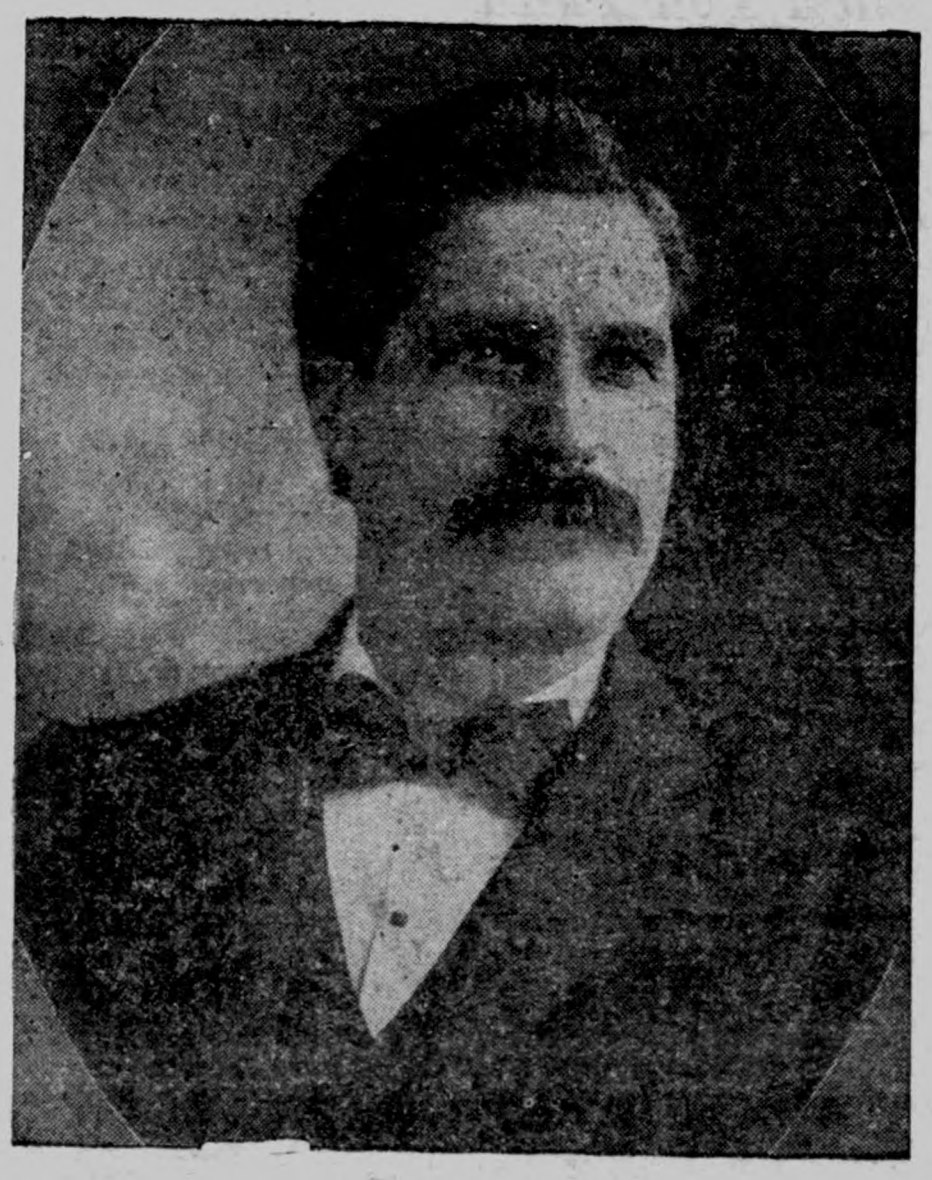
The convention was called to order by Chairman Jackson and Rev. H. O. Breeden offered the invocation. Temporary Chairman J. H. Quick of Sioux City was then introduced, and delivered an address which was received with frequent outbursts of applause. The reference to Bryan brought forth the usual storm of approval. That part of the address in which Mr. Quick urged the democrats to be as unlike the republicans as possible, was vociferously cheered. When Mr. Quick pronounced the paramount issue of 1896 dead, there were cries of dissent mingled with the applause. In the final part of his address Mr. Quick took up the government ownership question and made a strong appeal on this subject.

The resolutions committee was named as follows: First district, Thomas H. Johnson, Lee; Second, E. M. Sharon, Scott; Third, Alphons Matthews, Dubuque; Fourth, D. D. Murphy, Clayton; Fifth, S. S. Wright, Cedar; Sixth, W. A. McIntire, Wapello; Seventh, W. E. Davis, Dallas; Eighth, W. H. Robb, Union; Ninth, John P. Organ, Pottawattamie; Tenth, E. H. Doud, Boone; Eleventh, James M. Parsons, Lyon.

In the afternoon D. W. Hamilton of Sigourney was made permanent chairman, and upon taking the chair he delivered a brief address. Brief speeches were made by Walt H. Butler, L. T. Genning, Henry Vollmer and Congressman Wade.

Then followed the struggle over the platform. The majority report was signed by seven of the eleven members of the committee. The minority report was read by W. H. Robb of Creston.

Addresses in behalf of the minority report were made by Mr. Robb, Walt Butler, G. F. Rinehart and Col. C. H. Mackey. E. M. Sharon spoke briefly for the majority report. The motion to substitute was defeated 354 1-10 to 463 9-10. The platform was then adopted as follows:



HON. J. B. SULLIVAN.

We, the chosen representatives of the democratic party in Iowa, in delegate convention assembled, hereby declare anew our faith in the fundamental principles of the democratic party and renew our allegiance thereto.

We find much in the domestic affairs of the nation that ought to be changed. The tariff policy, originally adopted for the avowed purpose of raising revenue to meet the enormous burdens of the civil war, has been turned to use of individual and class interests until it has become the creator of countless unearned fortunes and the shelter of huge combinations of capital, organized in the form of trusts, which are strangling competition in many of our industries, destroying individual effort, crushing ambition largely in every line of industry and already acquiring power which enables them to dictate in their own interest the prices of labor and raw material and the cost of transportation of finished products.

We declare our unqualified opposition to the principle of government by injunction.

We renew our demand for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people.

We demand economy in the administration of state affairs, repeal of the mulct law and the enactment of a local option law.

We demand the contracting for supplies for the state with the lowest responsible bidders.

In the interest of the much needed improvement of public roads, we favor state aid in the building of permanent highways.

We are unalterably opposed to the policy of imperialism by this government instituted, fostered, and maintained by the republican party. And we demand that our government shall declare it to be its purpose, and without delay adopt such measures as shall give to the people of the Philippine islands and Porto Rico their inalienable right to self government.

We condemn the republican party for its financial policies which would foist upon the country an unstable currency based upon uncertain private securities.

We protest against the plan presented in the Aldrich bill recently before the United States senate by which the money of the nation shall be loaned to capitalists upon the bonds and securities of private corporations as an effort to give value and stability to watered bonds and securities of corporations and trusts, many of which are maintaining monopolies in defiance of law and public sentiment.

We insist that the integrity of the money of the nation be guarded with jealous care and demand that it shall be sufficient in volume to meet the needs of the business interests of the country, and that it shall be safeguarded by careful legislation so as to prevent the gamblers of Wall street from cornering the money market, thus inflicting untold injury upon the smaller business men, the farmers and the laborers of the land.

We point with pride to the one hundredth anniversary of the achievements of that great diplomat and democratic statesman, Thomas Jefferson, under whose administration the Louisiana territory, of which Iowa was a part, was secured from a foreign power in a peaceful and civilized way, without the loss of life, yet with the consent of the governed.

In the great exposition to be held in St. Louis in 1904, to properly commemorate this event, the people of Iowa should take a prominent part and make a creditable exhibit of the products of the soil and the work of the crafts.

We deplore the corrupt condition of the government service in the post-office department and demand a thorough investigation of that and other departments by a congressional committee, publicly as to such conditions and punishment of all wrong doers.

As the most alarming features of our present conditions are the evils which come from trusts, and as these evils are made possible by legislation favoring one class and against another by transportation privileges and by monopoly of original sources of supply of natural products, therefore, to the end that the evils connected with the growth of trusts may be eliminated, we call for the removal of the tariff from all trust-made goods and demand that all tariff schedules be adjusted with a view to a tariff for revenue only.

We ask for such changes in our law, statutory or constitutional, as will limit the charges by railroads to such an amount as will yield only a reasonable return on the capital actually invested and will render it impossible for transportation favors to be granted to anyone and such as will make certain that all railway companies will be treated alike, such statutes to provide penalties that will be effectual to secure a compliance with them.

When the sources of supply of any product are in the ownership of those who combine to extort from the people an unreasonable amount for such products, then we believe it is the duty of the government to take such steps as may be necessary to secure an equitable distribution thereof with fair compensation to the owners of the same. And so that the design of nature in making provisions for the wants of man may not be preverted into means for his oppression.

The fundamental principle of democracy, "equal rights to all and special privileges to none," applies in full force to the subject of taxation. The democratic party believes that the burden of taxation should be borne equally by all taxable property and pledge our members of the general assembly to formulate and urge the adoption of such laws as will compel the burdens of taxation to rest on corporation and individual property alike without favor to or exemption to any interest.

The work of naming candidates was then begun and no contest developed, the ticket printed above being named by acclamation. When he had been declared the nominee for governor Mr. Sullivan spoke as follows:

"The issues to be fought out are more than state-wide when our magnificent republic goes thousands of miles away from home with a standing army to subdue another people. It causes me to pause and ask how soon will they call a standing army here at home to subdue me?

"We should take home to ourselves the lesson of the abortive attempt of President Roosevelt to enforce the anti-trust laws. We see it in his campaign against the Northern Securities company, but the Iowa farmer has not seen the least move made to dissolve the great harvester and machinery implement trust, which strikes him more closely than any other. I accept this nomination with a knowledge of the responsibilities placed on me, and I expect to go forth and promulgate the principles of the democratic party as expressed during the past one hundred years."

Spread Through the Entire Pale of the Jewish Settlements of the Country — Revolutionary Leaflets Being Circulated.

St. Petersburg, June 19.—The revolutionary movement in Russia seems to be spreading unceasingly, and it is reaching regions hitherto free from the radical agitation. Leaflets directed against the condition of Russian home affairs, and demanding revolutionary changes were circulated broadcast during the month of May, in thirty-four cities and towns of the empire. Serious street disturbances have occurred at various places, as already cabled, including Bakou, Warsaw, Berdichey, Tiflis, Batoum, Baiakhna and Tomask. It is said that the anti-Semitic agitation at Eastertide extended throughout the entire pale of the Jewish settlements. The monarchial society organized at Pinsk, circulated leaflets, beginning: "Brother Workers, Orthodox and Catholic: Christ has arisen; let us embrace, kiss and kill the Jews."

At Rostov-on-the-Don, it is said, an officer of the gend'armerie has been going about the bazaar telling the Jews that it is the Jews and socialists who prevent their "little father," the czar, from giving all his children everything they need, and that therefore the Jews and socialists must be killed off.

Swarms of detectives at Rostov are trying to locate a socialists' printing office. A threatened demonstration at Kevno was recently suppressed by detectives, who, scattered through the audience, clubbed those who shouted "down with the autocrats." The number of arrests which have taken place among army officers, literary men, teachers, working men, students and other classes at St. Petersburg, Kiev, Odessa, Virhallen, and in fact, in the cities and towns throughout the empire, attest the colossal growth of the revolutionary agitation. It is naturally strongest in the pale of the Jewish settlement, but is has rendered such far off places as Kostrom-on-the-Volga, a region hitherto free of any radical movements.

Dr. Dorosbevsky, who was equally indefatigible in his attentions to the victims of the Kishenev massacre and in his fearless publication of the truth regarding the massacre, has been forced to resign his position in the Bessarabian provincial hospital at Kishenev. The Southern Review declares the reason for this to be that "he published facts, figures and names which certain deputies wanted kept secret." A magistrate at Kishenev continues to hear and dispose of accusations of breach of the peace, theft and destruction of property, reserving the more serious charges for higher tribunals. According to Kishenev correspondents, the emigration movement shows no sign of abatement. Most every household is sending members to the United States, while a few are going to Brazil, Argentina and South Africa. Considerable excitement has been caused by the publication of a letter from Chicago, which says that a certain company will soon begin selling steamship tickets to Russian Jews on time payment.

In the meantime the Kinshenev relief committee is supplying food to 20,000 persons. Business shows no signs of reviving.

CONGRESSMAN INDICTED

New York, June 26.—Former Congressman Driggs was indicted by the federal grand jury in Brooklyn. He appeared before Judge Thomas and gave bail. The indictment grew out of the investigation into postoffice affairs made by the grand jury.

Four indictments were found all practically alike. Each charges that Driggs between July 20 and 24, 1900, unlawfully agreed to receive and did receive a $500 check from the Brandt-Dent company for procuring a contract from the United States government for making and delivering 250 automatic cashiers for the postoffice department.

To the first two indictments Mr. Driggs plead not guilty, reserving the right to plead later to the others, which contain sixteen counts each, after his lawyer had read them.

Mr. Driggs refused absolutely to comment on his indictment. He has previously admitted, however, receiving a salary of $12,500 from the Brandt-Dent company for introducing the machines, but claimed that the work was done before he was sworn in as congressman, but after his election, and declared that he had done nothing to which the government could object.

The indictments were found under sections 171 and 172 of the revised statutes of the United States, which provide for the punishment of any person "receiving emolument while in the employ of the government."

Mr. Driggs was before the grand jury today preceding the finding of indictment.

Miss Gannon, Sec'y Detroit Amateur Art Association, tells young women what to do to avoid pain and suffering caused by female troubles.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can conscientiously recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to those of my sisters suffering with female weakness and the troubles which so often befall women. I suffered for months with general weakness, and felt so weary that I had hard work to keep up. I had shooting pains, and was utterly miserable. In my distress I was advised to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it was a red letter day to me when I took the first dose, for at that time my restoration began. In six weeks I was a changed woman, perfectly well in every respect. I felt so elated and happy that I want all women who suffer to get well as I did."—MISS GUILA GANNON, 359 Jones St., Detroit, Mich., Secretary Amateur Art Association.

It is clearly shown in this young lady's letter that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will certainly cure the sufferings of women; and when one considers that Miss Gannon's letter is only one of the countless hundreds which we are continually publishing in the newspapers of this country, the great virtue of Mrs. Pinkham's medicine must be admitted by all; and for the absolute cure of all kinds of female ills no substitute can possibly take its place. Women should bear this important fact in mind when they go into a drug store, and be sure not to accept anything that is claimed to be "just as good" as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for no other medicine for female ills has made so many actual cures.

How Another Young Sufferer Was Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell you what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered terribly every month at time of menstruation, and was not able to work. Your medicine has cured me of my trouble. I felt relieved after taking one bottle. I know of no medicine as good as yours for female troubles."—MISS EDITH CROSS, 169 Water Street, Haverhill, Mass

Remember, Mrs. Pinkham's advice is free, and all sick women are foolish if they do not ask for it. No other person has such vast experience, and has helped so many women. Write to-day.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness.

The Ape, one of the inhabitants of the timber near Old Amsterdam, some time ago met with an accident of which your correspondent failed to learn the particulars until this late date. It appears from what we have been able to learn that this peculiar being and John Barleycorn had been associating with one another on this unfortunate day some two months ago, and upon returning to his place of abode, fell into the cistern, and was it not for the assistance of neighbors, the Ape would have come to an untimely end.

The warm weather of the past week has made a vast change in the crop conditions of this section. On Friday a number of our base ball cranks went to Garner to see the game between Garner and Titonka. The Titonka team is certainly rightly named being known by the cognomen "the Indians." And from the way they played the game one is led to believe that they are entirely uncivilized. We have it from good authority, however, that the team is capable of playing much better ball than they did on Friday and that it was an off day for them. Garner won by the easy score of 16 to 4 not however, because they played good ball, but simply because Titonka played rotten ball. Some dirty ball was played by one of Garner's players, but this is to be expected of this particular individual.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Gladios Roland, a little Corning girl 12 years old, was playing with a toy pistol about a week ago and shot herself in the palm of the hand. She had her hand over the end of the pistol barrel, when it went off. They did not think it dangerously hurt. A few days ago she had convulsions and lockjaw set in and she died.

Fire at 2 o'clock a. m. destroyed three business properties at Shellsburg aggregating a loss of $6,000, all of which is covered by insurance. The buildings destroyed were the Welsh drug store, Lewis' carpenter shop, and the Keath & King hardware store. The fire is thought to be of incendiary origin, and is supposed to have been started by tramps.

Joe Wise, a farmer living six miles north of Plymouth, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a pocket knife. Before committing the deed he took his family to a neighbor's by the name of Snyder. As Wise had expressed a desire to kill himself, Snyder followed him home shortly afterward, but did not arrive in time to stop the rash act. The only reason attributed for the deed is that Wise was very blue over the prospect for crops.

Samuel B. Evans died at his home in Ottumwa a few days ago after a long illness. He was a prominent newspaper man, editor of the Ottumwa Independent, and was a leading democratic worker. He was born in Jefferson county, Tennessee, July 31, 1837, and lived in Ottumwa since 1861. He was postmaster in 1885 and in 1893 was appointed U. S. consul at Managua, Nicaragua, but declined to serve. He leaves a wife and five children.

The home of Dr. Raymond Peck at Davenport was entered by a burglar and the house looted from top to bottom in broad daylight. Dr. Peck and his family were at Indianapolis. Neighbors saw the burglar enter the yard and asked him what he wanted. He said he had been sent there by the doctor. He went to the rear and opened a window. In about a half hour he walked out of the front door carrying a grip. He secured many valuables.

Herman Kruger, an oiler in the Burlington shops at Creston, was held up in the yards at 2 o'clock a. m. and robbed of all the money he had in his pockets and killed. Kruger was on his way home when accosted by the marauder. The man ordered him to throw up his hands and searched Kruger's pockets, finding only 30 cents. On Kruger's refusal to give him more the robber fired at him five times, every shot taking effect in the abdomen. Krüger lived until 8 o'clock and was able to furnish a good description of the robber. This is the fourth hold-up that has occurred within a week at Creston and the police are keeping a sharp lookout.

The Cedar Rapids carnival management will this year endeavor to add a great deal of oratory to the regular amusement features. A governors' day will be one of the features, on which day both the republican and democratic candidates for governor of Iowa will take part. A senators' day is also contemplated in which Iowa's two distinguished senators will take part. Grover Cleveland, writing to a personal friend in Cedar Rapids under date of June 23, says: "I am just starting with my family to spend the summer at our ccustomed home. If I can see my way clear to come west in the early part of October, another invitation to deliver an address at your carnival would be accepted."

Miss Henrietta Thornton, instructor in art at the State Normal school, and her mother, were thrown from a carriage at Cedar Falls and seriously injured. They with Miss Julia Curtiss were being entertained with a company of ladies by Mrs. H. N. Silliman. When the carriage struck the street car track Mrs. Thornton was thrown, catching her clothing on the step and in this maner was dragged some distance, her head on the ground. Her head and face were badly bruised. Miss Thornton was thrown in front of the buggy and both wheels passed over her body. She received internal injuries, her right ear was badly cut and torn and it is feared she is more seriously injured than now appears.

Some excitement in Cedar Falls police circles has been occasioned by the presence in the city of a special officer of the government, who is looking up evidence in a case which dates back to last June, and which involves Deputy United States Marshal Healy of Cedar Rapids. At that time the Danish people held a celebration near Cedar Falls, at which beer was sold. Four or five were arrested and taken to Cedar Rapids, but no case was made against them. They claim to have paid their own expenses and it is understood the business of the officer was to secure affidavits so stating. It is said that the expense account of Marshal Healy contained these items of expense. He has many friends who have known him long and intimately who refuse to believe the story until it is proven. The officer who is looking into the matter has made no statement as to what his business is further than that it is in connection with arrests of a year ago

Burglars entered the hardware store of Ehler & Co. at Reinbeck a few nights ago and dynamited the safe They secured about $500. No clue has been discovered.

John Page, who was a member of Roosevelt's Rough Riders in the Spanish-American war, was arrested at Shannon City and was taken to Mt. Ayr, where he is being held. The officers refuse to divulge anything about the case, and the cause of the arrest cannot be learned.

Gus. A. Schneider of Ft. Madison died suddenly at Albuquerque, New Mexico, while on his wedding tour. His wife was Miss Lora Eggleston, a former Burlington girl. The wedding occurred in Ft. Two section men, J. W. Walker and Oscar Poil, became involved in a quarrel west of Murray, when Poil struck Walker with a shovel on the top of the head, almost killing him When Walker was struck he was down on his hands and knees, looking along the rail to see if the track was level. Poil was arrested. Walker's recovery is doubtful.

The coroner's jury which investigated the wreck on the Illinois Central at Raymond, where eleven persons were killed a few days ago, found that the cause was a misreading of orders by the crew of freight train No. 87. Trainmaster Bechley of Dubuque and Conductor Judd, the last named having been on the ill-fated freight, were present and testified.

H. A. Smith, of Cedar Rapids, was the victim of a painful accident while riding in his automobile, the pilot light becoming extinguished in some unaccountable manner and leaking gasoline, which ignited and enveloped the entire vehicle in a mass of flame. Mr. Smith was badly burned about the face, his right hand was perhaps permanently disabled and his left hand was terribly scorched. Two ladies were in the vehicle with Mr. Smith, but both escaped with badly scorched clothing.

The first baby kangaroo ever born in Ottumwa was given birth a few days ago by "Carrie Nation," the big animal in the menagerie of the great Wallace show. This was a great event at the show grounds, and there was a general jollification among the 673 employes when it was learned that there was an addition to Carrie's family. The little animal will be carried around in its mother's pouch, as are all the kangaroo young until they reach the age of four months, when they are set out in the world to hustle for themselves.

Two through freights, 96, south bound, and 97, a double header, north bound, met in head-on collision at the east end of the Rock Island yards at Vinton, wrecking all three engines and demolishing several freight cars All members of the two crews escaped by jumping. There is a deep curve where the collision occurred. The south bound train was standing on the main line, which the incoming train apparently took for the siding until too late to avoid the collision Homer Snyder and Jud Beall, two Waterloo boys, who were beating their way south, were in the box car next to the engine and which was ground to splinters, but they miraculously escaped with a few bruises.

The body of a man was found floating in the Missouri river a short distance from Percival a few days ago. He was about 35 years old, smooth shaven and wore a dark suit of clothes. The body had evidently been in the water for about two weeks. In his pockets were found $12.50, two combs, pencils and a baggage check which had been issued at Denver to Clinton, Ont. In a note book found in one of his pockets these addresses were found: 213 First avenue south, Seattle, and Mrs. O'Brien, 4418 Spring street. Beyond these clues there is no means of bringing about the identification of the man. It is supposed, however, that he was coming from the west and committed suicide by jumping from some of the bridges across the river farther north.

Ray C. Smith, formerly of Greenfield, and the son of a Methodist minister residing in Ames, was arrested a few days ago in Lincoln, Neb., on the charge of bigamy. Smith was married four years ago in Greenfield, to Della M. Rogers. The wife inherited $10,000 which Smith squandered and then deserted her and her child, leaving them in want. Smith went to Lincoln last January, assuming the name of Harry De Fare, and was made a manager in a department store. Four weeks ago he married Miss Anna Boynton of Lincoln, with whom he was living when arrested on the request of officers from Iowa. His first wife and babe accompanied the Iowa authorities and confronted him at the police station. Later the second wife arrived at the station and a tearful scene was enacted by the two women, in which Smith himself subsequently joined.

WANT MEMBER OF BOARD.

Governor Cummins Asked to Appoint Osteopathic Physician.

Des Moines, June 26.—At the meeting of the state association of osteopathic physicians in this city yesterday a memorial was adopted urging Governor Cummins to appoint an osteopath to membership on the state boards of medical examiners and health. The new law passed by the legislature of 1902 provides for the examination of osteopaths by the state board of medical examiners and the issuance to those found competent of a license to practice. The board was authorized to examine the applicants on the branches named in the act except the theory and practice of osteopathy "until such time as there may be appointed an osteopathic physician on the state board of health and medical examiners." This, coupled with the text of the act and the old law creating the boards is regarded by the osteopaths as sufficient authority for the appointment, and they think that the time has come for the profession to have a representative on the boards. They will present the memorial to Governor Cummins immediately.

A resolution was adopted at the convention, also, looking to the acceptance of the fraternal proposition of the National Medical association for coalition of forces among all reputable and licensed physicians and the abolishment of the artificial distinctions between the schools, "if the proposition is made in good faith." Thus far, nothing direct has reached the osteopaths from the national medical organization of "regulars."

Officers for the ensuing year were elected by the association of osteopaths as follows: President, J. S. Baughman, Burlington; vice-presidents, S. B. Miller, Cedar Rapids, and F. W. Belchey, Guthrie Center; secretary, Ella R. Gilmore, Sheldon; treasurer, L. O. Thompson, Red Oak; trustees, J. R. Bullard, Marshalltown, and J. E. Owen, Indianola.

THORPE TO PAINT PORTRAIT.

Picture of Col. Henderson Will Be Placed in Iowa Collection.

Des Moines, June 26.—Freeman Thorpe, who was commissioned by the members of the United States house of representatives to paint a life sized picture of Col. D. B. Henderson, ex-speaker of the house, to be placed in the galleries of the national capitol, was in Des Moines yesterday in consultation with Curator Aldrich regarding a similar picture which is to be placed in the Iowa historical building.

Mr. Thorpe came from Dubuque, where Tuesday he put the finishing touches to the picture of the ex-speaker, which is to be used in the national capitol. The work was done in Dubuque, Colonel Henderson granting four sittings. The picture is life size and is highly praised by the art critics who have viewed it.

The picture for the Iowa historical building will be painted in New York this winter. It will be also life size, but will probably be a different view than the one just finished.

Mr. Thorpe has attained considerable fame for his paintings of public men. He completed a picture of ex-President Grover Cleveland a few months ago. Among other portraits of public men painted by him are those of President Grant, Secretary James Wilson, Associate Justice Nelson and General Kessler of New York.

SUPERVISOR OF MUSIC.

State Music Teachers Will Petition Legislature to Create New Office.

Ottumwa, June 26.—A state supervisor of public school music will be appointed in Iowa if the plans made today at the business session of the convention of the Society of Music Teachers of Iowa are successful

During the session yesterday addresses were delivered by many of the prominent school supervisors and the necessity of systematizing the methods of teaching music in the schools was freely discussed. A committee of three was appointed to consider the advisability of petitioning the legislature to have a supervisor of school music included in the number of state officials. The committee will report tomorrow morning.

The committee consists of Mrs Frances Elliott Clark, supervisor of music in the Ottumwa schools; C. A Fullerton of the State Normal school at Cedar Falls, and Henry Matlack of Grinnell.

Des Moines, June 27, 1903.

The crusade a year ago which resulted in the abolishment of all [illegible] machines from West Des Moines [illegible] find a parallel in a fight against [illegible] dice rollers. Following up the [illegible] to speak softly but carry a big [illegible] Justice Tris, who started things [illegible] the machines, has given a gentle [illegible] monition to one or two cigar [illegible] that gambling with dice would not [illegible] tolerated as a substitute for [illegible] abolished machines. "I am not [illegible] angel among cigar men. I smoke [illegible] use tobacco myself," said the [illegible] to one of the dealers who had [illegible] to his office to protest against [illegible] edict laid down, "but I will not [illegible] gambling going on where I can [illegible] it." The fight against the slot [illegible] chines was one which started in [illegible] such a manner. Justice Tris [illegible] the attention of a few to the objects [illegible] of their use, then he notified all [illegible] them and finally caused their [illegible] pression by convicting one man [illegible] fining him $50.

F. W. Cherry has confirmed [illegible] published statement that the [illegible] Island has secured the Des Moines [illegible] Southern railway property, [illegible] which it paid $91,000. He further states that the acquirement of [illegible] property by the Rock Island [illegible] the taxes which were voted between Winterset and Greenfield. [illegible] amounted to between $80,000 and $90,000. Half of them have already been collected. Under the law taxes voted for the construction of railroad cannot be turned over to promoters, after they have been collected by the county treasurer, [illegible] after the road has been built. "I expect to get some of the Rock Island officials here in a few days," said Cherry, "and together we will [illegible] Winterset and Greenfield and [illegible] ally release the taxes which already have been collected, so that [illegible] may be turned back to the proper owners. The Rock Island has given assurances that it will make no effort whatever to retain or collect additional taxes. The fact of the matter is that when the property passed into the hands of the Rock Island that very transaction voided the taxes. The law provides that if the promoter or an officer of a railroad makes any statement to induce voters at the polls to vote [illegible] and that statement proves false the tax is voided and cannot be collected. Personally, I went to the polls on the new route and told the people that and near that the property would never pass into the hands of the Rock Island." The Rock Island will make a new survey. It will follow the route laid out by Mr. [illegible] and his engineers. It will be much further south. This is for the purpose of getting the road as far from its main line as possible.

The report from Polk county executive council, showing the assessed values and the selling value of farm property that changed hands in the last half of 1902, has reached the office of Secretary Davison. There were not a large number of transfers but the report shows the farm property in the county is assessed at a pretty good figure. The sales which are 93 per cent of the assessment. It is likely this showing will have considerable weight with the board when it comes to sit as a state board of review and equalize the assessment on town lots and it is not improbable it will lead to an increased assessment on these. Mr. Davison has received reports from about [illegible] counties.

E. C. Musgrave, secretary of the Midland Chautauqua, [illegible] judging from the number of tickets sold and from the number of inquiries received from out of town people who expect to camp on the grounds the coming meeting will be the most successful ever held. The indications are superior in every way and it is expected that 10,000 people will be in attendance on Music day. Monday is to be a big one. Reduced rates have been granted by all railroads and the out of town attendance will undoubtedly be large.

A corps of eleven engineers are surveying a route for a new line from Burlington from Tracy, [illegible] proposed line from Oskaloosa will connect with the Albia branch. The new route will follow along the Des Moines ridge from Tracy to Chariton. This will avoid expensive construction on the old gradients at Albia and Chariton, the latter only eight miles from Chariton. The new line will not approach nearer than ten miles of the main line until nearing Chariton.

Polk county has appealed from the decision of Judge McHenry in the case of county treasurer John [illegible] the tax ferrets cannot collect taxes against the telephone company for 1897, which was a time previous to the adoption of the present law. The decision of the judge affects a large number of insurance companies as well as the telephone companies and is the reason for his decision. The taxes previous to the adoption of the present law taxes were paid to the state and the county could not collect. It is a decision of considerable importance.

Work on the survey of the Des Moines-Bluffs-Des Moines interurban has begun. Two gangs have been put on in this city. It is proposed to build two lines near Des Moines, one for freight service to connect with the belt line and the other for passenger service to connect with the Rock Island fax line.

An unusually bold London pickpocket tried to remove the valuables of a Piccadilly "irreproachable" as he sauntered to his club the other morning The "irreproachable," so the story goes, seized the thief by the wrist, gazed at his filthy paw, and flung it from him with disgust, saying: "For goodness sake, my good man, wash your hands before you put them in a gentleman's pockets."

Very amusing, is the story of the strenuous ride of a tenderfoot New York correspondent who visited Sharon Springs last month with the Presidential party. As soon as he mounted, one of the cowboys said "Wow," the conductor of the train waved a red flag, the engineer let out a squirt of steam, and the correspondent went through Sharon Springs leaving cloud of dust behind him that looked like the remains of a cyclone. He went through one fence and took the corner off one barn, and finally brought up against the side of another. A committee of villagers sat him right, he remounted the horse, started again, and the last seen of him he was far out on the horizon still followed by the rolling dust cloud. He came in later on a meek cayuse lent to him by a friendly cowboy, who incidentally informed him that he had been riding the most famous race-horse of that end of Kansas, and that the horse was trained to run when the reins were pulled tight and stop only when they are slackened.

Shortly after the appearance of his first book, "Ten months a Captive Among the Filipinos," an enterprising manager induced Albert Sonnichsen to go on a lecture tour. The young author made his debut in a small New Jersey town, in a dismal, ill-lighted hall, before a handful of people huddled in the front seats, and a multitude of empty chairs. The manager, as dejected as the lecturer, sat in the rear, under the gloom of the balcony. Mr. Sonnichsen ended his lecture in a state of nervous collapse, and then, in order to live up to his program, said: "I shall be pleased to answer any questions you may care to ask." An oppressive silence followed. Mr. Sonnichsen repeated his offer, with the same result. Something had to be done. In desperation, the lecturer pointed to "that gentleman over here," indicating the manager, and suggested that he looked "as if he wanted to ask a question." That disgusted individual, seeing an opening to get back at the author, who had attracted attention to him so unexpectedly, shouted back: "Yes, I do, Sonnichsen, how do you feel?"

A Woman's Back.

Dublin, Mich., June 29th.—To the many women who suffer with weak back and pains and tired feelings in the small of the back, the experience of Mrs. Fred Chalker of this place will be interesting and profitable.

Mrs. Chalker had suffered a very great deal with these back pains and although she had tried many things, she could find nothing that would relieve her. The pain kept on in spite of all she could do.

At last she chanced to read the story of another lady who had suffered with the backache, and said she had been cured by a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Mrs. Chalker thought she would try the same thing.

After the first two boxes had been taken according to directions, she began to feel some better, and she kept on till at last she was cured.

Her pains are all gone, and she is very grateful. She says: "Dodd's Kidney Pills helped me greatly, and I will always recommend them as a cure for Pain in the Back."

Then he turned to Matilda and led her to a sofa, and comforted her; and the men-servants came and took away the dead body and laid it, as Anthony wished, on his old master's bed.

And in the great salon, now cleared of its offending visitors, Cymlin sat comforting Matilda and finally questioned her in a way that compelled her to rely, in some measure, upon him.

"Stephen was here yesterday?" he asked.

"Part of the day. He left here at four in the afternoon."

"Yet the mail-rider, under oath, swore this morning that it was Stephen who robbed the mail."

She laughed queerly.

"But if it was not Stephen, who was it?" he insisted, and he looked with such a steady, confident gaze into Matilda's face that she crimsoned to her finger-tips. She could not meet his eyes, and she could not speak.

"I wonder who played at being Stephen de Wick," he said gently. And the silence between them was so sensitive that neither accusation nor confession was necessary.

"I wish that you had trusted me. You might have done so and you know it."

After Anthony was buried, his will was read. He left everything he possessed to the Lady Matilda de Wick, and no one offered a word of dissent. Sir Thomas seemed unusually depressed and his lady asked him "if he was in any way dissatisfied?"

"No," he answered. "It is the death of the young Lord Neville that gives me constant regret."

"Is he dead? Alas! Alas! Such a happy, handsome youth. It is incredible," said Lady Jevery.

"I thought he had run away to the Americas with your gold and my aunt's jewels," said Matilda.

"I wronged him, I wronged him grievously," answered Sir Thomas. "That wretch of a woman at The Hague never paid him a farthing, never even saw him. She intended to rob me and slay him for a thousand pounds, but under question of the law she confessed her crime."

"What do you think has happened to him?"

"I think robbery and murder. Someone has known, or suspected, that he had treasure with him. He has been followed and assassinated, or he has fought and been killed, and little Jane Swaffham is slowly dying of grief and cruel suspense. She loves him, and they were betrothed."

There was a short silence, and then Matilda said: "Many brave young lords have gone out from home and friends these past years, and never come back. Is Neville's life worth more than my brother's life, than thousands of other lives? I trow not!"

But in the privacy of her room she could not preserve this temper. "I wonder if Rupert slew him," she muttered. And anon——

"He would think it no wrong—only a piece of good luck.

"He might also be jealous of Cluny. I spoke often of the youth's beauty—I did that out of simple mischief—but Rupert is touchy, sometimes cruel—always eager for gold. Poor Jane!"

CHAPTER XIV.

A Little Further On.

The settlement of the affairs of Anthony Lynn occupied Sir Thomas much longer than he expected, and the autmn found the family still at de Wick. Stephen had escaped, as had also his companion conspirators, Mason and Blythe; and Matilda could not but compliment herself a little on her share in securing their safety.

Towards the middle of September Sir Thomas roused himself from his life among flowers and shrubs, and said he must go back to London. He had a sudden desire for his wharf and his office, and the bearded, outlandish men that he would meet there. And as the ladies also wished to return to London, the beautiful home quickly put on an air of desertion. Boxes littered the hall; they were only waiting until the September rain-storm should pass away, and the roads become fit for travel.

At this unsettled time, and in a driving shower, Cymlin and Doctor Verity were seen galloping up the avenue one evening. Every one was glad at the prospect of news and company, Sir Thomas so much so, that he went to the door to meet the Doctor. "Nobody could be more welcome," he said; "and pray, what good fortune brings you here?"

"I come to put my two nephews in Huntingdon Grammar school. I want them to sit where Cromwell sat," he answered.

"Ah! this great Cromwell!" said Lady Jevery; "but if he has the wily Mazarin at his disposal, why can he not find out something about that poor Lord Neville? Has Col. Ayrton returned, or is he also missing?"

"He returned some time ago. He discovered nothing of importance."

"Then I suppose we shall see no more of Lord Neville. I am very sorry. He was a good youth, and he loved Jane Swaffham very honestly."

A week after this evening the Jeverys were in their own house, and Matilda had sent word to Jane Swaffham that she wanted to see her. She opened her heart on various subjects to Jane, more especially on Anthony Lynn's dramatic life and death, and the money and land he had left her. "Of course," she said, "it is only temporary. When the King comes home, Stephen will be Earl de Wick, and I shall willingly resign all to him. In the meantime I intend to carry out Anthony's plans for the improvement of the estate."

When this subject had been talked well over, Jane named cautiously the lover in France. Much to her surprise, Matilda seemed pleased to enlarge on the topic. She spoke herself of Prince Rupert, and of the poverty and suffering Charles' Court were enduring, and she regretted with many strong expressions Rupert's presence there. "All he makes is swallowed up in the bottomless Stuart pit," she said; "even my youth and beauty have gone the same hopeless road."

"There was a queer story about Stephen robbing the mail and tearing up the three warrants for the arrest of Blythe and Mason and himself," said Jane.

"Did you believe that, Jane?"

"The mail was robbed. The warrants were never found. Stephen has a daredevil temper at times. When did you hear from him?"

"I hear from him very often now, Jane, for it is the old, old story—money, money, money. But I am not going to strip de Wick a second time for them," then drawing Jane close to her, and taking her hand she said with an impulsive tenderness:

"Jane, dear Jane, I do not wish to open a wound afresh, but I am sorry for you, I am indeed! How can you bear it?"

"I have cast over it the balm of prayer; I have shut it up in my heart, and given my heart to God. I have said to God, 'Do as thou wilt with me.' I am content, and I have found light in sorrow, brighter than all the flaring lights of joy."

"Then you believe him to be dead?"

"Yes. There is no help against such a conclusion, and yet, Matilda, there comes to me sometimes, such an instantaneous, penetrating sense of his presence, that I must believe he is not far away," and her confident heart's still fervor, her tremulous smile, her eyes like clear water full of the sky, affected Matilda with the same apprehending. And there was such a haunting sweetness about the chastened girl that Matilda looked round wanderingly; it was as if there were freshly gathered violets in the room.

She remained silent, and Jane, after a few minutes' pause, said, "I must go home, now, and rest a little. To-morrow I am bid to Hampton Court."

"And you will come and tell me all about your visit. The world turned upside down is an entertaining spectacle. Ann Clarges the market woman in one place, and Elizabeth Cromwell in another—"

"The Cromwells are my friends, Matilda. And I will assure you that Hampton Court never saw a more worthy queen than Elizabeth Cromwell."

"I have a saucy tongue, Jane—do not mind when it backbites; there is no one like you. I love you well!" These words with clasped hands and kisses between the two girls. Then Matilda's face became troubled and she sat down alone, with her brows drawn together and her hands tightly clasped.

"Did Rupert kill Neville?" she asked herself. "Oh, me, I do fear it. He lied to me, then; of course he lied; but that was no new thing for him to do. What shall I do?" She went over and over this train of thought, and ended always with the same irresolute, anxious question, "What shall I do?"

The next day Jane went to Hampton Court. She was conducted to an apartment in one of the suites formerly occupied by Queen Henrietta Maria. As she dressed herself she thought of the great men and women who had lived and loved, and joyed and sorrowed under the ancient roof of Wolsey's splendid palace.

In a brilliantly lighted room Mr. and Mrs. Claypole and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cromwell and Doctor John Owen, and Mr. Milton, and Dr. Verity were grouped around her highness the Protector's handsome wife. She sat at the Protector's right hand, and Jane Swaffham sat at his left.

He was in an unusually happy mood and Doctor Owen, remarking it, Admiral Blake said, "They had been mobbed—mobbed by women—and the Protector had the best of it and that was a thing to pleasure any man." Then Mrs. Cromwell laughed and said:

"Your highness must tell us all now, or we shall be very discontented. Where were you, to meet a mob of women?"

"We were in London streets, somewhere near the waterside. Blake was with me and Blake is going to Portsmouth to take command of an expedition."

"Where to?" asked Mrs. Claypole.

"Well, Elizabeth, that is precisely the question this mob of women wanted me to answer. You are as bad as they were. But they had some excuse."

"Pray what excuse, sir, that I have not?"

"They were the wives of the sailormen going with our admiral on his expedition. And they got all around me, they did indeed, and one handsome woman with a little lad in her arms—she told me to look well at him because he was called Oliver after me—took hold of my bridle and said, 'You won't trample me down, General, for the lad's sake, and 'tis but natural for us to want to know where you are sending our husbands. Come, General, tell us wives and mothers where the ships are going to?' And there was Robert Blake laughing and thinking it fine sport, but I stood up in my stirrups and called out as loud as I could, 'Women, can you be quiet for one minute?' They said, 'Aye, to be sure we can, if you'll speak out General.' Then I said to them, 'You want to know where the ships and your men are going. Listen to me! The Ambassadors of France and Spain would, each of them, give a million pounds to know that. Do you understand, women?' And for a moment there was a dead silence, then a shout of comprehension and laughter, and the woman at my bridle lifted the boy Oliver to me and I took him in my arms and kissed the rosy little brat, and then another shout and the mother said, General, you be right welcome to my share of the secret,' 'and mine!' 'and mine!' 'and mine!' they all shouted, and the voices of those women went to my heart and brain like wine, they did that. They made me glad; I believe I shouted with them."

"I kissed the rosy little brat."

DRAMATIC RACE FOR LIFE.

Galloping Through a Tunnel in Front of a Fast Railway Train.

A very dramatic incident took place recently during a run of the Carmarthenshire hounds, when the master had a very narrow escape from death, says the London Tattler. The fox, hard pressed by the hounds entered a railway tunnel, and before they could be stopped the whole pack dashed in after him. Mr. Harries, the master, realized their danger and without a moment's hesitation galloped into the tunnel to try and whip them off. He had got some little distance into the tunnel when suddenly he heard the dread roar of an approaching train, which was thundering along at terrific speed. The headlights of the engine glared at him.

It now became a veritable race for life. Mr. Harries clapped the spurs to his horse. On and on they rode at breakneck speed through the black tunnel, with the train thundering behind in the hot pursuit and gradually diminishing the distance between them. Luckily the engine driver caught a view of the flying horse and its rider against the sky line at the mouth of the tunnel and he slackened speed. Mr. Harries and his horse were saved. The fox and hounds also escaped unhurt.

SOCIALISTS STATE CONVENTION

John M. Work of Des Moines Ministerial for Governor.

Des Moines, July 6.—A full state ticket was named by the Iowa socialists at the convention Saturday and the prophecy has freely expressed that the vote of the party this fall would be three times as large as any past vote of the party. The ticket follows:

Governor—John M. Work, Des Moines; lieut. gov.—A. K. Gifford; supreme judge—J. S. McCrillis, Des Moines; state superintendent—Miss Florance Brown, Delta; railroad commissioner, Burley Wood, Lake City.

Resolutions were adopted as follows: "We, the socialists of the state of Iowa, in convention assembled at Des Moines, July 4th, declare our allegiance to add indorsement of the principles of international socialism. We define wealth to be the creation of labor applied to the resources of the earth, and capital to be the accumulated portion of wealth used to create more wealth.

"Capital, therefore, being primarily the product of labor or society as a whole, society has the supreme right to its disposal.

"We, therefore, declare it to be our purpose to acquire for society the ownership of said capital, represented by the mines, the machinery and all the means of production and distribution.

"We declare the self-evident truth that all laws and constitutions under democratic forms of government are the creations of man by legal enactments.

"Therefore, what man has created man may abolish and re-create to conform to the most scientific and systematic means of production and the most just method of distribution.

"Is is therefore our declared purpose as members of organized labor and the producing and working class, to acquire through the power of our united ballots the entire control of government in all its offices and functions.

"By this means, the courts, the laws, the military and all the powers of government will belong not to the capitalists, but to the working class, who, under the principle that majorities should of right rule, are justly entitled to the control of the laws and the conditions which govern their work.

"Having acquired this power, we will use it not to enjoin men from the exercise of their natural rights, but to protect them therein and in the end establish through the power so gained the co-operative commonwealth.

"To this end we ask every member of organized labor, every wage earner and producer in the state of Iowa who compose the working class, and whose interests are identical, to join us in the struggle we have begun, remembering that 'united we stand, divided we fall.'"

PRESIDENT FOR AMES.

Pastor of First Methodist Church at Des Moines is Named.

Des Moines, July 3.—Rev. A. B. Storms, of Des Moines, was elected president of the state college at Ames last night. The vote of the trustees was unanimous. His salary was fixed at $4.300, the figure at which Dr. Beardshear's salary stood when he died. The president also gets a house on the college campus. Dr. Storms probably will accept. If so, he will assume the duties of the office at a time after the close of the fiscal year, but preceding the opening of the new school year.

The meeting of the trustees lasted from noon until midnight, yesterday. It began at Ames and ended at Des Moines. It was stormy at times—and that is not a pun—indeed, there were times when it was tempestuous. In Des Moines the door of the meeting room was surrounded and the lobby sprinkled with alumni of the institution, and the excitement extended to the telegraph offices, where wires were kept busy and messenger boys kept skurrying, in the interest of the candidates whom the board was considering.

The board avoided taking a ballot on anybody till at last the tacit agreement was reached to elect Dr. Storms, when everybody cast his paper ballot with the new man's name written on it. Then there was adjournment. "I believe fully that we solved the question in the best possible manner," said one of the trustees, speaking for several in the group. "And I believe that we left the room a united board."

There was bitterness in the struggle. Acting President E. W. Stanton and Professor of Agriculture C. F. Curtiss were the leading candidates. Both were connected with the institution, and both had earnest, vigorous supporters. The contest has been going on for almost a year, and in that time had plenty of opportunity to grow extremely bitter. Its prolongation was due to the refusal of some of the members of the board to vote for either of the men, and because politics got mixed into the struggle, it is said.

The Curtiss men claim the credit of having suggested Dr. Storms as the compromise candidate. At last he was endorsed by a caucus of the Stanton men

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Sarah Scott, living near Saylorville, Polk county, was burned to death by a kerosene lamp exploding. She being very feeble in some way let the lamp fall while trying to light it. It threw the oil over her clothing.

The hearing of C. J. Elwell, charged with assault, the charge being preferred by Esther Miller, was held at Marshalltown before Justice Burritt, and resulted in the defendant being discharged, there not being sufficient evidence to bind him over to the grand jury.

Mart Allen, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Allen, living about four and a half miles northwest of Marshalltown, committed suicide by hanging himself. It seems that some time between noon and 4 o'clock he left his father's home and went to the timber about a mile and a quarter southwest of his home, where he hanged himself by means of a halter tied to a large tree. His body was quickly discovered and removed to his home. Allen was a young fellow about 21 and no possible cause can be learned for the act.

One hundred farmers are being added daily to the telephone bulletin service which has been inaugurated by George M. Chappel, of the Des Moines weather bureau, for the purpose of furnishing weather forecasts to the country districts. To speak specifically, 10,500 are at the present receiving word every morning at their home concerning the prospects for the weather during the next thirty-six hours, and hundreds of congratulatory letters from appreciative agriculturists are pouring into the Iowa weather man's office. Testimonials of benefits received by the messages are endless, and managers of telephone systems say their country patrons are clamoring to get the daily report. The scheme, which is original with Mr. Chappel, was made practical a month ago when the first step toward perfecting it was taken. It is proposed to furnish every farmer in the state of Iowa with a correct forecast of the weather every morning by telephone. That is, of course, every farmer who has a telephone, and the introduction of this useful instrument is becoming almost universal.

Many accidents marred the opening of the week of carnival at Burlington and as a result two persons are dead, another so seriously injured he will die and several others are wounded. Levi Linn, a teamster, while standing with his team under a bluff, was literally buried alive by a landslide falling upon him. He remained in this position for hours until excavation by workmen, and was still alive when taken out, but died shortly afterwards. Willie Carlson, an 11-year-old boy, while driving an unruly horse was kicked in the forehead, causing concussion of the brain. He died several hours later. The animal was unshod save for one hind foot which contained a heavy iron shoe, and it was this hoof which struck the unfortunate youth with deadly effect. A boy named McCoy, while fooling with fireworks, was struck in the jaw by an exploding cracker. He is perhaps fatally injured and the doctors say the fracture may develop into lockjaw, which will result in death. Harry Yeager, while performing on high stilts for the amusement of the crowds, lost his balance and fell a distance of twelve feet, smashing his nose, breaking his arm and receiving other serious injuries. He will recover.

A double tragedy occurred at Atlantic resulting in the death of Patrick Maher and his wife. Maher shot his wife and then turned the revolver on himself. Both are dead. Maher and his family recently moved to Atlantic from Council Bluffs, where they had been only a short time. Maher has been a section man with the Rock Island and has spent the greater part of his earnings for liquor, while his wife has supported the family by working for the restaurants about town and doing other work that she could find to do. On the day of the tragedy she had worked all day at one of the restaurants in town and after supper had gone home tired out and laid down on the bed for a much-needed rest. Maher, it is said, has always been insanely jealous of his wife, but without the slightest cause. He returned home soon after his wife, but it is supposed she had fallen asleep. There is no knowing just how the tragedy occurred, but it is supposed he went up to her as she lay on the bed resting, placed the revolver to the right side of her head and fired. Fearing this shot would not prove fatal, he took another chance, this time aiming the gun directly at the center of the forehead. The first ball lodged in the left side of the head after passing through the brain. The second was somewhat deflected in its course and passed out at the right side of the skull. Either shot, it is thought, would have proved fatal. After shooting his wife and making sure that his purpose had been accomplished, Maher ran into the yard in front of the house, placed the gun to his left breast and fired. The ball entered his body slightly above and to the left of the heart, and lodged somewhere in the back part of his body. The sounds of the shots soon attracted a crowd and the man was found in the yard, as above stated, unconscious and apparently dying. The wife was found on the bed in the house, apparently dead.

While on their way to Fort Dodge, Ole Hanson, wife and 5-months-old baby, of Duncombe, met with a very serious accident. When about two and one-half miles from home and close to the John Mallinger farm, their horse became frightened at a hay loader and rake, standing inside the fence. The horse, which was traveling at a good rate, stopped suddenly, shied to one side, throwing the occupants of the buggy violently to the ground. Mrs. Hanson was knocked senseless by the fall and did not recover consciousness for almost half an hour. The baby's injuries were very dangerous, perhaps fatal, as the blood was gushing from its mouth and ears. Mrs. Hanson will recover, but it is feared that the baby will die.

A strange man supposed to be George Ross of Creston met a tragic death at Sioux City recently by being run over by a freight train in front of the passenger station of the Milwaukee road. He was trying to board the train to ride to South Dakota. Great mystery surrounds the identity of the man and he evidently had reason for concealing something. A letter written by him and never mailed, apparently addressed to his wife cautions her not to say anything about him. After being run over he continued to mutter "5 o'clock, 5 o'clock," and refused to answer any questions. He died on the way to the hospital. The police believe his strange remark was the clue to the mystery which made him a fugitive

A second chapter has been added to the doings of a mysterious horse man who has been operating in the vicinity of Waterloo. Some months ago a horse buyer, who was supposed to hail from Independence, came to that city and left two horses for which he never returned or called The horses were taken to pay for the pasture. Mrs. Berard, on Logan avenue, has called and received a writ of attachment on a number of buggies and carriages stored in her barn. The property was left about the same time that the mysterious horses were left in the other pasture. The rent was paid on the barn for several weeks and then the tenant suddenly dropped out of sight. No one has ever claimed either the horses or vehicles, and the officers are at a loss to understand the strange method of procedure.

J. C. Manchester, proprietor of the Ballingall hotel of Ottumwa, and brigadier general of the Uniformed Rank of Knights of Pythias of Iowa, died in a berth on a Pullman car on Burlington train No. 12, somewhere between Creston and Albia, a few nights ago. Mr. Manchester was returning from Council Bluffs, where he attended a meeting of the committee of arrangements at Council Bluffs when arrangements were completed for the state encampment of the uniform rank to be held August 9 to 15. Mr. Manchester complained of being sick the previous morning but he grew better and, though not feeling well, he did not complain. When he boarded the train at Council Bluffs he took a berth. Col. O. J. Garriott, of Ottumwa, who was with Mr. Manchester, went to awaken him at Albia and found him dead. J. C. Manchester was born in Bridgeport, Conn., in 1844. He served in the army during the civil war and came to Ottumwa in 1882, when he became proprietor of the Ballingall hotel.

Judge McVey of Polk county handed down an important decision in the case of S. G. Wilson against Cora Fairchild, in which he holds that a judgment awarding the defendant $1,000 for the support of her minor child, born out of wedlock, is not a debt provable under the bankruptcy laws. Wilson filed a petition in bankruptcy in the southern Iowa district, and among his other liabilities listed the judgment against him in favor of the mother of his child. He was eventually discharged under the bankruptcy laws, but the plaintiff subsequently attempted to satisfy an execution for the judgment of $1,000 levied upon certain of his property. Wilson secured a temporary injunction restraining the sheriff from selling his property to satisfy the judgment, and Judge McVey's opinion relates to the granting of this injunction. The court holds that the temporary judgment should be dissolved and that the permanent injunction be denied.

The discussion of the proposed law to govern fraternal insurance companies has about brought officials of the concerns to the conclusion that they must enter politics if they are to succeed. A prominent official of one of the societies which has its head offices in Des Moines, said that the matter had been broached at a recent meeting of the fraternal club and had met with general approval of the officials present. The fraternals, the official declared, had begun to recognize that they were going to meet with opposition from the old line insurance companies, whom, he alleged, have long exerted an influence in politics. The official claimed that by sending circular letters to the various lodges, they would be able to control the vote of the majority of their members. The proceedings would, of course, be secret. In Iowa, alone, he declared, that they would be able to control at least one hundred thousand votes in this manner

A SHORT LESSON IN FINANCE.

—New York Herald.

LIFE OF POPE IS EBBING AWAY

Aged Pontiff Catches Cold, Which Settles in His Chest and Head.

ALL HOPE HAS DISAPPEARED

Remarkable Constitution Gives Him Strength for the Last Sacrament—Drops Into Sleep from Which He Awakes in Great Pain.

Rome, July 6.—Rumors and reports of more or less foundation in fact regarding the failing health of the pope seem to have been replaced by a definite conviction among the physicians of His Holiness and also among the higher Vatican circles that Leo XIII probtbly has not much longer to live.

The Pubishers' Press correspondent, after the most searching interviews possible under the circumstances is able to state that the pope has slept hardly a moment during the past 36 hours, is weaker than he has been at any time since his health began to perceptibly fail and is the subject of the gravest alarm to his physicians and of almost hysterical fear to his immediate entourage.

In spite of his recent increased weakness His Holiness in dircet violation of the warnings of Dr. Lapponi left his bed for the purpose of receiving a deputation of Hungarian pilgrims. During the audience with the Hungarian Catholics, the pope seemed indubitably more peeked and feeble than at any time recently during the many audiences he has granted. His appearance did not belie his greatly weakened condition and after the audience it became plain that the effort had been too much for him. During the afternoon he fainted and had to be revived with stimulants by Dr. Lapponi, who, after the fainting spell hastily called in the aid of Dr. Mazzoni, one of the best known practitioners in Rome.

A constitution was held and it was decided to have his holiness driven about the Vatican gardens. This was done, and seemed temporarily to restore his holiness to a measure of increased strength.

The seeming revivification was not however, of any great duration, for a relapse set in toward evening, and so great was the alarm of Dr. Lapponi that he staid at the bedside of the pope all night, and scarcely left him for a moment yesterday.

Rome, July 6.—3 a. m.—"God's will be done. Who would have believed it, when only ten days ago I was presiding over a public consistory?" feebly murmured Pope Leo as he felt himself late last evening sinking into a sleep which lasted about three hours until excruciating pain brought the dying pontiff back to consciousness. He groaned and complained of pains on both sides of the thorax. Tenderly Dr. Lapponi, assisted by Pope Leo's valet, Piocentra, and the physician's second assistant, De Castro, lifted the frail form and changing the position, succeeded in giving the patient some relief.

Though hovering on the brink of death the life of the pontiff is still prolonged by means of strong stimulants and concentrated nourishment, and his wonderful vitality may again resist and conquer the attack of this illness. Late last evening, after the excitement of the ceremony of the last sacraments was over, the pope seemed less restless, partly soothed by a dose of chloral, which was given to him in considerable quantity.

The pontiff is lying on a small bed drawn up to a window overlooking the piazza of St. Peter's.

The interior of the vatican during the early hours of this morning testifies to the conviction that the passing of Pope Leo is very near.

The ante-chambers of the palace were all through the night thronged with officials of the church, high noblemen and members of the diplomatic corps. Telegrams of inquiry have been received from several of the monarchs of Europe.

All kinds of speculation is already in circulation as to the probable successor to the throne of St. Peter. Opinions are much divided, owing to the many interests which will be affected according to the choice by the sacred college.

MANY LIVES LOST

Cloudburst at Greensburg, Pa., Disastrous.

Greensburg, Pa., July 6.—A waterspout of immense proportions, occurring in the vicinity of Oakford park yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, created a flood that caused great loss of life and property. It is known that at least twenty persons lost their lives, and rumors place the number dead at more than 100, but up to a late hour only three or four bodies had been recovered, having been washed to the banks of the little stream that runs parallel with the park.

The waters in the lake north of Oakford park began to swell, and Manager James McGrath, believing that there was danger of a final break in the great walls of the dam, hurried to warn the crowds of pleasure seekers who had gathered under the roofs of the different stands, pavilions, etc., and warned them to run to the hills.

On both sides of the park grounds there are high hills, the park being located in a ravine about a quarter of a mile wide and a mile long.

The people, being protected from the rain, were loath to leave their places, and not until Mr. McGrath and his assistant, Chase Thomas, had visited each building in turn and simply driven the crowds out into the rain did they realize that the park's managers were in earnest, that earnestness being depicted in their pale faces, for they knew after careful study of the dam that the flood meant probable breaking of the wall that held back acres of water.

A half hour after the buildings had been cleared of the people, the water mounted the wall of the dam and within in five minutes water to the depth of five feet was flowing over the entire length of 400 feet of the wall.

The rain continued to fall in torrents and about 4 o'clock for a section of the wall of the dam to the east gave way with an awful crash. The flood beat down the ravine with a roar that was heard for two miles.

At 2 o'clock this morning Beaver creek was still rushing through Oakford park like a Niagara. It was absolutely impossible for the large crowd of rescuers to approach the park beyond a point about an eighth of a mile from the entrance, therefore any attempt to estimate the loss of life caused by the cloudburst and the collapse of the dam of the lake, with any degree of accuracy, would be little more than folly. It is the consensus of opinion in Jeanette that fully 100 persons perished in the flood, while many conservative persons maintain that the official death list will contain fully 200 names. Many persons who witnessed the calamity claim that from 100 to 150 lives were lost, while there were others in the hills overlooking the death valley who insist that not more than a score of persons were washed away by the waters. This of course does not take in the possible loss of life at all the smaller towns in the line of the flood.

ULTIMATUM TO CHINA

Odessa, July 6.—According to advices received by the St Petersburg newspaper, Sviet, from Japan, the British and Japanese ministers at Pekin have presented a note to the Chinese government in the following terms:

First—Russia's occupation of Manchuria threatens the maintenance of peace in the far east and injures the interest of England and Japan.

Second—If the departure of the Russians from Manchuria is indefinitely postponed, England and Japan must proceed to protect their interests.

Third—China must demand from Russia the immediate evacuation of Manchuria.

Fourth—Great Britain and Japan acknowledged no treaty between Russia and China which does not bind Russia to evacuate Manchuria.

Fifth—If after the evacuation of Manchuria a treaty between China and Russia with respect to the civil administration of Manchuria is deemed necessary, such treaty can only be concluded with the approval of Great Britain and Japan.

Sixth—A reply to this note is demanded within five days.

BY AMELIA E. BARR

Author of "The Bow of Orange Ribbon," "I, Thou and the Other One," "The Maid of Maiden Lane," Etc.

"I haven't a doubt of it," said Doctor Verity. "Well, Robert, did they have nothing to say to you?" he asked, turning to Admiral Blake.

"They asked me to treat my men well, and I said, 'I'll treat them like myself. I'll give them plenty of meat and drink and plenty of fighting and prize money,' and so to their good will we passed all through the city, and, as I live, 'twas the pleasantest 'progress' any mortal men could desire."

Then Doctor Verity began to talk of the American Colonies, and their wonderful growth. And as Cromwell listened his face grew luminous; he seemed to look through his eyeballs, rather than with them, and when Milton ceased there was silence until he spoke.

"I see," he said, "a great people, a vast empire, from the loins of all nations it shall spring. And there shall be no king there. But the desire of all hearts shall be toward is, and it shall be a covert for the oppressed and bread and wine and meat for those ready to perish." Then sighing, he seemed to realize the near and the [illegible] and he added, "'Twas but yesterday I wrote to that good man, the Rev. John Cotton of Boston. I have told him that I am truly ready to serve him and the rest of the brethren and the churches with him."

With these words he rose from the table, and Mr. Milton, the Ladies Mary and Frances Cromwell and Jane Swaffham went into the great hall, where there was an exceedingly fine organ. In a short time Mr. Milton began to play and to sing, but the girls walked up and down talking to Jane of their admirers, and their new gowns, and of love letters that had been sent them in baskets of flowers.

When the music ceased, the evening was far spent, and Cromwell said as he drew Frances and Jane within his arms, "Bring me the Bible, Mary. Mr. Milton has been giving us English song, now we will have the loftier music of King David."

"And we shall get no grander music, sir," said Doctor Owen, "than is to be found in the Bible. Sublimity is Hebrew by birth. We must go to the Holy Book for words beyond our words. Is there a man living who could have written that glorious hymn.

"'Lord, Thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations;

"'Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever Thou hadst formed the earth and the world; even from everlasting to everlasting Thou art God'?"

Cromwell did not answer; he was turning the leaves of the dear, homely looking volume which his daughter had laid before him. She hung affectionately over his shoulder, and when he had found what he wanted, he looked up at her and she smiled and nodded her approbation. Then he said:

"Truly, I think no mortal pen but St. John's could have written these lines; and I give not St. John the honor for the Holy One must have put them into his heart, and the hand of his angel guided his pen." And he began to read, and the words fell like a splendid vision, and a great awe filled the room as they dropped from Cromwell's lips.

And when he ceased there was a silence that could be felt, a silence almost painful, ere Dr. Owen's silvery voice penetrated it with the words of the Benediction. Then the Protector and Mrs. Cromwell kissed the girls and the clergymen blessed them, and they went to their rooms as from the very presence of God.

But Mrs. Cromwell lingered a long time. She could not rest until she had seen the silver and crystal and fine damask put away in safety; and she thought it no shame to look—as her Lord did—after the fragments of the abundant dinner.

"I will not have them wasted," she said to the steward, "nor given to those who need them not. The Lady Elizabeth hath a list of poor families, and it is my will that they, and they only, are served."

Then she went to her daughter Claypole's apartments, and talked with her about her children and her health.

When they parted it was very late; the palace was dark and still and Mrs. Cromwell, with careful economies in her mind and a candle in her hand, went softly along the lonely, gloomy corridors. Her little grandson had a slight fever; she was not satisfied with her daughter's health, and the care of the great household she ruled was a burden she never wholly laid down. In this vast, melancholy pile of chambers, she thought of her simple home in St. Ives with longing and affection. Royal splendors had given her nothing she cared for, and they had taken from her the constant help and companionship that in humbler circumstances her good, great husband had given her.

She paused a moment before the door of his room. She wondered if he was asleep. If so, she would on no account awaken him, for in these days he slept far too little. She opened the door softly and saw him sitting motionless by the fire, his eyes closed, his massive form upright and perfectly at rest.

"Oliver," she said, "dear Oliver, you ought to be in bed and asleep."

His great darkling soul flashed into his face a look of tenderest love.

"Oliver, dear Oliver."

"Elizabeth," he answered, "I wish that I could sleep. I do indeed. I need it. God knows I need it, but my heart wakes, and I do fear it will wake this night—if so, there is no sleep for me. You see, dearest, how God mingles our cup. When I was Mr. Cromwell, I could sleep from night till morning. When I was Gen. Cromwell, my labors gave me rest. Now that I am Lord Protector of three Kingdoms, sleep, alas! is gone far from me. In my mind I run to and fro through all the land. I have a thousand plans and anxieties, Elizabeth, my dearest; great place is not worth looking after. It is not."

"What troubles you in particular, Oliver?"

"One of the things that troubled my Great Master, when he wept and prayed and fainted in Gethsemane. He knew that those whom he loved and who ought to strengthen and comfort him, would soon forsake and flee from him. I think of the men who have trusted me to lead them in every battle; who never found me wanting; the men with whom I have taken counsel, with whom I have prayed; the men who were to me as Jonathan to David, and when I think of them my heart is like to burst in twain. They are beginning to forsake me, and their cold looks and formal words hurt me like a sword thrust; they do, Elizabeth, they do indeed."

"If you had made yourself King, as you might have done, as you ought to have done, you would have had less opposition. John Verity said so to me. He said Englishmen were used to a king, but they did not know what to make of a protector."

"King! King! I am king in very truth, call me what they like. And for that matter, why should I not be king? Doctor Owen tells me the word king comes from Konig and means 'the man that can.' I am that man. Everything in Europe comes from some battlefield, that was their first title to kingship. How many battles have I fought and won? I never lost a single field—how could I, the Lord of Hosts being with me? As a hero of battle, there is no man to stand before me. Why should I not be king over the three countries I have conquered? John Verity is right. Englishmen think a protector is a ruler for emergency. They feel temporary and uncertain with a protector. A kingship is a settled office."

"Take the crown, Oliver. Why not?"

"I have no orders to take it. My angel told me when I was a boy, that I should become the greatest man in England, but he said not that I should be king. And I know also from One who never lied to me, that this nation will yearn after its old monarchy. I am here to do a work, to sow seeds that will take generations to ripen, but my reign is only an interregnum. I shall found no dynasty."

Then taking his wife's hand tenderly between his own, he said with intense fervor, "There is not a man living can say I sought this place—not a man or woman living on English ground. I can say in the presence of God, I would have been glad to have lived with thee under my woodside all the days of my life, and to have kept my sheep and plowed my land rather than bear the burden of this government."

"Do you think the Puritan government will die with you, Oliver?"

"I think it will, but the Puritan principles will never die. The kings of the earth banded together cannot destroy them. They will spring up and flourish like 'the grass that tarrieth not for man'—spring where none has sowed or planted them—spring in the wilderness and in the city, until they possess the whole earth. This I know, and am sure of. After all, Elizabeth, there is nothing got by this world's love, and nothing lost by its hate. This is the root of the matter; my position as Protector is either of God, or of man. If I did not firmly believe it was of God, I would have run away from it many years ago. If it be of God, he will bear me up while I am in it. If it be of man it will shake and tumble. What are all our histories but God manifesting that he has shaken and trampled upon everything he has not planted?"

"My dearest you are now in a good mind. Lie down and sleep in his care, for he does care for you." And she put her arms around his neck and kissed him, and he answered:

"Thou art my comfort, and I thank God for thee! When he laid out my life's work he thought of thee to sweeten it."

She left him then, hoping that he would shelter his weariness in darkness and in sleep. But he did not. The words he had spoken, though so full of hope and courage, wanted that authentication from beyond, without which they were as tinkling brass to Oliver. He locked his chamber door, retired his soul from all visibles, and stood solemnly before God, waiting to hear what he would say to him. And in a moment all the trouble of outward things grew at peace with that within, for he stood motionless on that dazzling line where mortal and immortal verge—that line where all is lost in love for God, and the beggar Self forgets to ask for anything. The austere sweetness of sacrifice filled his soul. The divine Hymn of Renunciation was on his lips.

"Do as thou wilt with me," he cried, "but, oh, that I knew where to find thee! Oh, that I might come into thy presence!"

Then there was suddenly granted to his longing that open vision, open only to the spirit, that wondrous evidence that very near about us lies the realm of spiritual mysteries, and the strong man bowed and wept great tears of joy and sorrow. And after that Peace—peace unspeakable and full of gladness, and he slept like a sinless child while his angel came in a dream and comforted him. For so God giveth to his beloved while they sleep.

Little Hope in That Quarter.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior Ryan, at one time a sheriff in his native state, relates how he was at one time ordered to arrest an Indian who had been selling whisky to his red friends on the reservation. After the sheriff had captured "Poor Lo" he gave him a sound lecture on the depravity of his conduct. The Indian listened stolidly to the reprimand, and finally asked:

"No way Ingun git outer this?"

"No one can help you now but God," was the reply.

Sadly the prisoner shook his head. Then he murmured: "God heep like Uncle Sam; Injun never see Him!"—New York Times.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, July 6, 1903.

F. S. Dunshee has appealed the cigarette case from the state supreme court to the supreme court of the United States. The original package law is in controversy. The case which was carried up from one of the southern states involving this point was decided against the cigarette people by federal supreme court but since then there has been a change in the personnel of the court and as the decision before was by a divided bench the idea is that there may be a better show in the Iowa case. The case is known as Cook vs. Marshall county. It was for the recovery of mulct taxes paid to the state for the sale of cigarettes in Iowa and the court of Iowa held that the state had the right to collect it.

The board of control has prepared a recapitulation of the reports as to the insane in county hospitals and private institutions in the first half of 1903. It shows at the time of the inspection by the inspector of the board there were 468 males and 436 females, a total of 904 in the county asylums. The total in private institutions was 174 males and 300 females, a total of 474. The grand total of insane in county and private institutions is given as 1,378. The reports to the board show there are 3,340 insane in the state hospitals. From this, it appears, there are about 4,718 insane in Iowa.

The regular quarterly count of money in the state treasury has just been made. The report showed as follows: Endowment fund, $666,455.89; general revenue, $1,570,478.88 university special tax, $3,938.53; state college special tax, $30,701.04; state normal school special tax, $16,645.78; total, $2,288,220.12. The actual cash on hand was $79,187.87.

William E. Curtis, the noted correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald, who attended the republican state convention, wired his paper as follows: "Governor Cummins represents the sentiments of the republicans of this state and is actually conservative. The younger element, the coming generation, are even more advanced in their ideas than he, and while Sena Allison's persuasive influence has been sufficient to hold them down for a good while, they will not be held down much longer. Mr. Allison agrees with them; he agrees with Governor Cummins that the present tariff law should be revised and the schedules of duties readjusted to the changed conditions of commerce and industry that have occurred since they were adopted seven years ago, but after his thirty years' experience in tariff legislation he knows much better than they that there is no use in attempting the impossible, for a majority of the senate republicans will permit no tinkering with the tariff, although it is probable that a majority of the house believe that an early revision is advisable and necessary.

'Mr. Allison's argument is that the agitation of the subject would disturb the prosperous condition of the country; that it would create an apprehension in the minds of the manufacturing interests, and that the uncertainty as to what might be done in changing duties would cause a suspension of affairs that would be next to disastrous. He sees no hope for any action by congress concerning the tariff until the next presidential election. But he admits that the public sentiment in the west, and particularly in Iowa, can be restrained no longer than that. In the meantime he advocates conservative action to prevent agitation and the use of phraseology in the platform which cannot be misconstrued or misinterpreted."

According to a statement of a member of the Iowa railroad commissioners, that body will shortly investigate the causes of the wreck which occurred on the Illinois Central between Waterloo and Raymond, a few weeks ago, in which several lives were lost. The commissioners believe the wreck was largely due to the curve and grade on the Illinois Central at that point, which they think is greater than the state law allows. The report of the investigation will be of considerable interest to all the railroads in Iowa. Some time ago the railway commissioners notified the various railroads that they would have to reduce certain grades and curves within a limited time. Some of the railroads did so, but others did not, among which is the Illinois Central.

The United States government has ordered the saloon and resort which are located on the property recently purchased by the United States for the new government building in Des Moines to be vacated within thirty days. Notice has been sent to the proprietors, and Custodian Miller was given orders to see that the two concerns left the ground.

At a meeting of the executive council, Auditor Carroll was authorized to prepare a statement of the facts in regard to the reports he has received from insurance companies as to the amount of fees for examinations charged under the administration of F. F. Merriam as auditor. The statement will be prepared and made public accordingly. Mr. Carroll has received reports from a large number of companies. It is understood the showing will indicate that in some cases large fees were collected.

STORIETTES.

Not long ago, a certain door company received an order for a car load of doors from an embryo Texan town. The order was filled and the doors ready for shipment, when a telegram was received canceling the order, and announcing that a letter of explanation would follow. The letter arrived, and was found to be brief and much to the point. It read: "Cancel order for car load of doors. The town has suddenly gone prohibition, and so many doors could not be used in twenty years."

The other day the London Pall Mall Gazette referred to W. S. Gilbert as "the late W. S. Gilbert." This called forth a note of protest from the famous comic-opera librettist, in which he said: "There is a line in your issue of yesterday that must have sent a thrill of joy through many a worthy home. I refer to a line in an article headed 'A Naval Battle,' in which I am referred to as 'the late W. S. Gilbert.' I am always sorry to spoil sport, but common candor compels me to admit (reluctantly) that I am still alive. Yours faithfully, W. S. Gilbert."

Recently, an American traveling in Russia, who had neglected to provide himself with a passport, when he arrived at the borders of the Czar's domains, was held up by an official with a demand for his passport. For an instant the American was stumped, but, so the story goes, he quickly rose to the emergency. Diving into his inside pocket he pulled out his life-insurance policy and handed it to the Russian. The later gravely looked the paper over, carefully scrutinizing the imposing-looking seal and the array of signatures. Then with a satisfied air, he handed back the paper, and the American passed on.

The story is told of a kindly Massachusetts man who chanced in a restaurant in one of the frontier towns, where he met a waiter armed with a sorrowful towel tied about his waist a dented tin tray, and a couple of guns The Easterner looked him over in a gentle way, and asked him if he had any breakfast food. "I guess yes," responded the cowboy waiter; "we got ham and eggs, fried sausage, chuck steak, spare ribs, mutton chops, corned-beef hash, hog and hominy, light bread, heavy bread, toast bread, apple butter, peach butter, cow butter, coffee, tea, buttermilk, and beer. Breakfast food? Well, that's our winner Name your grub."

Frederick the Third of Prussia, who delighted in his reputation as the most laconic man in Europe, one met a Hungarian magnate, taking the waters of Carlsbad, who had also acquired fame for abruptness of speech. This tempted the Prussian monarch to meet him and try him in the arts of brevity. The magnate was pointed out to Frederick as he stood in the hall of his hotel. The king went up to him, and the following conversation was the result: Frederick—Bathing? Hungarian—Drinking. Frederick—Officer? Hungarian—Magnate. Frederick—So! Hungarian (taking the initiative)—Detective? Frederick—King! Hungarian—Congratulate!

For Aged People.

Bellflower, Mo., July 6th.—Mr. G. V. Bohrer of this place has written an open letter to the old men and women of the country, advising them to use Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for those forms of Kidney Trouble so common among the aged. Mr. Bohrer says:

"I suffered myself for years with my Kidneys and urinary organs. I was obliged to get up as many as seven or eight times during the night.

"I tried many things with no success, till I saw one of Dodd's Almanacs, and read of what Dodd's Kidney Pills were doing for old people.

"I bought two boxes from our druggist and began to use them at once. In a very short time I was well. This is over a year ago, and my trouble has not returned, so that I know my cure was a good, genuine, permanent one.

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills are a splendid medicine for old people or anyone suffering with Kidney and urinary troubles, for although I am 84 years of age, they have made me well."

The Glorious Fourth.

Another anniversary of the birth of our great nation has come and gone. The people of Klemme celebrated in various places but the large majority of them went to Belmond and fully 200 Klemmeites paraded the streets of that neat little city from early morn til late at night. A good program had been arranged and was successfully carried out by the Belmond people, and everyone seemed to be enjoying themselves.

The drawing card from here to Belmond was the fact that the Klemme base ball team played the Belmond boys. The game was hotly contested from the begining and was one of the best games ever witnessed in Belmond so says Belmond people. Twelve innings were played at the end of which the score was six to six and on account of not having time to finish the balance of the program and the game too the ball boys were asked to quit the game and divide the money equally. This was done in order to accommodate the Belmond committee though we actually believe that we would have won the game had it gone to a finish. The Klemme boys have no reason to feel bad because of not winning the game for to every fair minded spectator it was evident that the game in all justice belonged to them. The score made by Belmond in the first inning was not earned and a couple of decisions on third base, each of which cost a score should have been reversed. We do not mean to criticize the umpires by this declaration, and know that they tried to do the fair thing by both sides, but we were in a position to see these to a better advantage than was the umpire and our unprejudiced opinion is that the men were actually out. Both teams played fast ball and each opportunity was taken by each side. The work by the batteies of the competing teams was splendid.

Right here we wish to comend the people of Klemme and vicinity for their loyality to the ball team. Almost every man, woman and child in the town followed the ball team to Belmond and "rooted" right loyalty for their favorites. This encourages the boys and demonstrates that our people are for Klemme first, last and always. On every hand the Klemme boys met friends which made one know that he was not alone in a foreign land and gave each player more nerve. Upwards of 3000 people witnessed this game and all agreed that it was a game worth coming miles to see.

Our pitchers Frank Kluckhohn and Ed Ell had speed to spare and but few hits were made off them while we all know how natural it is for Joe Nissen to play his part to perfection and in this game he surely excelled his former record.

The 2-year old son of Lew Lewis met with what might have been a very serious accident on Thursday evening last. The little fellow fell on an awl. The awl entered his face just below the eye and had it been a fraction of inch higher it would have destroyed the sight of the eye. He is getting along nicely now however, and no bad results are expected.

Quietly Wed.

On Saturday morning July 4th., at 8:00 a. m, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs, A. B. Shafer, occured the marriage of Mr. Oliver Lemon to Miss Laura Floy Shafer. The ceremony which united these two most worthy young people was performed by Rev. B. F. Meyer, pastor of the English M. E. church at Garner, and was witnessed only by the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The announcement of this union at this time was quite a surprise to many of our people and was it not for Mayor Dow they would undoubtedly have escaped the shower of rice which they got at the depot. It was to good for Ed to keep, so broke the joyous tidings to our people.

The groom is a young, prosperous farmer and is a young man of exemplary habits. He is steady and industrious and enjoys the esteem and confidence of a large circle of acquaintances. He will make for his deserving bride a kind and loving husband.

Miss Floy Shafer. now Mrs. Lemon, is the youngest daughter of Mrs. A. B. Shafer, she has grown to womanhood in Klemme and her admirers are many. She is an accomplished young woman and possesses those characteristics which makes womanhood charming.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemon will go to housekeeping on a farm three miles north of town immediately. The best wishes of their friends go with them and all hope their journey may always be pleasant as they go along the pathway of life. The TIMES extends congratulations.

John Suckow Dead.

This sad, though not unexpected news was heralded throngh our little city on Monday morning. For some time past no hopes of Mr. Suckow's recovery have been entertained and the end of a long suffering came on Sunday evening about 5:00 o'clock. For years Mr. Suckow made Klemme his home but last spring moved to Garner to reside. He was a patient sufferer and when the end came he died as he had lived a firm believer in the power of the Master to care for His children. The interment was made in Germantown cemetery on Tuesday. The bereaved relatives have the sympathy of all in their sad bereavement.

Our Meservey friend Mr. Moore, editor of the Messenger, and a tiller of the soil living "out a distance from Meservey in the direction of Klemme" whom we shall suppose to be our old friend and acquaintance Chas. P. Ell, seem to take exceptions to what we said about the Klemme-Meservey ball game which was pulled off at Meservey a couple of weeks ago. In reading over our article on the game we see no plac where we have been abusive to the Meservey boys. The supposed Chas. P. lets us off quite easely, but Bro, Moore, very kindly and per haps appropriately dubbs us the "green-eyed compassionest" We harbor no ill-will toward any of the Meservey people and each and every one of the Meservey ball team have always treated us with courtesy and we believe them to be gentleman and really think that Editor Moore is naturally a good fellow but has a temper which he should strive to curb. Brother Moore, re-read the TIMES article of two weeks ago, take time and consider it carefully, and then if we have in any instance abused any citizen if Meservey, consider an apology submitted herewith. We spoke of the ball boys as a husky lot of fellows. So they were, and the fact that they were is no discredit to them. "They were clad in all the colors of the rainbow" was another clause of the arcticle. This was to be expected being that the team was gathered from surrounding towns and naturally would not wear uniforms alike. We unlike yourself beleive Brother Moore, that we are possessed of ordinary intelligence with our "manner bump" sufficenitly developed to refrain from becoming abusive over a friendly game of ball. The Klemme base ball boys are gentleman this year the same as of yore, and when you recover from your fit ill temper you too will admit this. Of course Meservey has a sore spot on account of not having won a game, but have a fever and forget it, for by fretting and stewing over it, you will pine your life away. Now Brother, honestly, did you see anything in the TIMES article that was so very wrong? Is it not a fact that you just had to explode to keep from busting because you were unable to capture either game? Moore 'twas cruel of you.

The Meservey Messenger man says there are no bogs over there and that when a man gets so he can see bogs where there are none he is getting in bad shape. Perhaps he is right, but when you take into consideration our nationality it is easily explained why we saw bogs. We are decidedly Irish.

STATE CONVENTION WITHOUT FRICTION

Platform Adopted With Enthusiastic Unanimity---One Contest for Nomination.

LEADERS APPROVE PLATFORM

J. F. Riggs, of Sigourney, Named for State Superintendent on the Third Ballot—All Other Nominations Were Unanimous and by Acclamation.

For governor—A. B. Cummins, of Des Moines.

For lieutenant governor—John Herriott, of Stuart.

For state superintendent—John F. Riggs, of Sigourney.

For judge of supreme court—Chas. A. Bishop, of Des Moines.

For railroad commissioner—Colonel David J. Palmer, of Washington.

Des Moines, July 2.—In a convention the most remarkable for the absence of contention that has been held in many years by the republicans of Iowa, Governor A. B. Cummins was yesterday enthusiastically nominated for a second term and the ticket as here set forth was formulated. Lieutenant Governor Herriott, Chief Justice Charles A. Bishop and Col. David J. Palmer all were renominated by acclamation. The single contest of the day, that over state superintendent, a close but good natured struggle, ended in the selection of John F. Riggs, of Sigourney, as the nominee, his vote being 693 to 584 for H. C. Adams, of West Union, and 5 for State Superintendent R. C. Barrett, who was seeking a fourth term.

In spite of all forecasts to the contrary, the convention passed pacifically. Harmony was the order of the day, and the compromise platform, agreed to weeks ago between Senator Allison, Governor Cummins and Hon. George D. Perkins and sanctioned by J. W. Blythe, A. B. Funk and other leaders, was adopted by the unanimous vote of the delegates. Here and there, it is true, there were outcroppings of dissent among the more radical, but, on the whole, the great mass of the convention worked earnestly in behalf of a peaceful adjustment of all differences of detail over the platform.

In accepting the nomination for governor, Governor Cummins, in an address that was received with every demonstration of approval, declared he stood on the platform as adopted and approved it. He spoke of his past utterances on the tariff revision question and related subjects and made it plain that he had not spoken in haste and had nothing to retract. Senator Dolliver, Senator Allison, Congressman Cousins and Congressman Lacey also spoke. Senator Dolliver held that through controversy the truth was found. Senator Allison, in the most earnest terms, voiced his approval of the platform and indicated his intention to do what he could to form the national platform along similar lines. Congressman Cousins voiced his adherence to the Dingley law, and Congressman Lacey had no hesitation in expressing himself as against tariff revision.

It was 11 o'clock when the convention was called to order by State Chairman R. H. Spence. Dr. A. B. Storms, pastor of the First Methodist church of this city, pronounced the invocation.

Chairman Spence read the official call of the convention, and after music by the band, presented Hon. George D. Perkins, of Sioux City, as temporary chairman of the convention. He was warmly greeted as he stepped forward to deliver his address, and his utterances throughout were approved with frequent outbursts of applause. Intense attention was paid to his remarks on the tariff, and his sentiments evidently struck responsive chords in the hearts of his listeners.

Mr. Perkins spoke for two hours, and at the close of his address committees were announced, after which djournment was taken until 2 o'clock. The committee on resolutions follows:

First district—J. W. Blythe, Des Moines county.

Second—Joe R. Lane, Scott.

Third—Captain J. F. Merry, Dubuque.

Fourth—C. D. Ellis, Floyd.

Fifth—J. H. Trewin, Linn.

Sixth—H. W. Robinson, Jasper.

Seventh—Judge Edmund E. Nichols, Dallas.

Eighth—H. M. Towner, Adams.

Ninth—Walter I. Smith, Pottawattamie.

Tenth—Joseph Allen, Pocahontas.

Eleventh—E. D. Chassell, Plymouth.

When the convention reassembled at 2:30 o'clock the committee on permanent organization recommended N. E. Kendall, of Monroe county, for chairman and E. W. Weeks, of Guthrie county, for secretary.

Upon taking the chair, Mr. Kendall spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention: For the distinguished honor which you have conferred upon me, I am profoundly grateful. It always is a pleasure and an inspiration to stand confronted by the triumphant republicans of Iowa, a citizenship the most intelligent, the most patriotic of any between Cape Cod bay and the Golden Gate, between Minnesota pines and the cotton fields of the sunny south. (Applause.) You have convened to discharge the most important of duties, and we go forth from this convention hall to enter upon another campaign under the stars and stripes of the great republic, and the unsullied banner of the old republican party. We go with unwavering confidence in the righteousness of our cause and unfaltering determination to return a majority of one hundred thousand for the old republican ticket at the election next November.

Gentlemen of the convention, it has always been a favorite theory of mine that the provisions of the atonement are not generous enough to contemplate the regeneration of a permanent chairman who detains a political convention with an extended address. I therefore call for the report of the committee on resolutions. (Applause.)

The report of the committee on resolutions not being prepared as yet, a motion was made to proceed to the nomination of candidates. Governor Cummins and Lieutenant Governor Herriott were renominated by acclamation. In the contest for state superintendent three ballots were necessary, the last ballot being 693 for Riggs, 548 for Adams and 5 for Barrett.

At this stage of the proceedings the resolutions committee appeared. It was announced the committee was ready to report and the resolutions as agreed on by the committee were read by the chairman, J. W. Blythe. The reading was listened to attentively and there was frequent applause. In the briefest possible manner, the platform was disposed of and was adopted by a unanimous vote. The platform follows:

The republicans of Iowa, in convention assembled, congratulate the people of state and nation on the results of republican administrations which has promoted the welfare of the entire country in all of its material interests, and has brought to them prosperity, contentment and happiness.

Iowa republicans especially rejoice in the acknowledged leadership of Iowa in the councils of the republican party and its influence in the shaping of politics. We rejoice in the material prosperity of the people of our state, safeguarded as they have been by the legislation in the interests of the entire body of the people.

We commend entirely and without reservation the administration of President Roosevelt. Called as he was to the office of chief executive under the most trying circumstances, his fidelity to the public welfare the wisdom and moderation of his utterances and counsel, and the performance of all his duties command our respect and admiration.

Iowa republicans, in common with the republicans of the entire nation, expect and desire his unanimous nomination as his own successor.

We congratulate the people of the state that in his cabinet and among his advisers, Iowa has such wise, able and judicious statesmen as Secretaries Shaw and Wilson.

We also congratulate the people of the state that in the senate of the United States our representatives hold positions of the highest character and influence; and that our representatives in the lower house of congress occupy positions of foremost place in that body.

The state has had a worthy successor in a distinguished line of chief executives in Governor Albert B. Cummins. His administration merits and deserves an unqualified approval. We commend his courage, discretion and scrupulous fidelity to duty, and his devotion to the progressive policies of the republican party inspires our confidence in his political leadership.

We reiterate our faith in the historic policy of protection. Under its influence our country, foremost in the bounties of nature, has become foremost in production. It has enabled labor to secure good wages and has induced capital to engage in production with a reasonable hope of fair reward. Its vindication is found in the history of its successes and the rapidity with which our national resources have been developed and our industrial independence secured, and we heartily renew our pledge to maintain it.

Tariff rates enacted to carry this policy into effect should be "just, fair and impartial, equally opposed to foreign control and domestic monopoly, to sectional discrimination and individual favoritism," and must from time to time be changed to meet the varying conditions incident to the progress of our industries and their changing relations to our foreign and domestic commerce. Duties that are too low should be increased, and duties that are too high should be reduced.

We endorse the policy of reciprocity as the natural complement of protection. Reciprocty between natons s trade for mutual advantage and both sides must give and take. Protection builds up domestic industry and trade and secures our own markets for ourselves; reciprocity builds up foreign trade and finds an outlet for surplus.

We approve the treaty with Cuba recently ratified as conferring substantial benefits upon both countries, and urge that the remaining steps necessary to make it effective be promptly taken.

We believe that the large corporations commonly called "trusts" should be so regulated and supervised both in their organization and operation that their evil tendencies may be checked and their evil practices prevented. In many instances they are efficient industrial instruments and the natural outcome of an inevitable process of economic evolution. We do not desire their destruction, but insist that they shall be so regulated and controlled as to prevent monopoly and promote competition, and in the fullest measure subserve and advance the public good. The patriotic and resolute course of the president of the United States in his recommendations to congress upon this subject and upon the related subject of further regulation of interstate commerce commands our confidence and admiration, and the recent legislation of congress in harmony with his recommendations meets our hearty approval.

We renew our allegiance to the principle of the gold standard as enunciated in the national platforms of the republican party in 1896 and 1900, which resulted in the establishment of the parity of all our money and the stability of our currency on a gold basis.

Under republican administration of national affairs gratitude to our soldiers and sailors has been attested by liberal pensions provided by legislation supported always by the nearly unanimous votes of the republicans in congress. We recommend the further provision for this purpose as made by the last congress.

We favor the systematic establishment of good roads in this state, and such further legislation upon that subject as investigation and experience may establish as requisite to the economical and effective improvement and maintenance of our country roads.

We recommend to the general assembly further legislation in aid of systematic drainage.

We note with satisfaction the gradual improvement of conditions in our relations with the Philippine islands under an administrative policy, avoiding the necessity for control through military power, and we commend the steady progress made in the preparation of the Philippine people for the fullest practical degree of self-government.

The essence of free government is government by law. Laws must be enforced by the government and should be cheerfully obeyed by the people. The spirit of lawlessness wherever met must be rebuked and we commend the fidelity and zeal of the national and state officials wherever exercised for the vindication of this principle.

That we are earnestly opposed to all legislation designed to accomplish the disfranchisement of citizens upon lines of race, color, or station in life, and condemn the measures adopted by the democratic party in certain states of the union to accomplish that end.

Believing with the late President McKinley in his last public utterance that "expositions are the timekeepers of progress," we take pride in endorsing the exposition to be held in St. Louis in 1904, celebrating the Louisiana purchase, and approve of liberal appropriations therefor. We commend to the careful consideration of the general assembly of the state the needs of Iowa in making a creditable exhibit.

The committee sent to escort Governor Cummins to the hall then came on the stage with Governor Cummins. There was a remarkable outburst from the convention as he appeared. He spoke, in part, as follows:

For myself, I have during the last two years expressed my views upon many of the phases of the tariff and of reciprocity. These views wherever expressed have not been hastily reached, nor hastily or carelessly expressed, and I want you to know, because you know me well enough to know, that I reserve no part of my opinion from you; I want you to know that I hold these opinions still, and I shall in the future as I have in the past maintain them simply because I believe them to be true. I believe fundamentally and profoundly in the policy of protection. It was bred in my bone. I came from a state in which a belief in this policy is drawn in with the first breath, and I find in the platform you have just adopted a most beautiful and complete tribute to the efficiency and the wisdom of this policy. I believe that the mighty transformations of the last six years have made a change in some of the tariff schedules necessary, and I find in this platform a recognition of that necessity.

I believe that here are some of the tariff rates too high and that they should be reduced, and I find in this platform warrant for the position I occupy. I believe that industrial monopolies are intolerable and that all the just powers of government should be exerted to prevent and to overcome them. And I find in this platform the statement that tariff schedules must be as well opposed to domestic monopoly as to foreign control. I believe in that reciprocity which expands the production of our farms and workshops and gives to our people greater labor than they now have, and I find in this platform the sentiment that recoprocity between nations is trade for mutual advantage and that both sides must give and take. These are suggestions I must have made in fairness to you. They are the mere detail of the great republican doctrine, and though there are these differences of opinion, honestly held, they concern not the enemy. We will march side by side, not only in amity, but in enthusiasm, and I believe as I believe my existence that in the campaigns now to come the flag of republicanism will be planted upon loftier heights than ever before in the bright and glorious career of our beloved party. I thank you.

At the close of the governor's remarks there was another outburst of cheering, and then the convention completed its business by the nomination by acclamation of Chief Justice Charles A. Bishop, of Des Moines, to succeed himself as judge of the supreme court, and the re-nomination of Colonel D. J. Palmer, of Washington, as railroad commissioner.

Allison, Dolliver, Cousins and Lacey each spoke briefly.

STATEMENT ON JEWISH PETITION

Our Government Makes Its Position Towards Russia Plain and Positive.

SITUATION IS VERY DELICATE

Official Reply to Inspired Note From Russian Government On the Matter —Reply Carefully Considered By the President.

Washington, July 3.—The position of the administration regarding the proposed transmission of the petition of the Jewish citizens of the United States to the Russian government was made very clear and positive by a statement authorized by the state department. This statement was inspired by newspaper publications reflecting the attitude of the Russian government in the event of the presentation of such a petition through the medium of the United States embassy at St. Petersburg which has been brought to the attention of high officers of the government. It was given very careful consideration both here and at Oyster Bay before the decision was reached to make any declaration regarding the matter. The statement is as follows:

"At the state department it was stated by high officials that in the absence of Secretary Hay that the delay in forwarding the petition of the American citizens of the Jewish faith as to the ill treatment of their co-religionists in Russia was solely due to the delay in furnishing the address to the state department by the petitioners. The state department would, of course, pay no heed to any statement purporting to emanate from the Russian government unless such statement was made officially in some form or other to our government. The state department has been specially careful to act only in accordance with all requirements of official propriety, but within the limits thus laid down it will most certainly not hesitate to give expression to the deep sympathy felt not only by the administration, but by all the American people for the unfortunate Jews who have been victims in the recent appalling massacres and outrages. In this connection it was pointed out by another official who disclaimed any purpose to speak in his official capacity, however, that it seemed somewhat strange, to say the least, that the Russian government should choose this particular method of making a statement to the American people at the very time when, by methods which are certainly the reverse of friendly to the United States, it is sought to make China join in breaking the plighted faith of all the powers as to the open door in Manchuria, and has endeavored to bar our people from access to the Manchurian trade."

The above statement was shown to Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, but he declined to make any comment on it. Any reply to this statement must be made under directions from St. Petersburg. It is realized both at the state department and at the Russian embassy, that the situation is extremely delicat.

Washington, July 3.—Acting Secretary of State Loomis has been notified that the appeal on behalf of the Russian Jews will be delivered at the state department within a week. Upon receipt of the petition by the United States government it will be dispatched to Mr. Riddle, United States charge at St. Petersburg.

BELIEVE WAR IS NEAR.

Hostilities Between Bulgaria and Turkey are Looked For.

London, July 3.—The Vienna correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that in well informed circles in the Austrian capital the view is gaining ground that the outbreak of a war between Turkey and Bulgaria is nearer than generally supposed. A dispatch received there from Constantinople asserts that the possibility of war is being canvassed in diplomatic circles at Pera and it is feared that an encounter may at any moment occur. A newspaper in Sofia quotes the Bulgarian war minister as saying: "We will never attack or will Turkey attack. On the contrary, we will fight together against a common enemy. Turkey would endanger us and leave the field to colonists and other vultures who are waiting for our end, to take possession. Should a palace rebellion dethrone the sultan we would march on Constantinople, set his son on the throne and baffle the intrigues of Reschad, the sultan's brother."

WOMEN

Every physician of large practice has had the experience of being called on to attend women who imagined that they were in the last stages of some dire female malady, when upon examination the fact was revealed that obstructed physiology of the stomach or bowels was the whole cause of the trouble.

The physician, however, who has not had experience may fall into the error of diagnosing grave diseases of the female system when they do not exist, because disorders of the bowels may be neglected until they give many of the appearances of female disease. The bowels have been known to become so clogged with hardened contents as to produce a condition closely resembling uterine displacement, uterine prolapse (falling of the womb) and the sick headache which is often attributed to female diseases is most often actually due to some trouble in the digestive machinery involving the liver, stomach, bowels or the great "Solar Plexus," which is the central telegraph station from which nervous messages are transmitted to and from all the organs in the abdominal cavity.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

quickly corrects the congested conditions referred to above, headache, constipation, sallow complexions disappear and the glow of health is upon you.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has done more to relieve suffering women than any preparation ever sold in the same length of time it has been sold—about ten years. Thousands of letters from all parts of the country testify to this.

Your druggist sells it in 50 cent and $1 bottles (it is economy to buy the $1 size) or if not a postal will bring FREE from us a very interesting book and a sample bottle.

Strenuous Demands of Society.

Numerous cases of nervous breakdown among women in New York and Washington, including the wives of the president and the attorney general, call attention to the overstrenuous life not only of wealthy women, but of well-to-do. If there were pleasure in this dreary round called "gay" there would be more excuse for it. But there is none. The same people meet day after day, compare notes of the last ball or dinner and drearily speculate upon the next, exhibit their jewels and gowns and yearn for Lent, which will be a travesty upon its origin, and merely a period of rest and preparation for new toils that come to nothing.

WAS USED TO IT.

Reformed Gambler Not Displeased at Pointed Sermon.

Municipal Court Justice George F. Roesch says a friend of his once took a reformed gambler to a religious meeting. The preacher devoted a large part of his discourse to remarks reflecting upon the past life of the gambler. The man who had escorted the gambler to the meeting thought it incumbent on him to apologize for introducing him into a place where he would hear himself abused.

"I didn't know that was the way this preacher was going to talk," he said, "or I wouldn't have asked you to come."

"Oh, don't worry about that," was the reply. "There never was a sermon worth a cuss that didn't hit me somewhere."—New York Times.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

W. C. Moranda, section foreman at Beverly, was shot by John Cistove. Cistove runs the boarding house for the section men, and fired at another boarder with whom he had quarreled previously. Cistove has been placed under arrest pending developments in the case. Moranda's recovery is considered doubtful.

Startling facts have come to light in the case of Ben Ferris, whose mutilated remains were found on the Great Western tracks at Dubuque a few days ago. There is a belief that the young man was the victim of foul play and that his untimely death marked the close of a love affair in which he was slain by a jealous rival. The theory advanced is that he was murdered in cold blood and his body then taken to the railroad tracks and thrown theron, with the idea of having the wheels of a train pass over him and in this manner avert suspicion of murded to that of accidental death.

Captain J. F. Merry, of Dubuque, Col. H. H. Rood of Mt. Vernon and Senator L. C. Blanchard of Oskaloosa, have gone to New York, as members of the sub-committee of the Vicksburg commission. While in the east, the members of the sub-committee will interview prominent sculptors, who will be asked to submit designs for the Iowa monument. The commissioners will visit Boston in the course of their trip. It is expected to select designs for the monument while in the east. The state appropriated $150,000 for the cause and of this it is planned to use about $100,000 for the state monument and the remainder for the monuments of the different regiments.

Mrs. Elsie Andrews of Onawa who already has a suit against O'Conner & Son, saloon keepers of Onawa, for $8,000, by her attorneys, J. A. Pritchard and W. D. Brown has filed three more suits of a similar character, as follows: One against M. M. Wise and the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company for $3,000, one against William Wise, John Arends and R. Edwards for $8,000, and one for $8,000 against the Heitman Bros., and their bondsman, the United States Fidelity and Guaranty company. S. W. Andrews is a shoemaker of Onawa and his wife alleges that the above parties have furnished him with intoxicating liquors by which he has been injured and prevented from earning a living and supporting his family.

Charles O. Lyman, a laborer, was found dead with three bullet wounds in his body, at a point about 300 feet west of the South Fifth street bridge, on the north side of the Coon river at Des Moines. He had commited suicide. There was one bulle wound in the abdomen, one between the eyes and one in the drum of the right ear. All had been inflicted with a 32-caliber revolver, which was found lying on the man's lap. Lyman was a widower and had no family. He has lived in Des Moines for the past fifteen years, doing almost any work which he could find. He has never lived at one place long enough to make it his residence. He was a wanderer, living at one place and then another, and never working anywhere for any length of time.

The argument of the attorneys for Louis Busse, under conviction of murder and sentenced to death in Bremer county, for the killing of his wife, has been filed with the supreme court, and the line of defense has been disclosed. The chief reason for asking a new trial will be that it is claimed Busse was first struck by his wife over the head with a chair as he came home drunk and that because of this he was greatly angered and killed her, and it was not by premeditation or malice, which must be present if the death penalty is to be inflicted. Complaint is made that the evidence in regard to Busse being drunk was excluded, and the alleged confession he made was not introduced but only what some persons said in regard to the confession. It is evident that a hard fight is to be made to get a new trial for Busse.

The improvements planned for this season at the state fair grounds, are rapidly being completed, and things are getting shapped up for the state fair, which will open in little more than a month. Fair visitors this year will notice a number of betterments. The new judging pavilion for swine, the first of the kind in the country, is practically completed. The street railway company has the roof on the new and handsome depot and pavilion which will serve as an exit and entrance for persons going and returning from the grounds on the street railway line. The depot is located a short distance west of the live stock pavilion, which was erected last year. The new greenhouse has been finished. The heavy storm of some weeks ago tore the roof from the dairy building. This damage has been repaired. The new walks have been laid thus completing more than a mile of vitrified brick walk on the state fair grounds. One of the improvements planned for this year is an enlargement of the seating capacity of the amphitheater. There will be an addition to the east end of the building, in which will be seats for 2,500 people. This addition will bring the total capacity of the amphitheater up to about 9,000. Owing to the abundance of rain, the grounds are in especially fine condition this year. Grass has grown abundantly, and the young trees which were set out this spring to the number of several hundred are flourishing finely.

G. Potts, a prominent horseman at Oelwein was seriously if not fatally hurt in a runaway. The horse became frightened at a paper and started to run, throwing Mr. and Mrs. Potts out. Mr. Potts was injured internally, the doctors as yet being upable to locate the trouble. His nose was also broken. Mrs. Potts escaped with a slight bruise.

The new cut-off of the Milwaukee railroad from Muscatine to Ottumwa is now completed so far as the laying of the steel. The work trains now cover the entire distance and the line is open for way freight business, but regular trains are not yet run. The work of ballasting will go on the next month and then a regular schedule will be made out.

Secretary Greene of the state horticultural department has not secured specific estimates on the July 1 condition of Iowa fruit, but from other reports he learns that the apple crop now bears evidence of being about 50 per cent good. There has been some falling in the past month. The small fruit crop gathered or now being gathered has been fairly good all over the state.

In a street fight which occurred just outside of Anrweiler's saloon at Albia Robert Roe of Hocking was fatally injured by either William Cobley or William H. Fuller, also of Hocking. The cause of the fight is not known and neither is it known who struck the blow that fractured Roe's skull. Fuller was arrested, and the officers are on the trail of Cobley. Roe died in a few hours.

Mary Begley, widow of Jerry Begley, who was killed by an Illinois Central train near Duncombe in September, 1903, has just brought suit for $40,000 damages against Colby Bros., keepers of a saloon at Duncombe. The petition claims the defendant sold Begley liquor which was responsible for the intoxication which caused him to go on the right of way of the Illinois Central, where he was knocked down and killed. The suit is for $20,000 actual and $20,000 exemplary damages.

Chas. Chesterfield, a contractor, committed suicide at Hampton. Despondency over the opposition of the parents of Miss Amy Staley to his suit was thought to be the cause. When found, a picture of Miss Staley was in one hand and a revolver in the other. From letters found in his room, his real name is Louis Herbenstein, and was changed to Chesterfield by his stepfather, who when his wife—the mother of Chesterfield—died, brought the children to this country from Germany. He was a U. S. regular for three years.

The quiet little reunion grounds at Davis City, a small inland town seven miles east of Lamoni, a few days ago witnessed a murder scene that will long be remembered. Enoch Burrell killed Frank Thompson with a blow from his fist. A report comes that these two men, with others, had been playing poker in the park across the river from the town. It seems that Thompson had been losing and owed Burrell thirty cents. As the other men arose to go home Burrell asked Thompson when he was going to pay him that thirty cents, and Thompson replied: "When you are big enough to take it," whereupon Burrell hit him a terrific blow, and then another, in the left temple which killed him instantly. Burrell, fearing rough treatment at the hands of Thompson's friends, immediately took his departure, going with his father to the home of a relative near town. The news was sent at once to the sheriff, who started after the murderer and placed him in jail at Leon. While trouble over 30 cents was the immediate cause of the tragedy, there had previously been bad feeling between these two men. About one year ago they had a fight, when Thompson proved the better man. Thompson was a large man, weighing nearly 200 pounds. Burrell is a small man, weighing about 145 pounds, and is 26 years old.

The publishers of the Mt. Ayr Record have been made the defendants in a $10,000 libel suit brought by the Rev. A. E. Hatch of Leon, and Mr. Hatch's attorneys say they also expect to have the publishers indicted for criminal libel by the grand jury of Decatur county. The publishers of the Record are Rev. J. H. Tedford and his son State Binder Howard Tedford. Two weeks ago the Record gave an account of the outdoor preaching services Mr. Hatch had been holding in Mt. Ayr, and described him as the preacher who had become too intimate with a married lady at Grand river, resulting in a divorce being granted in a case in which Mr. Hatch was named as co-respondent. The attention of the Record publishers was called to their mistake, and in their last week's issue they made retraction and apology, stating that they had fallen in the error through a peculiar coincidence. Rev. Mr. Hatch is blind and extremely dark skinned. A blind negro preacher of Decatur county, it is said, actually did have the trouble described in the Record, so the writer of the article is alleged to have been confused by the similarity of circumstances. This statement in the Record did not fully satisfy Mr. Hatch, for papers in the civil suit have been prepared and the Decatur grand jury will be asked to act, as criminal proceedings in such cases may be begun in any county where the paper circulates.

DISCOVERS NEW LIGHT.

Iowa Man Bottles Up Dazzling Never Failing Brilliancy.

Janesville, July 11.—Aquilla Walker of this place, the president of the Cedar Falls and Janesville Heat, Light and Power company, has perfected a light after a long term of experiments which he says for illumination will surpass the electric light by several degrees and will revolutionize the light problem. Mr. Walker has patents pending, and will manufacture the lights on a large scale as soon as sufficient capital can be interested in his discovery. By a combination of chemicals he produced a light within an airtight glass globe similar to those used for incandescent lights, and when once sealed and protected from the air, the light will last until the globe is broken. There is no current, no expense after once made. The lights can be suspended from wires or fixtures to suit the taste of the customer. Mr. Walker claims that a light of this nature, erected 1,000 feet from the earth, will shed light on the ground sufficient for reading purposes, and that for street purposes it cannot be surpassed. He has not revealed the ingredients he uses. He says he has been corresponding with parties who will take hold of the enterprise and push it as soon as he demonstrates that his claims for his discovery can be fulfilled. When patented, the rights will be sold for states. He expects to reap a handsome profit from his labors.

The preliminary hearing in the case of the state of Iowa against W. L. and Earl Staves of Marshalltown on the charge of committing an assault with intent to commit murder on M. A. Fisher, a local agent of the Register and Leader, was called in Justice Burritt's court, having been set for this date on account of the condition of Fisher who was unable to appear before. The two Staves were bound over to the grand jury at the conclusion of the hearing.

The trouble in the saloons in Sioux City which had been quieted by a pact, by which E. W. Caldwell, mayor of the city, in his individual capacity was made the agent of the saloon men, to enforce an agreement to which the saloon men subscribed, has commenced over again. Five of the saloon men kept open on the Fourth and the anti-saloon league, which gave its tacit consent to the "pact," has commenced prosecutions against them and will have them enjoined.

At Fort Dodge Mrs. Millie Detta was held to the grand jury under bonds of $2,000 to answer to the charge of manslaughter as the result of a verdict of the coroner's jury, which declared her guilty of criminal negligence in connection with the death of Clara Rasmussen, who was killed while attempting the "slide for life" during the Fourth of July celebration at Ft. Dodge. Martin Wheeler, whom the girl's body struck in her fall, and who received a fractured skull and broken collar bone, will recover.

The organization of the Law and Order alliance at Dubuque will undoubtedly result in the retirement to private life of Major C. H. Berg, who has been at the head of the city government for the past six years. With him will go his appointee as chief of police, Edward Morgan, who is severely censured for his indifference in the appointment of men to the police force who are known to be friendly toward the reckless element of the city and for retaining men on the force who have outlived their usefulness as guardians of the peace.

W. C. Kimmel of Sioux county was nominated for senator at the senatorial convention of the Lyon-O'Brien Osceola-Sioux district on the 131st ballot. The convention was held at Rock Rapids. It developed into a three-cornered fight among the delegates from Lyon, Osceola and Sioux counties, while Sioux and O'Brien locked horns. Up to the 76th ballot the vote stood, Lister 14; Stewart 10; Kimmel 11. At the 76th ballot Lyon divided her vote, but in such a manner as not to nominate. The ballot then remained the same up to the close when Lyon and Osceola went to Kimmel. The nominee is a prominent farmer and stock raiser in Sioux county.

Attorney General Mullan will be asked by the state executive council to render an opinion on the legal status of the fee question in the office of the auditor of state, anent the disclosures concerning excessive charges made for examination of insurance companies under the last administration, and to advise as to the course that should be pursued with reference thereto. The council now has possession of a statement of the facts which the companies claim to have paid for the examination, of which no record can be found in the office of the state auditor, and the council is in doubt as to what should be done. It is probable that some form of suit will be brought that will allow the courts to dispose of it.

Fireman Joe Dusek, Cedar Rapids; Brakeman Nichols and an unknown tramp were killed in a head-on collision on the Milwaukee road near South Amana. Two heavily loaded freight trains crashed together. The engines and tenders and many cars were derailed and shattered. The trains were heavy extras, drawn by compound engines. It is reported that the engineer in charge of No. 63 forgot that his original orders had been altered. He thought he had to meet No 64 at Williamsburg. They were ordered to meet at South Amana and the trains collided while going at a great speed. All Milwaukee passenger trains were compelled to proceed via the C., R. I. & P. through Iowa City as the tracks near the scene of the wreck were impassable because of debris.

CHAPTER XV.

The Fate of Lord Cluny Neville.

On tides of glory England was rne the next three years, to a na- nal honor and strength which had ver before been dreamed of. Never her whole history had the govern- nt been at once so thorough and so netrated with a desire for honesty d capacity. For the first time, the se of social duty to the state took e place of the old spirit of loyalty the sovereign. For the first time d only time in the history of Eu- pe, morality and religion were the alifications insisted on by a court. In the meantime Spain was help- Charles with money which was ent in plots to assassinate the Pro- tor. The effect of this was sev- al petitions and addresses offered Parliament begging Cromwell to sume the ancient office of King, if ly for the settlement of the nation. was quite strong enough to have ken it, and there was nothing un- anly either in his desire for the own or in his refusal of it. One ing he knew well, that the title of take all meaning out of revolution, and he could t so break with his own past, with s own spiritual life, and with the dly men who had so faithfully fol- wed and so fully trusted him.

Why should he fret himself about a ere word? All real power was in s hands; the army and the navy, the urches and the universities, the re- rm and administration of the law, d government of Scotland and of land. Abroad, the war with all its tails, the alliance with Sweden, th France, with the Protestant inces of Germany, the Protestant rotectorate extending as far as ransylvania, the "planting" of the est Indies, the settlement of the merican Colonies, and their defense ainst their rivals, the French—all ese subjects were Cromwell's daily ires.

"To be a King is not in my commis- sion," he said to Doctor Verity. "It squares not with my call or my con- science. I will not fadge with the session again; no, not for an hour."

These three years were full of glory nd romance, and the poorest family lived through an epic of l grandeur as few gen- have witnessed. Yet, amid , the simple domestic lives of en and women went calmly on, and rth, marriage, and death made rich barren their homes. Jane Swaffham d long been able to think of Cluny— t as lying in a bloody grave, but as ne of the Sons of God among the Hosts of Heaven. And this consola- ion accepted, she had begun to study atin and mathematics with Doctor erity and to give her love and her ervice to all.

Matilda's life during this interval ad been cramped and saddened by he inheritance from her previous ears. Really loving Cymlin, she ould not disentangle the many hreads binding her to the old unfor- unate passion, for, having become wealthy, the Stuarts would not resign heir claim upon her. Thus she was compelled, often against her will, to be aware of plots for the assassina- tion of Cromwell—plots which shock- ed her moral sense, and which gener- ally seemed to her intelligence exced- ingly foolish and usless.

She loved Cymlin, but she feared to marry him. She feared the reproach- es of Rupert, who, though he made no effort to consummate their long en- gagement was furiously indignant if she spoke of ending it. Then, also, she had fears connected with Cymlin, When very young he had begun to save money in order to make himself a possible suitor for Matilda's hand. In the Irish campaign he had been exceedingly fortunate; he had bought and sold estates, and exchanged pris- oners for specie, and in other ways so manipulated his chances that in every case they had left behind a golden residuum. Jane had told Matilda two years previously that Cymlin was richer than his father, and she might have said more than this and been within the truth.

But in this rapid accumulation of wealth, Cymlin had developed the love of wealth. Matilda knew that if she would carry out her intention of making over de Wick house and land to Stephen, it must be done before she married Cymlin. Yet if she sur- rendered it to Stephen under pres- ent circumstances, everything would go, in some way or other, to the needy, beggarly Stuart Court.

She was fretfully thinking over this dilemma in its relation to a new plot against Cromwell's life, when Jane Swaffham visited her one morning in February of 1658. Jane's smiling serenity aggravated her restless temper. "Does nothing on earth ever give you an unhappy thought, Jane?" she asked. "You look as if you dwelt in Paradise."

"I only have to tell you there is another plot."

"I have nothing to do with it."

"Some one you know may be in danger."

"Stephen is at Cologne. If you are thinking of Stephen, thank you. I will write and tell him to keep good hope in his heart, that Jane Swaffham remembers him."

"Dear Matilda, do not make mock of my kindness. The Protector's patience is worn out with this foolish animosity. He is generous and mer- ciful to no purpose. I myself think it is high time he ceased to warn, and begin to punish."

"My dear sweet Jane, the Crom- wells are in their kingdom now; I do not pretend to keep foot with them—and I have troubles of my own; pray God they be not too many for me!"

It was evident Matilda was not in an amiable mood, and Jane having said the few words that brought her to Jerery House that morning, left her friend. She went away with a trou- bled look, and Matilda watched the change and smiled to herself at it. "I am quite content to have her made a little unhappy," she thought. "On my honor! Jane looks younger and pret- tier than when Neville was alive and worrying her. Lovers die and hus- bands die, and 'tis a common calam- ity, and better people than Jane have endured it. I will go now to my aunt's parlor." She found there an ac- quaintance whom had had known in Paris, the Countess Gervais.

"I have but now sent a messenger for you, Matilda," said Lady Jevery; "the Countess desired greatly to see you." Then the conversation became reminiscent, and the new plot was not named, and Matilda began to be bored. Suddenly, however, her inter- est was raised to the highest pitch, for the Countess, touching a bracelet which Lady Jevery wore, said:

"I must tell you a strange thing. I was lately at a dinner where the niece of his Eminence, Cardinal Mazarin, sat at my side. And she wore a neck- lace and brooch and one bracelet pre- cisely like the bracelet you are now wearing. I cannot help noticing the circumstance, because the jewelry is so exeedingly singular and beautiful."

"Yes," replied Lady Jevery. "And what you say is also very curious, for I once possessed a necklace, brooch and two bracelets like the one I am now wearing. All the pieces were lost excepting this bracelet."

"But how?—let me inquire; where were they lost?"

"Somewhere near Paris. I had in- trusted them to a friend who has never since been heard of."

"But the bracelet you are wearing? —this is so singular—you will please pardon——"

"This bracelet," said Lady Jevery, "was more fortunate. Some of the gems were loose and I sent it to my jeweler for repair, just before we left for Paris. He was to forward it to me if he found a safe messenger; luckily he kept it until I returned to London."

"But this is most strange—most strange——"

"Most strange and most suspicious," said Matilda indignantly. "I should say it was evidence that Lord Neville was murdered, and that his Eminence bought jewelry for Hortense Mancini in some irregular way. If I were Lady Jevery, I would insist on knowing from whom."

"Oh, you do make one great mis- take, I do assure you! Mademoiselle Mancini is impeccable. You must rest content that the jewels came into her possession in the most correct manner."

Barely listening to these words, Matilda curtsied and abruptly left the room. All now seemed plain to her intelligence. Rupert had lied to her. He had slain and robbed Neville, and the jewels had been sold to Mazarin.

A sudden passion of pity for the handsome young lord came over her. "It was too mean, too savagely cruel for anything!" she almost sobbed. "Men who can do such things are not fit to be loved by women. They are brutes. I will write to Rupert at once. I must know the truth of this matter. If such a crime has been committed, there is no king or prince or priest on earth to absolve it, and I shall wash my hands forever of the Stuarts."

She did not wait for any second or more prudent thoughts. She wrote Rupert that hour a letter, every word of which was flame and tears. When it was finished, she sent a man with it on the instant to catch the Dover mail packet, and all this was accom- plished before she had any opportun- ity to talk over the affair with her uncle. When she did so, he regretted her precipitancy, and refused to move in the matter at all. "It would be the height of imprudence," he said. "The young man is dead and gone, and we cannot bring him back, though Eng- land went to war with France on that quarrel. The Protector is ill, worn out with sorrow and anxiety, and if one of his old attacks should seize him at this time, it would have the mastery. And when Cromwell dies, there is no question of what will happen. The nation will give Charles the Second a trial. Then Matilda, when Charles comes back, Prince Ru- pert comes with him. We may need the friendship of Prince Rupert to save ourselves. No one can tell how this reputedly good-natured Charles will act, when his hands are able to serve his will. I will not then make an enemy of so powerful a man as Prince Rupert is like to be."

It was rarely Sir Thomas spoke with such decision, and Matilda was much impressed by his words. They made her hesitate still more about her marriage with Cymlin.

During the first hours of her dis- covery, Matilda had wondered if she ought to tell Jane what proof of Cluny's death had come to them; for in her heart she scoffed at the idea of Cluny returning to Paris to sell the jewels. But Jane did not visit her for some time, and she was daily ex- pecting an answer from Prince Ru- pert. This letter might be of great importance, one way or another, and she resolved to wait for it. It came more rapidly than she had anticipated, and its contents temporarily fanned to a feeble flame her dying illusions con- cerning her first lover. In this letter Rupert "on his honor" reiterated his first statement. He declared that he left Neville in health and safety, hav- ing at the last moment urged upon him his own swift Barb, which offer Neville refused. He said he should seek mademoiselle's presence until he saw her wearing the jewels, and then make question concerning them; and if not satisfied, go at once to her Uncle Mazarin. He was sure it was now only a few weeks ere the truth would be discovered. These promises were blended with his usual protestations of undying devotion, and Matilda was pleased, though she was not satisfied For to Rupert's letter there was a postscript, and in that postscript one word which sent the blood to her heart, cold with terror—

"P. S. It may be the Bastile, and not the grave, which holds the Neville secret."

"To be a King is not in my commission."

Hogs Following Steers.

When hogs follow steers that are be- ing largely corn-fed, it is an element of profit to know how many hogs to keep with a certain number of steers. Though this is a matter that has been experimented with at a number of sta- tions it still remains unsettled in large measure. In the feeding tests being conducted by the University of Illi- nois, the writer noticed that four hogs were at first allowed to follow sixteen steers. Later the number was in- creased to eight, and Professor Mum- ford said that the eight were getting along as well as did the four. In a pasture it would be equally as bad if too few hogs were following the cattle. If too many were following them it would not be so large a mat- ter, as they would naturally find pas- turage to complete their needed ra- tions. Just how many hogs should follow cattle should be a matter looked into thoroughly by every man that is fattening steers on corn and following them with hogs.

In the case of the steers being fed at Urbana, Illinois, the feed was not whole corn, but a mixture of cracked corn, corn-and-cob meal, cut clover hay, cut alfalfa, all mixed together. It is altogether probable that this feed was better digested than is most of the feed when it consists largely of corn shelled or on the ear. It is evi- dent that if eight hogs can profitably follow sixteen steers so fed, a much larger number could follow steers fed in the ordinary wasteful way. At Odebolt, Iowa, the Iowa Experiment Station has 500 steers in feed lots with 500 hogs. We understand that the hogs receive no food except that obtained from the droppings of the steers. The end of this experiment will be watched with interest.

Anconas.

From Farmers' Review: The above is the name of one of the latest imported additions of poultry to this country. They belong to the Mediter- ranean type of fowls, having origin- ated on a small island called Ancona, in the southern part of Italy, from which they take their name. Some years ago they were imported into England, where they now rank among the leading breeds; and I am very glad to say that they are rapidly becoming one of the favorite breeds of this coun- try. They are bright, active birds, tak- ing much exercise and largely provi- ding for themselves if allowed to range. They do well in confinement. No cold, however severe, stops their egg production. The egg basket is never empty, as such has been my experi- ence, and like the Mediterranean class are non-setters. Before breeding them I had heard wonderful reports of them as to beauty and egg production, the truth of which has been fully verified. I assure you a flock of them is a most interesting sight. The chicks develop with surprising rapidity.

In general appearance the Anconas resemble the Leghorn type, following them in build and carriage, as well as in their bright combs and yellow legs. In color they are mottled black and white, each feather tipped with white and the more even this mottling the better, particularly in the hens. The combs are bright red, upright in cock and deeply rented, while in the hen they fall to one side of the face. They are compactly made, the body is round and well formed; the face is a coral red; the ear lobes white or creamy white. They breed very true.—W. H. Branthoover.

Differences in Phosphates.

At the Tennessee Experiment Sta- tion pot tests were made with differ- ent kinds of phosphates. Cow peas and turnips were the vegetables ex- perimented with, in conjunction with superphosphates, precipitated phos- phate, bone meal, and ground phos- phate rock. The results with both crops showed no appreciable benefit from applications of from 300 to 1,200 pounds of ground phosphate rock per acre. On the other hand, 300 pounds of high-grade acid phosphate gave a marked increase in the yield above any of the other plats. Finely ground bone meal gave excellent results. For cowpeas, 2 pounds of phosphoric acid from the meal was found to be about equal to one pound from acid phos- phate. The turnips, however, seemed somewhat less able than the cowpeas to use the phosphoric acid of the meal. Precipitated phosphate gave much bet- ter results than bone meal. The water soluble phosphate of lime gave excel- lent results.

Clover and Pea Vine Hay.

The storing of clover and pea vine hay in a partially wilted condition has been practiced by me for over twenty years, with perfect success, says W. F. Massey. I have heard talk about spontaneous combustion, but my im- pression is that where there have been genuine instances of this they resulted not from the green hay itself. I have never known anything like combustion in green hay, and I have had barns of it in a very hot condi- tion. With clover and any other legume the hay is much better if the leaves are preserved, and the hay is cured with as little exposure to the sun as possible. I cut clover in the morning as soon as the dew is about dried off, and start the tedder after the mowers, so as to wilt the hay as rapidly as possible. Stop cutting at 2 p. m. and get all cut that day intc windrows in the afternoon. Next day open up the windrows to dry off and put into cocks as soon as dried. The next day haul into the barn as soon as the tops of the cocks are dry, and pack away closely. My test is the old one of twisting a handful of the hay, and if no sap runs to the twist it is ready to go in. I treat our cow pea hay in the same way, except that it should stay a little longer in the cocks, and is not damaged by rain as clover is. I cure cow pea hay in this way every year, and always have good hay.

Break Up the Crust.

When rain falls on heavy soils, the water penetrates it only slowly, as the spaces between the soil particles are very small. After the rain, the sun and the wind begin their work and the evaporation from the soil causes it to form a crust. This crust while preventing the air from reaching the roots of the plants, serves as a medium through which the water in the soil may the more readily pass off, without going up through the plants. The latter, therefore, often seem at a standstill in their growth. The water must not be permitted to pass out of the soil except through the plants if we are able to prevent it, and we can to a large extent pre- vent this by breaking up the crusts as soon as they form. This generally occurs after a heavy rain. The heavier the rain the firmer the crust is likely to be.

We too often forget the great law of capillarity that is working in our soils. Those who have not given at- tention to this matter imagine that plants drink water in bulk. This is not true, at least for any length of time. When there is a down-pour a plant may take up water if it be thirsty for it, but it is probable that it takes up water only in a certain pro- portion to its food. It cannot gorge its cells with water minus food. Most of the water it takes is drawn up from the lower portions of the soil by capillary attraction, and the film of water is surrounded by a larger bulk of air and by these two the plant food in the soil is made available for the plant. Now, the hard-packed soil is a soil with great power of drawing up water. Some one has described the sun and the wind as the pumps of the Lord to draw moisture out of the earth. The saying is largely true. But these pumps should be made by man to draw moisture out of the leaves of our plants, that growth may be accelerated.

The Original Angoras.

The opinion of Mr. Schreiner, the South African authority, of a pure- bred Angora is as follows: I think it is certain that the original pure-bred white mohair goat was a small, very refined, delicate animal, of great beau- ty, clipping at twelve months' growth of fleece about from two to four pounds (according to age and sex— kids considerably less) of dazzling white, fine, soft, silky, very lustrous mohair, curling in ringlets from 10 to 18 inches long, with merely the mini- mum of oil in its fleece requisite to the growth of hair of the highest ex- cellence, so small in amount as to be inappreciable to the unskilled ob- server. It was perfectly clothed in every part; it had short, silky, curly hair about the face and down the lower parts of the legs to the hoofs; a soft, silky, curly "kuif" (tuft on the forehead), and small, thin, light-col- ored horns. The ewe was, of course, smaller and finer than the ram, and had only one kid at a birth (of this there is abundant evidence).

Death of Missie 165.

Shorthorn breeders will learn with regret of the great loss sustained by Mr. E. W. Bowen of Delphi, Indiana, in the death last week of his cele- brated cow, Missie 165, one of the finest examples of the best type of Shorthorn that ever entered the show ring. At the great International Ex- positions of 1901 and 1902, where were gathered the flower of the breed from all parts of the world, Missie was awarded second premium, her com- petitor for first place being the un- defeated Ruberta, who has yet to meet her match.

Night Pasturing.

From Farmers' Review: I have tried both the yarding and pasturing of cows in summer and have found out that our cows did a good deal better by letting them run at night, as they like to take a bite after milking and sometimes one can hear the bell-cow grazing as late as nine o'clock and later. If a farmer had a place to give them some feed, yarding would be all right, but otherwise they will give better returns by letting them run.— Fred Tschudy, Green county, Wiscon- sin.

The "Mammoth" and "Colt" ran away and through a wire fence receiving several wounds on there limbs they became frightend at an "Ape" sitting by a mail box.

The Upper Grove threshing company held a meeting and elected the following officers. W. Burdick will pull the throttle. S. G. Fuller will oil the cylinder and "Mammoth" will bring water and fill the sacks and pass them over a 36-inch box in until the fall run is done.

We once knew a little Ape his nose was cherry red, he sometimes would write items for Avery Center, so a fellow said. He would tell of the wrestles, the races and the booze, but never would he mention the little fellow, with that cherry nose. He's been exposed to many hardships, but the worst of all he said, is to fall into a half filled cistern, and nearly break his head. Of course this is only a sample of what an Ape will do, after taking a few too many Rock and Ryes, Barleycorn and Dews.

LITERARY NOTES.

H. L. Wilson's striking novel, "The Spenders," published by the Lothrop Publishing Company, of Boston, and now in its fifty-fourth thousand, has been dramatized by Edward Rose for William H. Crane, who will open with the play at the Savoy Theatre, New York, next September.

The July World's Work has a wider sweep than is usual with this typically American magazine. Norman Duncan's entertaining article on, "The Codfishers of Newfoundland" vividly describes the life of a hardy race just beyond our borders and A. B. Lueder, the engineer in charge of the work, relates in "Building American Bridges in Mid-Africa" the unusual adventures of American workmen in the topics, contributing also some excellent photographs.

Apropos of Mr. Chamberlain's imperial tariff propositions, the Review of Reviews for July declares that the time has come when the high-tariff wall between Canada and the United States ought to be battered down. The United States, says the editor, should propose a reciprocity which should ultimately, if possible, be brought to the point of full commercial union.

In the Atlantic for July, Jack London contributes an historical sketch, "The Gold-Hunters of the North"; and Mary Austin and Mabel Clare Craft contribute typical Western stories. On natural history subjects, John Muir writes a characteristic article apropos of Professor Sargent's monumental American Silva, and Bradford Torrey describes some adventures and discoveries among western birds.

Ginn & Company, Publishers; announce the publication of William Ellery Channing's Discourses on War, with an introduction by Edwin D. Mead. At the present time, when every nation seems to be straining itself to build bigger and more powerful guns and battleships and the poor of Europe are groaning under the heavy burden of taxation for the purpose of building up great armies and navies, it is certainly opportune these discourses should be laid before the people. The voice of one who was opposed to bloodshed and butchery and who left a marked impression upon the affairs of America will be listened to with pleasure at this time.

How many persons know that the number of stripes on our flag is fixed, and why? How many know from what flags of Great Britain our Stars and Stripes are an evolution? Who knows how the flag adopted in 1777 and the flag carried in the Mexican War differed? Who knows in what year Congress passed the law which governs the flag honored and loved to-day around the world? All these facts and many other interesting details are told in the July St. Nicholas by Parmalee McFadden.

How Methodism may be said to have begun in Susanna Wesley's nursery, rather than in the University of Oxford, so often called its birthplace, is one of the fresh and interesting points made by Professor C. T. Winchester in the first of his papers on "John Wesley," which is printed in the July Century. The July chapters of this new life of the great reformer carry him from his birth to 1750, when the storm of persecution against the new sect and its eloquent leader first began to subside.

Chauncey Thomas has written many good stories for McClure's, but none better than the one in the current number, "Ruggles' First Case." Ruggles is a young lawyer in Denver, briefless and almost breadless. His first client is a trusting young Englishman who has just parted with his last penny to a Yankee syndicate in exchange for a salted mine. Rugles takes his case and forces a settlement but by a procedure considerably more strenuous than the ordinary processes of law. A good story of a good bluff never fails to appeal.

Will N. Harben, author of "Abner Daniel" and "The Substitute," contributes a strong short story to Harper's Magazine for July, entitled "A Filial Pretence." In the same number are stories by Mrs. Stepney Rawson, illustrated in tint by Elizabeth Shippen Green, Arthur Colton, Julian Ralph, Margaret Sutton Briscoe, Mary R. S. Andrews, and others.

The manor house of the old and distinguished family of Van Cortlandt, situated in one of the suburbs of New York City, and now owned by the Society of Colonial Dames of New York, is an excellent example of the Dutch Colonial style of architecture. It was constructed over a century and a half ago and has sheltered many men of national prominence in the early days of the Republic. In the July Delineator Miss Alice M Kellogg describes this old structure, and fine illustrations of both interior and exterior add to the suggestiveness of the article.

In his romance of the old west, "The Lions of the Lord," Harry Leon Wilson, whose "The Spenders" is one of the successes of the present year, shows an advance in strength and grasp both in art and life. It is a thrilling tale of the Mormon settlement of Salt Lake City. In the central character of Joel Rae, the author has drawn a pathetic figure of a religious mystic, who comes by hard experience to see that the Mormon teachings are dire in their significance, especially upon women. His love for his adopted daughter and the child's growth into fair young womanhood, when she is won by a cowboy, are admirably depicted. Such dramatic scenes as that of the famous Mountain Meadows Massacre are told with great power, and Brigham Young and other Mormon leaders are hit off to the life. Lothrop Publishing Company, Boston.

POPE LEO XIII.

THE POPE STILL LIVES.

Remarkable Vitality Holds Out Against Disease.

Rome, July 13.—Pope Leo has lived to see another Sunday. The Sabbath quiet which fell upon Rome came also peace and even progress to the pontiff. Beginning yesterday morning with distinct signs of improvement, he maintained this throughout the day. Tonight Dr. Lapponi made the following important statement in answer to the question if he believed that the improvement in the pope's condition could continue: "I believe that if the improvement lasts until July 21, we may not perhaps achieve an absolute cure, but we will secure such a general state of health in the patient as will allay our anxiety."

During the morning the pontiff participated in the celebration of mass. The ceremony was held in the chapel adjoining the sick chamber, Mgr. Marzoni being the celebrant. The door connecting the sick room with the chapel was opened so that his holiness might follow the service. He insisted that Dr. Lapponi and his valet Centra should leave his side and enter the chapel in order to better hear the mass.

Dr. Mazzoni was also absent from the pope's side, which in itself gave the clearest evidence that the doctors themselves were relieved of immediate apprehension. Dr. Rossoni has been taken sick with fever, and was prevented from visiting the pope, as he intended.

During the afternoon the pope felt strong enough to get up. He rose, dressed himself alone in white, and went to sit in his usual armchair, where he remained for some time. Then the windows were opened for a change of air, the sun streaming in, together with a light, refreshing breeze from the Mediterranean. Later in the afternoon he received Cardinals Mathieu, Steinhuber, Agliardi and Casali. The pope showed his usual brightness and lucidity of mind, and spoke to each without showing any perceptible fatigue. To Cardinal Mathieu his holiness said: "I have not ceased for one moment to pray God to protect France and have the men now governing her repent and stop the persecution of the church."

INVESTIGATIONS NEAR CLOSE

Postmaster General Says Inquiry Into Department Is Nearly Ended.

Washington, July 13.—Postmaster General Payne stated that the end of the postoffice investigation is in sight. "I am unable," he said, "to fix any particular date when the investigation will be completed, but matters have progressed to the extent where I can see an end to the laborious work."

Mr. Payne said that the incident of Mr. Madden's publication of a communication reflecting on other officials in connection with charges against the registry contract may be regarded as closed. He said he had received a letter from Mr. Madden in reply to a request of the postmaster general for a letter of explanation of the circumstances attending the publication, but that the letter was not to be given out at present. The postmaster general added that the inspectors had not yet reported on the investigation of the manifold contract.

Money for Kishener Relief.

St. Petersburg, July 13.—The Kishenev relief committee has received the sum of 152,500 roubles from America and 363,700 roubles from Russia. The total receipts up to the present amount to 736,000 roubles and the total expended has reached 464,500 roubles. The future expenditure is estimated at at least 350,000 roubles.

Heat Harvests Big Death List.

New York, July 11.—Thirty-six deaths and eighty-three prostrations in and around New York and Brooklyn tell the story of yesterday's heat. It was the hottest July 10 in the history of the local weather bureau, the highest previous record being 91 degrees, recorded July 10, 1886.

HISTORY OF ILLNESS.

Statement Published in Defense of Doctors of the Pope. . . . .

Rome, July 9.—The newspapers publish a history of the pope's illness, evidently inspired by Doctors Lapponi and Mazzoni, who wish to defend themselves from the attacks on their diagnosis of the case, but it is interesting as the first document giving exact data from a medical point of view. The account runs as follows:

"On the morning of Tuesday, June 30, Pope Leo went for a drive in the vatican gardens. On returning he declared that he had greatly benefited by the fresh air, and wished to repeat the drive. The pope said he felt no need of a medical visit and informed Dr. Lapponi not to go and see him.

"During the night of Wednesday, July 1, Pope Leo complained of intestinal disturbances, which he attributed to constipation. Notwithstanding he went into the vatican gardens and returned to his apartment, again feeling benefited from his drive.

"On Thursday he declared he felt well, but Dr. Lapponi wishing to know personally the nature of the disturbance complained of, spent the night at the vatican. During the night the pope was sleepless and restless.

"On Friday, Dr. Lapponi examined the pope and found pulmonary inflammation in the right of the thorax between the inferior and middle lobes. He informed Cardinal Rampolla and began the treatment which he thought right on Saturday. During the day the inflammation spread. Dr. Lapponi, worried, desired to have Pope Leo seen by Dr. Mazzoni, who since the operation in 1899, has visited the pontiff occasionally, replacing Dr. Lapponi during his illness with appendicitis.

"On Sundey, Dr. Mazzoni went to the vatican and examined the patient with Dr. Lapponi, confirmed the latter's diagnosis, viz: an inflammatory process in the lung, which was defined in the medical bulletin as pulmonary hepatization. The original treatment was continued, consisting of supporting the strength of the heart and general condition of the patient.

"No noticeable change was observed until Monday evening. It was found that the lowest part of the right thorax, which previously was pervious to respiration, had become impervious, affecting the function of the lung. The presence of liquid was suspected. The pontiff spent an agitated and sleepless night.

"On Tuesday many symptoms confirmed the presence of the liquid. Its increase was considered to account for the pope's general condition growing worse. After a test puncture, eight hundred grammes of bloody liquid was extracted. The condition of the patient improved immediately. The amelioration in the condition of the patient was not continued during Tuesday. Indeed, depression gained the upper hand."

KISHINEV PETITION FIRST.

President Decides That the Manchurian Question Must Wait.

Washington, July 10.—The president has decided that the matter of the Jewish petition must be finally disposed of before any further effort is made here to compose the issues arising out of the Manchurian situation. Therefore, it is now said that nothing is likely to be done in regard to Manchuria until next Sept., by which time, according to the last Russian engagement, the evacuation of Manchuria by Russian troops, save the railroad guards, should be complete. It is understood that the Russian government has set up as one reason for not sanctioning the opening of new ports in Manchuria, the necessity of allowing her first to complete the evacuation of Manchuria, and although the reasoning is rather obscure on that point, it is understood that our government is willing to wait until September before making the next move.

The first Lord Ampthill once called upon Bismarck, and, while he waited in an anteroom before being received by the German chancellor, out came Count Harry Arnim, fanning himself with his handkerchief, and looking as if he were about to choke. "Well," he said, "I can not understand how Bismarck can bear that—smoking the strongest Havanas in a stuffy little room. I had to beg him to open the window." When the Englishman entered the apartment, he found Bismarck apparently gasping for breath at the open window. "What strange tastes some people have," the chancellor said; "Arnim has just been with me, and he was so overpoweringly perfumed that I could stand it no longer, and had to open the window."

MASSACRE LEADER KILLS HIMSELF

Ringleader of Horror at Kishenex Suicides---Russia to Investigate Massacre.

MANY ARE UNDER ARREST

Eight Hundred Arrests Made and Three Hundred and Fifty Remanded for Trial in the Lower Courts—Many Under Indictment.

Berlin, July 13.—The Frankfurter Zeitung says it learns by way of Bucharest, Roumania, that the ring leader of the Kishenev massacre, a man named Fiserjewski, has committed suicide at Kishenev because of the director of the Russian ministry of justice has arrived there, commissioned by the czar to make a stringent investigation into the horrors. The Frankfurter Zeitung correspondent announces that a number of persons previously discharged from arrest at Kishenev have been re-arrested, and that other persons, morally responsible for the murders, have been arrested. The Frankfurter Zeitung also says it learns from another source that Former Governor von Raaben has returned to Kishenev and is endeavoring to get the Jewish population of that place to unite in a testimonial to the effect that he behaved correctly during the massacre.

Washington, July 13.—Information of an entirely reliable character, concerning the Kishenev massacre, has reached here. From advices received it appears that the protests which arose in the United States and many other civilized countries against the murderous attacks upon the Jews in Kishenev last spring have not been without the practical effect. This information states that the Russian government has been moved to vigorous action in the matter of investigating and punishing those who were responsible for the Kishenev massacre. Eight hundred arrests have been made, and three hundred and fifty persons have been remanded for trial in the lower courts. Four hundred and fifty cases have been sent to the court of appeals, of which three hundred and fifty-two are indictments for manslaughter. A change of venue having been ordered the trials of those accused of murdering and horribly maltreating the Jews at Kishenev will occur in September at Tiraspol.

ORDERED TROOPS AWAY.

Gen. McKee, After Talk With Gov. Durbin, Issues the Order.

Evansville, Ind., July 10.—After talking with Governor Durbin over the telephone yesterday afternoon, Brigadier General McKee last evening ordered all troops removed from Evansville. The Terre Haute company left for home at 7:00 last night, and the Evansville company was relieved from duty. The members separated to their homes. The Vincennes company is left in charge of the jail and court house. This company will leave for home this morning. The city will be left in charge of the police department, which is armed with rifles. There were seven funerals yesterday. All were conducted quietly.

The ministers in one or two cases prayed for the city and county administrations, and said this was not a time for criticism, but for sympathy for the friends of the dead.

Two more of the wounded are pronounced by the surgeons to be in a critical condition. Adam Browski and John Bee are sinking, and if they die the list of fatalities will be increased to twelve. The grand jury is taking testimony on the Monday night shooting. Several prominent citizens were examined.

DRIVE NEGROES FROM TOWN.

Murder of Brakeman On Southern Pacific Starts Race War.

Sour Lake, Tex., July 10.—A brakeman named Thompson on the Southern Pacific was fatally shot yesterday by a negro at Nome Junction. When the news reached here where Thompson resided, great indignation was expressed and notices were posted all around the town reading:

"Niggers, don't let the sun go down on you in Sour Lake tonight."

Many negroes hastily left the city. Last night two camps of negroes, one in the "Shoe String" district of the oil field, and the other composed of construction forces of the Southern Pacific, were raided by a mob of 500 men. The blacks fled precipitately. About 100 shots were fired. It is not known whether any of the negroes were killed or wounded, as the shooting was in the darkness. One Mexican in the construction gang had his head beaten to a pulp and will die.

Proprietors of hotels and restaurants were warned last night to discharge all negroes in their employ.

Turks Surround Bulgarian Band.

Salonica, European Turkey, July 13.—Twelve hundred Turkish troops have surrounded 200 Bulgarians near Amatovo. The two leaders of the Bulgarians were killed while attempting to escape.

In an encounter between Turkish troops anr revolutionists, which occured near Petrich, about fifty miles from Salonica, on July 10, the notorious brigand Alexis and several others of his band were killed.

STORIETTES.

A suburban Philadelphia banker tells with great satisfaction a story that illustrates well the almost incredible prowess in egg-laying of his hens. "Some time ago," he says, "an egg was left for a nest egg in the place where my hens lay. This nest egg, the other day, hatched, and I have now one lonely little chick, which several dozen mothers care for. Here is the explanation of this miracle: My hens are such steady layers that one would no sooner get off the nest egg, having deposited a fresh one beside it, than another would slip on, and in her turn lay. Thus by dozens of different mothers the solitary egg was hatched. Though no one hen 'sat' or 'clooked' on it, nevertheless it was kept always warm, and in due time there stepped forth from it a lonely but vigorous little chick."

A story is told of an attempt made by a Swedish missionary to obtain a foothold in Abyssinia. No sooner had he begun to preach than he was brought before King Menelek, who asked him why he had left his home in Scandinavia in order to come to Abyssinia. The missionary promptly replied that he had come to convert the Abyssinian Jews, who are regarded as fair game for the outside propagandist. "Are there no Jews in your country?" asked Menelek. The missionary admitted that there were a few. "And in all the countries that you have passed through did you find no Jews or heathens?" the King continued. Jews and heathens, the missionary admitted, were plentiful. "Then," said Menelek, "carry this man beyond the frontier, and let him not return until he has converted all the Jews and heathen which lie between his country and mine."

A Good Story.

Frederika, Ia., July 13th.—Mr. A. S. Grover of this place tells an interesting story showing how sick people may regain their health if they will only be guided by the experience of others. He says:

"I had a very bad case of Kidney Trouble, which affected my urinary organs so that I had to get up every hour of the night. I could not retain my urine and my feet and limbs began to bloat up. My weight was quickly running down.

"After I had tried many things in vain, I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, a medicine which had cured some other very bad cases.

"This remedy has done wonders for me. I have gained eight pounds in two months. The bloat has all gone from my feet and legs, and I don't have to get up at night. I took in all about ten boxes before I was all sound."

Those who suffer as did Mr. Grover can make no mistake in taking Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they are a sure, safe and permanent cure for all Kidney urinary disorders.

Are people as glad to see each other as their shaking hands would indicate?

Fibroid Tumors Cured

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine.

"Some time ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and today I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony—or take the place of the health and happiness which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles; tumors; inflammations; ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb; backache; irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Surely the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily printing in the newspapers can leave no room for doubt in the minds of fair people.

SUFFERING WOMEN.

Tired, Nervous, Aching, Trembling, Sleepless, Bloodless—Pe-ru-na Renovates, Regulates, Restores Many Prominent Women Endorse Pe-ru-na.

AMERICA is the land of nervous women.

The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease.

Mrs. Emma Mitchell, 520 Louisiana street, Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"Peruna has certainly been a blessing in disguise to me, for when I first began taking it for troubles peculiar to the sex and a generally worn out system, I had little faith.

"For the past five years I have rarely been without pain, but Peruna has changed all this, and in a very short time. I think I had only taken two bottles before I began to recuperate very quickly, and seven bottles made me well. I do not have headache or backache any more, and have some interest in life. I give all credit where it is due, and that is to Peruna.—Emma Mitchell.

By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused directly by catarrh.

They are catarrh of the organ which is affected. These women despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that they accept it as almost inevitable. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness. In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one hundred are nothing but catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Chronic invalids who have languished for years on sick beds with some form of female disease begin to improve at once after beginning Dr. Hartman's treatment.

Among the many prominent women who recommend Peruna are:—Belva Lockwood, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Col. Hamilton, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. F. E. Warren, wife of U. S. Senator Warren, of Wyoming.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Repartee in the House.

A recent interchange of fire between Col. Hepburn of Iowa, and Gen. Grosvenor of Ohio on the floor of the House: "Gen. Grosvenor—The gentleman from Iowa does not believe that any public man was ever sincere or honest in his advocacy of a proposition and always looks around for a selfish motive. That is because the gentleman himself has no other standard of morality than that. Col. Hepburn—I draw the line somewhere; I draw it at Ohio people. I do not propose to hold the gentleman from Ohio responsible for what he has said. I recognize the fact that I myself am getting old and that some day I will be senile."

To Restore Greek Temple.

The Greek Archæological Society has decided to restore the Doric temple of Jupiter, at Nemea, situated near the haunt of the famous Nemean lion, the slaying of which formed one of the feats of Hercules. The edifice was overthrown by a succession of earthquakes, and only three columns are now standing; but the fallen shafts that lie around the temple are so little injured that it is believed that it will be possible to re-erect them and the fallen entablature without much difficulty or expense, and without having recourse to new material. As soon as the ground around the temple has been cleared of the litter of fragments that now encumber it, the Greek government which has hitherto been inaccessible and intends to begin excavations on the spot, hopes to make valuable discoveries.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Fire destroyed E. Murphey's livery barn and Hatch & Heinsen's sale stable. All the contents with the exception of the horses were destroyed. The loss is $7,000. The insurance is complete. The flames were over 200 feet high.

Justice Kendig's court at Oskaloosa was occupied a few days ago by a civil suit in which Mrs. Annie McQuiston sued Mrs. Etta Duffin for a balance of $75 claimed to be due her in return for services as dressmaker to make a wedding outfit. A verbal contract was entered into which Mrs. McQuiston alleges the defendant repudiated. The jury found in Mrs. McQuiston favor and assessed the judgment at $60 and costs. The case has been appealed.

Dr. L. H. Pammel, of Ames, is receiving a constant stream of communications from farmers all over the state as the result of the bulletin he recently published on the potato rot fungus. This is the disease that in the forties and fifties caused the potato famine in Ireland. The disease can be destroyed and, accordingly on learning of its prevalence this season, Dr. Pammel at once circulated bulletins describing the fungi and the methods of stopping its growth.

H. F. Shearer, a Creston carpenter for the Burlington road, who was injured on June 18th by a board catching in a circular saw and striking him in the side, died a few days ago. He was thought to have recovered from the injury, but an autopsy revealed the fact that his death was due to the injury, his lung having been pierced by a piece of the broken rib and causing internal hemorrhage. He was one of the best men in the service having been with the "Q" since 1884.

A prominent woman of Johnson county, wife of one of its leading citizens and the daughter of another, has been apprehended by Sheriff Hofer after months of detective work. She is accused of securing goods and money under false pretenses by signing false names to orders, forging note signatures, etc., and thus defrauding merchants and banks. She has confessed to a number of the acts, the entire list of which covers a period of many months. The officers refuse to make her identity known.

Rolin, the 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Saterlee of Boone, was bitten by a mad dog. The boy had been out for a walk about three minutes when the dog, a large Newfoundland, came up and attacked the boy. The little fellow screamed and the Wheelock boy, who was driving with his whip drove the dog from the boy and down the street. The dog was finally killed after biting several other dogs and making an attack on a boy named Stanley. There is no doubt that the dog was afflicted with rabies

An Iowa Central freight train was wrecked a few miles south of Hampton, several cars going into the ditch and were smashed to kindling wood. A brakeman who was standing on top of one of the cars when they upset was thrown over the wire fence along the right of way and seriously injured. Bert Shane and another boy were stealing a ride in a car of lumber when it upset and narrowly escaped with their lives, the lumber luckily sliding away from them. A hole had to be cut in the car to remove them from the wreckage.

In an effort to play a practical joke on her husband at a summer resort in Delaware county, near Binghampton, N. Y., Mrs. Rufus P. Brown, of Polk City, Iowa, was fatally injured. She had arranged with a lady companion to don a suit of her husband's clothes, climb a ladder and enter his bed room through an open window, giving him a bad scare. The plan worked until she attempted to enter the room. When aroused by the noise he sprang from bed and assaulted the intruder with a heavy golf stick standing near, fracturing her skull. He is nearly frantic with grief as her wounds are considered fatal.

While working on the bridge across the Raccoon river which is being torn down preparatory to putting in a new one, a young man named Jesse Peacock narrowly escaped death. In some manner his working jacket got caught in the shaft of the steam pump which was being used to remove the water about the abuttments and in an instant he was whirling violently about the shaft, his clothing being all drawn off and wound around it. Luckily his head did not strike anything, but the variation of an inch from the circle he was describing would have resulted in beating out his brains. As it was his arm was badly cut and bruised and several painful cuts and bruises were distributed over other parts of his body.

Thomas B. Sumony, a farmer living near Pleasantville, Iowa, was held-up and robbed by two young men in Chicago. The robbers secured a check for $200 and $2.40 in cash. Sumony is suffering with a broken nose, and declared that he would never bring any more cattle to Chicago to sell. He said that he had gone "out for a lark" and had been drinking a "little beer," but protested that he was not intoxicated. Sumony reported his loss to the police, and the arrest of three young men followed within two hours. They gave their names as Robert Walker, John Burns and Charles Lister. When the case was called in Justice Woods' court, Burns, who is a cripple, was discharged, and Walker and Lister were fined $50 each for disorderly conduct.

Willie Drebensteldt was drowned in the Mississippi river at Burlington. He was on a raft in the river when he fell and slipped into the water and sank before the rescuers could reach him.

The tow mill owned by the Graham Tow company, of Mason City, located at Northwood, was burned to the ground. The mill was erected last year at a cost of $8,000. The origin of the fire is a mystery, starting in the main building, the most remote from the engine room. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

One of the three prisoners who escaped from the county jail at Knoxville has been arrested by the officers. He was hiding near Attica. The officers believe they are on the track of the other two men and that other arrests will follow immediately. Dan Cox is the one caught. Bloodhounds did effective work in locating and capturing the man. He is awaitng trial on a charge of assaulting an aged woman.

Failing to find happiness with her second husband, Mrs. May Benton Brown, of Sioux City, wife of Elmer Brown, porter in the Majestic saloon, at the age of 22 years ended the miseries of her life by swallowing carbolic acid at her home. It appears that the young wife had a quarrel with her husband, which was one of a number of previous quarrels that had disturbed the peace of their little home. This was the only motive for the deed that could be discovered.

There seems to be a bank war on in Charles City. The Ellises have just opened a savings bank and made their intentions known that they would pay 4 per cent on deposits. The other banks have been paying 3 per cent and last week announced that they would pay 4 per cent also. When the new bank opened, the management announced that they would pay 5 per cent on deposits and it is thought the other banks will meet the bid. One bank has deposits of $100,000.

The 6-year-old daughter of Henry Clauss, living about three miles east of Sumner, in Banks township, Fayette county, was burned to death. She and a smaller child were playing in the yard with some matches and in some unknown manner her clothes caught fire. The little one had presence of mind enough to run to the creek, seventy feet away, and plunge in, but the flames were too rapid for her. The clothes were burned off up to her armpits and the flesh was blistered and in some places fairly roasted.

Wash Lukehart, a farmer of Jordan township, Wonona county, was arrested by Sheriff Strain, charged with the crime of larceny. He gave bonds in the sum of $800 for appearance at the next term of court before Justice C. M. Ross. The sheriff and deputy have been searching for Lukehart for the past few days. He is accused of taking and selling stock that had been levied upon by the sheriff. Part of the stock was found in Nebraska. The defendant claims he was acting upon the advice of his attorney, and that no actual levy had been made.

Al Smith, a porter of three day's term at the Anderson hotel at Mason City, nearly had his form punctured by a bullet a few nights ago. Along in the evening a traveling man missed twenty pairs of pants and a coat and vest from his samples and Smith was suspected. He was out riding with a couple of maids who launder the ceramics of the hostelry, and when he returned Officer Locke stepped up and said, "Consider yourself under arrest." Smith sprang out of the buggy on the other side and proceeded to give a demonstration of a fast express hike. The officer followed a few lans behind and when the supposed thief failed to stop took a shot at him, puncturing his head-gear, but not stopping his locomotion. He escaped to the woods north of town. The goods have not been recovered .

Faculty changes of much importance were decided upon at the recent meeting of the board of trustees. It is understood, too, that other changes are to follow. On the recommendation of the farm committee, Dr. John J. Repp, for several years station veterinarian and professor of pathology and histology, resigned. Dr. C. W. Gay was chosen to succeed him. Dr. Gay is a graduate of the veterinary department of Cornell college, New York, and for the past two years has filled the chair of theory and practice of sanitary science in the college here. Dr. Gay will take Dr. Repp's place the first of September. Miss Mary Sabin resigned as head of the department of domestic economy and her resignation was accepted. She has given up her position because of ill-health. Her place will be filled temporarily by Miss Merritt, one of the assistants in the department of domestic economy. It is the intention of the trustees to engage some one fully equipped to fill Miss Sabin's place in a short time. Professor Homer Price resigned as head of the department of horticulture. He goes to the State university of Ohio to take a position as dean of the department of agriculture. Professor Erwin will take his place as head of the department of horticulture after September 1. The trustees provided for a new professorship, that of farm mechanics, and elected Professor Zenoth of the South Dakota agricultural school to the place.

FIXING THE ASSESSMENTS.

State Executive Council Holds To Argument of Attorneys.

Des Moines, July 15.—The executive council yesterday concluded its hearing on real estate assessments and will take up railroads today. A number of the representatives of the railroads have been present and in view of the enormous increase in real estate assessments it is plain to them that they are slated for another considerable increase in assessments. Already they have protested against the real estate assessments being too high Yesterday the representatives of the following counties were heard: Woodbury, Adair, Story, Scott, Adams, Dallas, Clayton, Henry, Montgomery, Page, Plymouth, Pocahontas and Polk. Monday afternoon Poweshiek, Carroll, Hamilton, Calhoun and many others were heard.

In regard to Polk county Auditor Cope merely called attention to the fact that the assessments were pretty well up to the actual sales and that the reason there was not a greater increase in the assessment was because assessments had already been nearly right.

County Attorney Neal said in regard to Scott county that he believed the assessment was in proportion to others, and he declared the assessments generally in the state were within 15 per cent of actual values. He would take an option on any county at 15 per cent above assessment and make money. He suggested the New Zealand plan of the government taking an option on the land at the assessed value with priviledge of buying it any time in a year.

In regard to nearly all the counties the representatives contended that the assessments were fair and equitable and that no increase should be made.

Des Mones, July 16.—Governor Cummins, in the hearing of the railroad representatives on the subject of assessments, before the executive council yesterday, expressed himself as decidedly at variance with the views set forth by Tax Commissioner Frank P. Crandon of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company. He refused to accede to the proposition of Mr. Crandon that "no railroad is or can be worth more for the purpose of assessment and taxation than what it would cost to produce another road of equal physical excellence in the same locality." His idea was that a railroad was worth for assessment what it would sell for on the market.

Mr. Crandon, whose position on this subject has been set forth before many previous councils, and who is the dean of the tax commissioners who gather here for the annual conclave in assessment season, defended his position earnestly and presented to the council a carefully prepared pamphlet in which he made an argument in support of his proposition.

Governor Cummins, after questioning Mr. Crandon on some phases of the question, said: "I take it for granted that all values are purely relative. We convert all property into a common factor or denomination through money. Suppose I own a railroad in Iowa which I have managed for many years, and which all that time had paid me 6 per cent on a million dollars, besides maintaining itself. Now, suppose I wanted to get my money out of the railroad and put it into farm lands. I go to the market, we will suppose, for the purpose of selling the road. As I understand it, if I could present to the men who might be interested in purchasing such property, a railroad that had paid 6 per cent on a million dollars and bade fair to do so for a reasonable time in the future, I could get one million dollars for the property. Now, as to your proposition that we ought to tax the property at what it would cost to reproduce it, if we believe that in the case of the road in question, those who want railroads would pay a million dollars for it, then must we not assess it at that? I believe that if we are convinced that a railroad will sell for a certain sum of money, then we must assess it at that."

During the day Judge Cook of Cedar Rapids appeared for the Milwaukee, Carroll Wright for the Rock Island, Judge Wilson for the Chicago, St. Paul & Omaha, W. L. Tarbet for the Dubuque & Sioux City, M. C. Woodruff for the Great Western, W. W. Baldwin for the Burlington and A. S. Dudley for the Milwaukee.

Des Moines, July 17.—The executive council yesterday practically completed the hearings on the railway assessments. In the afternoon, the council as a state board of review took up consideration of the equalization of the assessments in the different counties. The equalization was not completed and nothing definite could be announced.

Mrs. Dennis Brown of Washington, widely known in Washington and Louisa counties, is dead from burns received two weeks ago when the Brown residence was destroyed by fire. At that time Mrs. Brown was lighting a gasoline stove which exploded. Mrs. Brown's clothing was burned off her body and the flesh badly scorched.

Wm. Taylor, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home at Marshalltown, committed suicide by hanging. He left the home about 5 o'clock a. m. and was found in the grove nearby a short time after hanging to a tree. He had been an inmate of the home for many years and was about 70 years old. His home was at Creston. He has a daughter in Clinton and another in Chicago.

John Gress of Sanborn, has brought action against W. J. Casnen for $5,000 damages for injuries sustained by the plaintiff's wife recently. Mrs. Gress was walking down town past Mr. Cashen's place when a gust of wind blew a large swinging door from its hinges, striking the woman and knocking her down. She was severely injured and may never fully recover.

All t she endured it, but in the morn- she was resolved to throw the lerable burden on some one more to bear it. But on whom? Sir mas would not have the subject ed in his presence. It would be el to tell Jane,—but there was mwell. There was the Protector. was his business to look after En- hmen, else what was the use of Protector? Besides which, Crom- l loved Neville.

Matilda could not tell how much or r little Cromwell knew of her med- g in a variety of plots against his and government, but she expected father's name would secure her audience. Her first request, how- r, was met with a prompt refusal. was not to be daunted. If her n name was not sufficient, she had ers more potent. So she wrote on ard these words: "Lady Matilda Wick has important information re- ding Lord Cluny Neville; and for stress Jane Swaffham's sake she s an interview."

This message was instantly effect- . While Matilda was telling her- that "she would not do the least mage to the Usurper," the door ened hastily, and he entered her sence. In the twinkling of an eye her resolves vanished. She fell at feet, and taking his hand kissed it, ether in homage or in entreaty, she ew not.

"My lord," she said, and then she gan to sob. "My lord, I crave of u so many pardons—so much for- arance—I will never offend again." He raised her with an imperious ovement, and leading her to a chair, mained standing at her side. "We ll forget—the past is to be forgot— r your dear father's sake. Quickly ll me what you know, I am in a eat hurry."

Without one unnecessary word she dictate the following letter to Mazarin:

"To His Eminence Cardinal Mazarin,

"Sir:—In a manner most providential it has been made known to me that Lord Neville is at this present moment in the Bastile prison. I know not why my friends should be treated as enemies, seeing that I have been faithful to you in all difficulties. Truly my business is now to speak things that I will have understood. The danger is great, if you will be sensible of it, unless Lord Neville be put at once in charge of those by whom I send this message. For if any harm come to him, I will make inquisition for his life—for every hair of his head that falls wrongfully to the ground. And in regard to sending more troops to Boulogne against the Spaniards, look not for them, unless, by the grace of God and your orders, Lord Neville is presently, and without hinderance, in England. Then, I will stand with you, and I do hope that neither the cruelty, nor malice of any man will be able to make void our agreement concerning the Spaniard; for as to the young man's return, it is the first count in it, and I shall—I must—see that he is restored to that freedom of which he has been unjustly deprived. It cannot be believed that your eminency has had anything to do with this deed of sheer wickedness, yet I must make mention of the jewels which disappeared with Lord Neville, and the money, and the papers. I have some reluctance to write further about them, believing that you will look more particularly than I can direct, into this matter. By the hand of my personal friend, General Swaffham, I send this; and in all requisites he will stand for all, and then put into his rince Rupert's letter, with her directing his attention to the terrifying postscript. And she saw with fear the rising passion in his countenance, and for a moment trembled when he looked into her eyes with such piercing inquiry that she could not resist nor misunderstand their question.

"Sir," she cried, with a childlike abandon, "in this matter I am single-hearted as I can be. I wish only to put a great wrong right."

"If you tell me the truth, I believe you," he answered; "and I will take upon me to see that it is done. Say not a word to Jane Swaffham until there be a surety in the matter."

Then she rose, and looking with eyes full of tears into his face, said, "Sir, I remember the day you pulled down the hazelnuts for me in de Wick park. My father walked with you, arm in arm, and I had your hand until you lifted me at the gates and kissed me. Sir, I entreat you, forget all that has come and gone since that hour, and dismiss me now, as then."—and she lifted her lovely face, wet with the tears of contrition, and Cromwell took it between his broad, strong hands, and kissed it, even as he had kissed it in her childhood.

"Go home, my dear," he said softly. "All that can be done I will do, and without delay."

Matilda curtsied and went out. There was in her heart a strong belief that this time Cromwell's inquiries would be as effective as they were sure to be prompt. Indeed the first thing the Protector did, was to their own troop, go to Paris, and bring back Cluny with them.

Cromwell's summons affected Mazarin like thunder out of a clear sky. He had forgotten Lord Neville.

"I will make inquiries," he said to Israel. "In two or three days—or a week——"

"I must be on my way back to London, sir, in two or three days."

"I cannot be hurried,—I have much other business. You must wait."

"Waiting is not in my commission, sir. I am to work, or to return to London without an hour's delay. Lord Neville is particularly dear to his highness; and if my inquiries meet not with attention,—on the moment,—I am instructed to waste no time. We must then conclude the envoy of the Commonwealth of England has been robbed and slain, and it will be the duty of England to take redress at once."

"You talk beyond your commission."

"Within it, sir."

"Retire to the anteroom. They will serve you with bread and wine while I make some inquiries."

"It is beyond my commission to eat or drink until I have had speech with Lord Neville. I will wait in this presence, the authority of your eminence," and Israel let his sword drop and leaned upon it, gazing steadfastly the while into the face of the cardinal. The twelve troopers with him, followed as one man, his attitude, and even Mazarin's carefully tutored composure could not long endure this silent battery of determined hearts and fixed eyes. He gave the necessary order for the release of Lord Cluny Neville,—"if such a prisoner was really in the Bastile,"—and sending a body of his own musketeers with it, directed Israel to accompany them.

The Governor of the Bastile had so forgotten Cluny, that his name called up no recollection. He did not know whether he was in the prison or not. He did not know whether he was alive or dead. The very books of the prison had forgotten Cluny. Their keeper grew cross, and positive of Neville's non-entering, as volume after volume refused to give up his name. But Israel and his men, standing there so determined and so silent, forced him to go back and back, until he came to that fateful day when, before the dawning, the young man had been driven within those terrible gates.

"On whose order?" asked Israel, speaking with sharp authority.

"On the order of his eminence, Cardinal Mazarin," was the answer.

"I thought so;" then turning to the head gaoler he added, "you have the order for release. We are in haste."

"Time is not counted here. We know not haste," was the answer.

"Then," said Israel, flaming into passion, "you must learn how to hasten. I give you ten minutes to produce Lord Neville. After that time, I shall return to his eminence and report your refusal to obey him."

The gaoler had never before been accosted in such language. As word by word was translated to his intelligence, he manifested an unspeakable terror. He left the chamber at once, and within the time named there were sounds heard which made all hearts stand still,—the slow movement of feet hardly able to walk,—the dismal clangor of iron, and anon the mournful sound of a human voice. But nothing could have prepared Cluny's comrades for the sight of their old companion. His tall form was attenuated to the last point; his eyes, unaccustomed to much light, would not at once respond, they looked as if they had lost vision; his hair straggled unkempt over his shoulders, and the awful pallor of the prison on his face and neck and hands was more ghastly than the pallor of death. His clothing had decayed; it hung in shreds about his limbs; but there was a glimmer of his old self in the pitiful effort he made, as soon as conscious of human presence, to lift up his head and carry himself without fear.

"Cluny! Cluny! Cluny!" cried Israel; and then Cluny distinguished the buff and steel uniforms, and knew who it was that called him. A long, sharp cry of agony, wonder, joy, answered the call, and he fell senseless into Israel's arms.

They brought him wine, they lifted him to the open window, they laid bare the skeleton form of his chest, they called him by name in voices so full of love and pity that his soul perforce answered their entreaties. Then the Governor offered him some clothing, but Israel put it passionately away. They were worse than Babylonish garments in his sight; he would not touch them. He asked only for a public litter, and when it was procured, they laid Cluny in it, and his comrades bore him through the streets of Paris to their lodging on the outskirts of the city.

When they left the gates of the prison there was a large gathering of men, and it increased as they proceeded,—a pitiful crowd, whose very silence was the highest eloquence. For they understood. Cluny lay prone and oblivious to their vision. They had seen him come from the Bastile. He was dead, or dying, and these angry, weeping soldiers were his comrades. They began to mutter, to exclaim, to voice their sympathy more and more intelligibly. Women, praying and weeping audibly, joined the procession, and Israel foresaw the possibility of trouble. He felt that in some way order must be restored, and inspired by the wisdom within, he raised his hands and in a loud, ringing voice, began the favorite hymn of his troopers; and to the words they had been used to sing in moments of triumphal help or deliverance they carried Cluny, with the solemn order of a religious service, safely into their camp.

CHAPTER XVI.

Oliver the Conqueror.

"Cheer up, Jane! You and Lord Neville will yet arrive at the height of your wishes. This is my judgment, and if it be not true, you may burn me in the ear for a rogue."

"And you will marry Cymlin?"

"Faith, I know not how I am to help the catastrophe! But in all sobriety, I think Cymlin loves me, and you do, too, dear Jane! Oh, I could weep my eyes dry when I think of your dear lover, and all he has so innocently suffered. It is intolerable!"

In her way, Matilda was doing her best to console and encourage Jane as they talked over the sad fate of her rescued lover. Both had been weeping, and there was a more affectionate confidence between them than had existed for many years.

Des Moines, July 20, 1903.

It has cost the state $173,976.86 more to run the institutions under the board of control for the biennial period ending June 30th, 1903, than it did for the preceding biennial period. However, there are substantial reasons for the increase. The next biennial report of the board will show that there were 770 more inmates in the institutions at the close of the biennial period just ending than at the close of the period ending June 30, 1901. More help has been necessary, and in many cases it has been necessary to pay more for help. Besides, the increased cost of supplies has enhanced the cost of running the institutions materially. Judge L. G. Kinne, of the board, inspeaking of the increased cost, ascribed these as the reasons for it.

Grand Master Isaac L. Brown of the Colored Masonic lodge was re-elected to the head of the Iowa order and its jurisdiction for the sixth time. He resides at Marshalltown. He had no opposition. Austin A. Bland of Keokuk was re-elected grand secretary, a position which he has filled for ten years. Fred Fields of Keokuk was a candidate.

County Attorney U. G. Whitney of Sioux City was elected president of the State Association of County Attorneys, Jesse A. Miller of Des Moines was elected vice-president and C. G. Burling of Clarksville, was chosen for the office of secretary and treasurer. These three officers constitute the executive committee. The selection of the time and place of the next meeting was left to the executive committee. The president was authorized to select committees of five each on law reforms, on programme and on constitution and by-laws. A committee of eleven members, one from each congressional district was authorized to look after membership. In the course of the meeting, the subject of membership received much attention. It was the general feeling that an especial effort should be made to increase the membership largely and to bring about an attendance at the convention next year of from 75 to 100. At the recent meeting, not to exceed forty county attorneys were present, and the feeling is that every county attorney should be active in the association.

About two dozen Assyrians have left Des Moines for Beiroot, where they will spend the next few months visiting relatives and making arrangements for the migration of a large party of their race to this city, where they will found an Assyrian settlement. The party which left here over the Milwaukee had been in America about five years and had saved a few hundred dollars from their earnings as pack peddlers. They came to Des Moines from all parts of Iowa and were in the city three or four days arranging for the trip. The majority of the two dozen will bring wives with them on their return in addition to other relatives. Some of them are married and left wives and families behind when they came to America and others left sweethearts whom they go back to claim. One of the number stated that a party of at least fifty would return with them and they would make their home in Des Moines.

President A. B. Stickney of the Chicago Great Western, accompanied by a party of directors, was in Des Moines on an inspection trip over the system. They had just returned from Ft. Dodge, where they had inspected the work on the new lines to Omaha and Sioux City. According to a report among some of the leading local railway men the trip has considerable significance in that President Stickney is desirous of purchasing the Des Moines & Ft. Dodge railway, which has slipped from the grip of the Rock Island. It is claimed that Mr. Stickney brought the party over the system showing them the advantages to be gained by having a short line between Des Moines and Ft. Dodge.

Justice D. J. Brewer of the United State supreme court was a guest at the annual banquet of the State Bar association and responding to an invitation by Judge Wakefield, toastmaster, addressed the 300 or 400 lawyers about the tables. Governor Cummins responded to the toast "Iowa," M. F. Healy of Fort Dodge to the toast "The Ladies," Will E. Miller of Bedford to "The Lawyer's Inalienable Right," B. H. Miller of Anamosa to "The New Judge," Lafe Young to "The Press and the Lawyer," and Congressman Smith to "The President."

Secretary J. C. Simpson, of the department of agriculture, is receiving many entries for the judging contest which has been planned for the state fair. The competition is open to all young men of Iowa under 21, not agricultural students, and the prize is a year's scholarship at Ames for the agricultural course. The value of this scholarship is $200. It is announced that Professor Rucherford, of the Iowa State College, recently brought here from Guelph, Canada, to take the place of Professor Marshall, will have charge of the contest. A large number of inquiries have been received from without the state, many young men, not residents of Iowa, desiring to take part in the competition. Such entries, however, have been refused.

He—"Look, look! I think that man out in the breakers is drowning" She—"Oh, heavens! and I have left my camera at home!"

STORIETTES.

It is related that Sainte Beuve detested rain. On one occasion, when he had to fight a duel, he appeared with a pistol in one hand and an umbrella in the other. "I am willing to be shot," he exclaimed, "but not to get wet."

A Highland waiter once refused to serve the late Max O'Rell at dinner, and when reproved, explained: "It's no' to be expected that a self-respecting Scotsman could serve him with ceeveelity. Didn't he say we took to the kilt because our feet were too large to get through trousers?"

An Englishman of somewhat questionable reputation, who was criticising the American way of spelling, once turned to Maurice Barrymore the actor, and said: "I'll leave it to Mr. Barrymore. Is it right to leave out the u' in such words as harbor neighbor, honor, candor, etc?" "Well, about harbor and neighbor I am not sure," replied Barrymore, "but when it comes to honor and candor I leave you out."

At a rehearsal at the London Lyceum Theatre, before Sir Henry Irving had arrived, one of the actors in the company, who was noted for his accomplishments as a mimic, proceeded to give a lively and elaborate imitation of the actor-knight's highly characteristic mannerisms. As he finished his demonstration, Sir Henry's well-known voice came from the depths of the darkened auditorium: "Very good! Very good, indeed! So good, in fact, that there is no need for both of us in this company."

An anonymous writer in To-day tells an interesting anecdote of a visit paid by Gladstone to a litle bookshop near the Odeon, in Paris. As he entered, Gladstone saw a strange looking man in conversation with the bookseller and carrying an old copy of Villon's poems. "His dress was ragged and dirty, his face was matted with hair, and he had the eyes of an archangel, with the mouth and jaw of a baboon. Nevertheless, the respectful attitude of the book-seller showed that the man was a personalty. Gladstone entered into conversaion with him about Villon, and for an hour they talked about early French poetry. Then the stranger shuffled out of the shop. 'Who is that gentleman?' asked Gladstone; 'he has an extraordinary knowledge of French poetry.' 'Monsieur, he himself is our greatest poet. C'est Paul Verlaine!'"

A grocer in Syracuse gave a brewer an old cat and four kittens a day old. The brewer locked them in his brewery for the night. When the grocer came downstairs the next morning he found the cat and her four kittens asleep on his doorstep. The brewery was four miles away, and the kittens too young to walk were more than a few steps, so the old cat had carried each one in her mouth four miles.

A Denver desperado, charged with murder, gave an Irishman of the jury fifty dollars to hold out for a verdict of manslaughter. The jury was out for a long time, and finally brought in a verdict of manslaughter. "I'm deeply obliged to you," my friend," said the prisoner, when he had an opportunity of speaking to the Irish juror. "Did you have a hard time?" "Yes," said the Irishman, "an awful time! The other eleven wanted to acquit you."

He Feels Good.

Caddo, Ky., July 20th.—"I believe I could climb a mountain without drawing a long breath" is the way William Ball of this place describes how he is feeling.

As Mr. Ball has been on the sick list for a long time, this declaration from him comes as quite a surprise.

When asked to explain how he had become so strong in such a short time, he says:

"I did have Kidney Trouble very bad, in fact I had to get up four or five times every night to urinate. I had shortness of breath which distressed me terribly. I was badly used up, and was really of no account for anything.

"I used three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and that's what has made me well. I can sleep all night without having to get up. I feel splendid and as I said before, I believe I could climb a mountain without drawing a long breath. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it all."

Insist on Getting It.

Some grocers say they don't keep Defiance Starch. This is because they have a stock on hand of other brands containing only 12 oz. in a package, which they won't be able to sell first, because Defiance contains 16 oz. for the same money.

Do you want 16 oz. instead of 12 oz. for same money? Then buy Defiance Starch. Requires no cooking.

The impatience of some husbands is really annoying. About twelve years ago the wife of a man in Allen county, Kansas, went on a visit to some relatives, and has not let returned. The husband begins to feel impatient, and fears that if she does not come home in a year or two more it may be her intention to desert him.

The Resorts of Colorado.

The summer resorts of Colorado are enjoying the most profitable season in the history of the state.

More than ten thousand strangers arrived in Denver, Manitou, and Colorado Springs in the first week in July, and as many more have gone there since. Never have the cool retreats of the Rockies been so gay. Never have the boarding houses and hotels of Colorado Springs and Manitou housed so many pleasure-seekers. Life in the mountains is a constant succession of picnics, excursions and social functions. The eastern states are unusually well represented, while nearly every town and city in the central has sent anywhere from two or three to a hundred of its leading citizens.

Colorado is the natural stmmering place for the well-to-do people of the west. It is cool, accessible, ynd offers an infinite variety of entertainment. In Colorado there are a hundred places worth visiting, lakes and mountain streams into which the veriest tyro can drop his line with the certainty of a good catch; pretty nooks in the foothills where one can lie nuder the pines and breathe in the pure mountain air ideal locations for camping out—all the conditions, in short, that contribute to a successful holiday.

The Rock Island System offers exceedingly low rates to Colorado daily until September 30. Tickets are good to return until October 31.

Full information can be obtained on application to the nearest Rock Island ticket agent or by addressing, Jno. G. Farmer, D. P. A., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Garner Met Their Waterloo.

On Thursday of last week the Garner and Klemme base ball teams crossed bats at the Klemme Ball Park and for the first time this season Garner was defeated. The game was called at about 3:00 o'clock and a large crowd greeted the ball players. For several innings no score was made on either side, but in the fifth, Garner succeeded in circling the diamond twice and at this point had the game won—even more so than before they left their home town. Klemme succeeded in getting one score at their turn at the bat in the same inning, another in the sixth which tied the score, and in the eighth batted out three more. In vain did Garner try to score again though no opportunity to win the game was overlooked by them and no such opportunity came. The battery work on both sides was splendid so how can one draw any other conclusion than the Garner people drew in the Titonka game that our opponents were out-classed.

Umpires Lau and Blunt were criticized but little and tried to be fair in all decisions

On the whole the game was a good one, and Garner has a team that they may well be proud of but we are forced to modestly admit that Klemme has a better one. The brilliant plays made are too numerous to ennumerate so we shall not begin.

Base Ball Notes.

Probably 200 Garner people witnessed the game on Thursday.

The only consolation the Signal gets out of the game is that Schneider struck out 11 men. Our pitchers. Kluckhohn and Ell have strike-outs numbering up in the teens to their credit.

Manager Latham took the defeat of his team hard, but wore his regulation smile.

A Garner business man told our reporter on Wednesday that when Klemme played Garner a return game that they would show us dirty ball. We do not believe this for the Garner ball team is composed of gentleman.

J. L. HARR.

IN THE CHAIR OF ST. PETER

Long List of Distinguished Churchmen Who Have Worn the Triple Tiara—Reign of Pope Pius IX the Longest in History.

Pope Leo XIII., the 263d successor of St. Peter, Joachim Pecci, was born at Carpineto in the diocese of Anagni on March 2, 1810; ordained priest on Dec. 31, 1837; consecrated Titular Archbishop of Damietta on Feb. 17, 1843; transferred to the see of Perugia on Jan. 19, 1846; proclaimed Cardinal on Dec. 19, 1853; elected Pope on Feb. 20, and crowned on March 3, 1878.

The history of the popes shows that of the long line 195 have been Italians; Syrians, 7; Greeks, 15; Africans, 3; Spaniards, 4; French, 14; Burgundians, 2; Germans, 6; Saxons, 2; Bavarians, 4; English, 1, and Belgian, 1. The nationality of the others is not well established.

The religious orders supplied about seventy popes to the throne. The Benedictines have given thirty; the Carthusians two; the Carmelites two; the Dominicans four, and the Augustinians and Franciscans many. Numerous popes were members of royal and noble families, but many poor men have reached the tiara also. St. Peter was a fisherman. Adrian IV., the only Englishman who held the throne, was the son of a woman who begged alms at the door of her parish church. Urban IV. was the son of a poor Frenchman. The parents of Celestine V. were in very humble circumstances. So were those of Benedict II., an Italian Dominican, and also those of Nicholas V. The father of Adrian VI. was a ship carpenter, of Sixtus V. a farm laborer and of Pius V. a shepherd.

Gregory XI., 1276, died within a few hours of his election; Stephanus II. was pope for only three days; Urban VII. for twelve; Boniface VI. for fifteen; Celestine IV. for seventeen; Sisinius, Theodorus II., Damasus II., Pius III. and Marcellus II. for twenty; Valentinus for thirty and Leo XI. for twenty-five.

Pope Hormisdas, who was elected in 524, was a widower when he entered holy orders. He had a son called Silverius who succeeded him as Pope in 537. Silverius was martyred and both father and son are venerated as saints. Victor III. had also been married before ascending the throne; and so had Clement IV. He had two daughters and when his wife died he became a Carthusian monk. There are two instances in which brothers succeeded each other. The first is that of Stephen III., elected in 752. He reigned five years and was succeeded by his brother Paul I. The latter was canonized. The other case is that of Benedict VIII., elected in 1012 and succeeded twelve years after by his brother John XX., who was pope for nearly ten years.

Benedict III., 855, was the first pope to assume the title "Vicar of St. Peter." In the thirteenth century, however, this was changed to the present style, "Vicar of Christ." The usage of kissing the cross on the pope's slipper, which still obtains, was introduced in 772 by Adrian I. The first pope to change his name on election was Sergius II., 844. John has been the name most frequently adopted. There have been 23 Johns, 13 Innocents, 14 Benedicts, 16 Gregories, 14 Clements, 13 Leos, 9 Piuses and 8 Alexanders. Pope Cletus, the third pope, adopted the salutation since used: "Salutem et Apostolicam Benedictionem"—health and apostolic benediction.

Clement V., 1305, was the first pope to remove his residence from Rome to Avignon. The exile lasted seventy years and for seven popes. The longest interregnum between the death of one pope and the coronation of his successor was three years, after the death of Clement IV., in 1270.

Pope Telesphorus, 142, ordained that Lent should begin on Septuagesima Sunday and Pope Gregory I., the Great, 590, introduced the ceremony of putting ashes on the head on Ash Wednesday. Linus, St. Peter's successor, prohibited women from entering a church with uncovered heads. Pope Vitalianus, about 659, introduced organs in churches. He is said to have been a talented musician. Pope Clement, 93, is believed to be the author of the canon of the mass.

Zephyrinus, 205, ordained that chalices should be made only of gold or silver, and Eusebius, 309, prohibited the use of any fabric but white linen for corporals—the covering of the chalice during mass. Marcellus, 304, introduced the rites of burial with lights and the chanting of psalms. John XXII., 1316, established the usage of ringing the "Angelus" bell. Melchiades prohibited fasting on Sunday. Anicetus introduced the clerical tonsure and Pelagius II., the sixty-fifth pope, established the law that all clerics shall recite the seven canonical hours, or "breviary," daily. Gregory IX. prescribed the little bell that rings at the time of the elevation of the host at the mass. Vigilius ordered that the words of the consecration of the mass should be said silently.

Gregory XI., who died in 1378, was the last French pope. Clement VII. excommunicated Henry VIII. of England for usurping the title, "Head of the Church." Alexander VI., the famous Borgia, whose reputation present day historians are rehabilitating, was pope when Columbus discovered America. Alexander III. abolished tilts and tournaments in Europe. Paul IV., 1555-59, instituted the "Index of Prohibited Books" and the tribunal of the Inquisition. His successor, Pius IV., established the "Montes Pietatis," or official pawnshops. Boniface V. granted the right of sanctuary to all persons flying for safety to a church.

A Profitable Crop.

General Passenger Agent George Morton of the "Katy," St. Louis, received the following letter from one of the company's land and immigration agents at Rock Island, Texas:

"I send you by express a box of cigars manufactured from tobacco grown at Halletsville, Texas, on Post Oak sandy land, by one W. B. Hawkins. Mr. Hawkins raised 800 pounds per acre. It takes 15 pounds to make 1,000 cigars selling at $30 per thousand. The cost of manufacture and sale is about $13.00 per thousand, leaving net profit per one thousand cigars (or 15 pounds of tobacco) of $17.00. There is in this (Altair) county thousands of acres of the same kind of land which can be purchased at $4.00 to $6.00 per acre."

Medical Advice to Women.

Every sick and ailing woman,
Every young girl who suffers monthly,
Every woman who is approaching maternity,
Every woman who feels that life is a burden,
Every woman who has tried all other means to regain health without success,
Every woman who is going through that critical time — the change of life — is invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., in regard to her trouble, and the most expert advice telling exactly how to obtain a CURE will be sent absolutely free of cost.

The one thing that qualifies a person to give advice on any subject is experience — experience creates knowledge.

No other person has so wide an experience with female ills nor such a record of success as Mrs. Pinkham has had.

Over a hundred thousand cases come before her each year. Some personally, others by mail. And this has been going on for twenty years, day after day, and day after day.

Twenty years of constant success — think of the knowledge thus gained! Surely women are wise in seeking advice from a woman with such an experience, especially when it is free.

Mrs. Hayes, of Boston, wrote to Mrs. Pinkham when she was in great trouble. Her letter shows the result. There are actually thousands of such letters in Mrs. Pinkham's possession.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I have been under doctors' treatment for female troubles for some time, but without any relief. They now tell me I have a fibroid tumor. I cannot sit down without great pain, and the soreness extends up my spine. I have bearing down pains both back and front. My abdomen is swollen. I cannot wear my clothes with any comfort. Womb is dreadfully swollen, and I have had flowing spells for three years. My appetite is not good. I cannot walk or be on my feet for any length of time.

"The symptoms of Fibroid Tumor, given in your little book, accurately describe my case, so I write to you for advice." — MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St. (Boston), Roxbury, Mass.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: — I wrote to you describing my symptoms, and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully for several months, and to-day I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, together with your advice, carefully followed, entirely expelled the tumor, and strengthened the whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Your Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors, or any female trouble, to write you for advice, and give it a faithful trial." — MRS. E. F. HAYES, 252 Dudley St. Boston), Roxbury, Mass.

Mrs. Hayes will gladly answer any and all letters that may be addressed to her asking about her illness, and how Mrs. Pinkham helped her.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letter and signature of above testimonial, which will prove its absolute genuineness.

Russia Makes Promises Which Will Practically Settle the Manchurian Affair.

PORTS ARE TO BE OPENED

Arrangement Is Satisfactory to Both the United States and Japan—Russia Will Not in Any Way Oppose Opening of Ports.

Washington, July 17.—The Manchurian question has been settled satisfactorily to this government. Assurance have been received from the Chinese government that it will in the near fututre open as treaty ports several ports now closed to the world's trade. The Russian government has conveyed assurances to the United States government that it will not in any way oppose such opening. While the ports to be opened are not yet specified, it is gathered from the communications received that they are Moukden, the principal port of Manchuria, and Ta Tung Kao, at the mouth of the Yalu river. The state department is highly gratified at this outcome, feeling that it has secured not only for American commerce, but for the world at large, a very substantial gain.

It now develops that the meeting of Russian officials at Port Arthur just concluded, was but one of thesteps, though an important one, which the St. Petersburg government has planned in execution of its purpose to place matters of internal administration in Manchuria in such condition that the ports desired by the United States and Japan could be opened to trade without causing disturbances or involving undue sacrifices of proper Russian interests. It already had been represented that the much of the friction that had grown out of the Manchurian question was caused by a sort of triple yet independent administration of affairs in Manchuria, by representatives of the different branches of the Russian government. The result was that one official would not feel bound by the pledges made by another, so that foreign nations complained of bad faith. It is understood that now, following the Port Arthur conference, a compact and responsible direction of affairs has been arranged for and orders issued from St. Petersburg are certain to meet with speedy and exact compliance. Although no set time is mentioned in the promise to open the ports, it is believed that this will follow soon after the Russian evacuation in September.

DEATH DEALT BY TORNADO.

Five Persons Killed Outright and a Score or More Fatally Injured.

Streator, Ill., July 18.—A tornado last evening killed five persons, injured a score of others and caused a property loss of $2,000,000. The dead: Larry Doyle, Nels P. Biven, R. Purcell, Chas. Snyder and William Brown.

All but Purcell were killed at the race track, where new buidings had just been erected. Not a building is left standing. All of the buildings at Electric Park were destroyed, and the fences and amphitheatre of the ball park were blown away. Stauber's pants factory, a two-story brick building, was blown down and all the stock was ruined.

The Vulcan Western Company's plant suffered heavily. The Indiana and Illinois bridge, costing $1,000,000 is nearly half gone, and the hoisting works and buildings at Spring Hill shaft were ruined. Many buildings at Kangkley, four miles west of Streator, were blown down and several persons were injured there.

Many houses were unroofed and otherwise damaged. Telephone and telepragh wires are nearly all down and details are meagre.

The factory of the Western Vulcain works, which was destroyed, was erected at a cost of $150,000. Not a wall is left standing. About fifty men were employed there, but all had stopped work for the day about an hour before the storm. Only one man, Richard Purcell, the night watchman, was in the factory and he was kiled.

A quarter of a mile northeast was Adolph Stauber's clothing factory. This factory also was razed. About 100 people were employed there, but all had left a half an hour before. Passing on the tornado caught a number of small houses, wrecking some, turning others halfway around, twisting huge trees, and breaking them off at the base. The base ball park, the street railway park, and the driving park were in the storm's path.

A $15,000 amphitheatre was in the course of erection at the driving park. The storm took in these three parks and destroyed buildings, fences and grandstand. At the driving park about fifty carpenters had just stopped work.

There four persons were killed outright and fifteen injured. Nine horses also were killed.

At the dairy farm of A. J. Daughterty, on the edge of town, a house was blown down, and several who were in it were badly injured.

Mendota, Ill., July 18.—Four persons were killed and ten others seriously injured by a tornado which struck the northern part of this city last night. The path of the storm was about eight miles in length. Everything in the storm's track was levelled to the ground.

PE-RU-NA IS OF ESPECIAL BENEFIT TO WOMEN

Says Dr. M. C. Gee, of San Francisco.

A CONSTANTLY increasing number of physicians prescribe Peruna in their regular practice.

It has proven its merits so thoroughly that even the doctors have overcome their prejudice against so called patent medicines and recommend it to their patients.

"I Advise Women to Use Pe-ru-na," Says Dr. Gee.

Dr. M. C. Gee is one of the physicians who endorse Peruna. In a letter written from 513 Jones street, San Francisco, Cal., he says:

"There is a general objection on the part of the practicing physician to advocate patent medicines, but when any one medicine cures hundreds of people, it demonstrates its own value and does not need the endorsement of the profession.

"Peruna has performed so many wonderful cures in San Francisco that I am convinced that it is a valuable remedy. I have frequently advised its use for women, as I find it insures regular and painless menstruation, cures leucorrhœa and ovarian troubles, and builds up the entire system. I also consider it one of the finest catarrh remedies I know of. I heartily endorse your medicine."—M. C. Gee, M. D.

Mrs. E. T. Gaddis, Marion, N. C., is one of Dr. Hartman's grateful patients. She consulted him by letter, followed his directions, and is now able to say the following:

"Before I commenced to take Peruna I coule not do any hard work without suffering great pain. I took Peruna, and can say with pleasure that it has done more for me than any other mediciue I have ever taken. Now I am as well as ever; I do all my own work and it never hurts me at all. I think Peruna is a great medicine for womankind."—Mrs. E. T. Gaddis.

Women are especially liable to pelvic catarrh, female weakness as it is commonly called.

Peruna occupies a unique position in medical science. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession to-day. Catarrh, as every one will admit, is the cause of one-half the diseases which afflict mankind. Catarrh and catarrhal diseases afflict one-half of the people of the United States.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

We received the following testimonial from Mrs. J. J. Suckow, formerly of this place, but now a resident of Garner, regarding the promptness with which she secured a settlement with the Mystic Workers of the World lodge. It speaks volumes for the promptness and reliability of the order in settling their claims and is certainly a cheap and reliable insurance.

"I am in receipt of a draft from the M. W. W., for $2000 in full payment of certificate held by my late husband, J. J Suckow. I wish to thank the lodge for its promptness and will cheerfully reccommend it to anyone wanting a cheap and reliable insurance."

Abraham Lincoln's opinion of these Historical Celebrities: "I want to thank you and your brother for Abbott's Series of Histories. I have not education enough to appreciate the profound works of voluminous historians; and if I had I have no time to read them. But your Series of Histories gives me, in brief compass, just that knowledge of past men and events which I need. I have read them with the greatest interest. To them I am indebted for about all the historical knowledge I have."

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

B. E. Weaver, lineman for the Iowa Telephone company, was seriously injured by falling a distance of thirty feet from a pole at Fort Dodge. Weaver was stripping the pole of old wires when one came in contact with the electric light wire, where the insulation was worn off. Besides burns on his hands from the shock he is suffering internal injuries.

In a fit of temporary insanity, Mrs. Frank Rebachek, of Riverside, attempted suicide by severing one of the arteries of her arm. The deed was committed with a sharp butcher knife. After she thought that death was certain, she called her husband to bid him good-bye. The husband immediately summoned medical assistance, and after work that seemed hopeless, the flow of blood was stopped. It is now believed that she will recover.

J. Y. Greenwell will not go to Mexico to face his accusers. Extradition Commissioner McArthur of Des Moines discharged the defendant, holding that there was insufficient grounds to send him to Mexico. Greenwell was accused by the Mexican government of murdering one J. H. Stanfield near Tampico, Mexico, April, 1902. They went to Mexico together to go into business. Stanfield disappeared at Tampico. The latter was an engineer. Greenwell is a conductor.

William Lockridge, retired banker, pioneer and probably better known than any other man within the confines of Story county, was found dead behind his barn at Nevada, having died of apoplexy. Mr. Lockridge came to Nevada in 1856 and has been a continuous resident of the county since that date. He was a heavy land owner and for years was president of the First National bank, retiring a few years ago on account of his age. He was 71 years old.

John Clark, a well to do and highly respected farmer living four miles south of Farnhamville, was killed by the falling of a derrick which he was using in unloading hay. He was struck in the head and his skull crushed, dying two hours after the accident occurred.

Mrs. Lizzie Southworth, of Sioux City, bit a mouthful of flesh out of the arm of Mrs. James McKee, and for this she was arrested by the police. The McKees and Southworths are neighbors. Mrs. Southworth it is alleged, allows her chickens to roam at their own pleasure in the quest of worms. The flock intruded on the garden of her neighbor and this caused the mixup.

Brakeman Halloway of the Rock Island was found half a mile from Cedar Falls with one arm and both legs cut off. He was taken to the hospital in Cedar Falls but there is little hope for his recovery. He was running on a freight train which was doing some switching. It is supposed that he did not attempt to get on until the train was under considerable headway and it is supposed that he slipped and fell under the wheels. He was not missed by the train crew until the freight arrived at Winslow. His home is at Cedar Rapids.

Fast mail train No. 8 on the Burlington, struck a carriage on the Mt. Pleasant street crossing at Burlington containing Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Grant and two lads named Stolting. Mrs. Grant was thrown a distance of 100 feet into Hawkeye creek and instantly killed. Walter Stolting, who was sitting in the rear seat with her, fell in front of the train and had both legs cut off and his skull fractured. He died. Grant, who was driving, and the other Stolting boy, were in the front seat and escaped with bad bruises, but both will recover. Grant is a well known stock buyer. He and his wife were returning to their home in the western part of the city, after attending a band concert at Crapo park.

It develops that the shortage in the accounts of Charles K. Fillmore, the cashier in the Marshalltown freight office of the Great Western, is much more than at first supposed, and an amendment has been made to the information recently filed, charging larceny by embezzlement. On account of the increase in the amount of Fillmore's alleged shortage it was desired to change the charge in order that he may be convicted of a more serious offense than was at first contemplated. When the shortage was first announced it was supposed to be not over $500, but a thorough investigation of his accounts has now been made and it is given out that his shortage is $2,402.99. Fillmore's hearing has been set for Thursday, July 30. The American Bonding company of Baltimore, is Fillmore's surety and the company's special agent is in the city and assisted in checking up Fillmore's books. The shortage extends over a period of about one year.

"Aunt Becky" Young, of Des Moines, is one of the few surviving characters of the great American civil war. She was one of the principal actors in the battle of the Wilderness, holds the distinction of having exposed to General U. S. Grant, with whom she was personally acquainted, the notorious paymaster's fraud, showed Abraham Lincoln through the army hospital the Friday before he was assassinated, helped Mrs. Southworth's cousin serve coffee to Burnside's army as it marched through Bladensburg and saw from the hospital tent some of the fiercest battles of the great war.

Some one entered the pasture of W. E. Wyatt at Derby, a small town south of Chariton on the south branch of the "Q," and stole a team of 5-year-old bay horses.

John Jenkins Jones of Beacon was killed at Oskaloosa a few nights ago. He was struck by the Rock Island train, and his body torn to fragments and scattered over two blocks along the track. He is supposed to have had money. Foul play is suspected, and the police are investigating. A belated pedestrian stumbled over a piece of the body lying on the track at 1:30 a. m. The accident must have happened about 10 o'clock, by the last train on the track. The body was terribly mangled, being decapitated, the arms and legs severed, the trunk cut in pieces, and the body denuded of clothing and shoes. Bits of flesh were scattered for a thousand feet. Deceased was a member of an old family of the county. He was in the city to attend the races. The body was identified by a statement of work done for the Raven Coal company. No money was found in the clothing. He was with a number of companions late in the evening. It is thought he started home afoot, and was possibly assaulted. The affair has created considerable excitement among his friends, and a careful investigation is demanded. The crew of the Rock Island train supposed to have hit the man was unable to throw any light upon the mystery.

MRS. HODGE GIVES HERSELF UP.

Denison Woman Accused of Murder Surrenders to Police.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 27.—A young woman giving the name of Mrs. Aurora Hodge, her age 19, and her home Denison, Iowa, entered the office of Superintendent of Police Carr yesterday and said she wanted to give herself up, declaring that she had killed a man near Salt Lake City Utah, on July 11, last. She said she had parted from her husband a few months after their marriage and went on the road with a traveling medicine vender as his bookkeeper.

"When on a lonely road near Salt Lake City, July 11," she said, "he attempted to assault me and I shot him with a revolver I had been carrying I left him in the wagon and went to Salt Lake City to give myself up but my nerve failed me and I took a train for Denison. I told my brother and and when he went to tell the authorities I fled to Chicago. There I secured a position as waitress in a Spring Lake (Mich.) hotel, but could not rest with it on my mind, so I came to Grand Rapids to give myself up."

Mrs. Hodge refused to tell the name of the man she killed. Chief Carr is investigating and the woman is in jail.

Des Moines, July 27.—According to reports previously published, the man whom Mrs. Hodge says she killed was named William Ryan. After the murder she came to Iowa and began work in the telephone office at Denison, of which her brother, Alfred Larsen, is manager. The Denison marshal had been instructed by Salt Lake officers to watch her and not allow her to leave that city.

Thursday of last week an order reached Denison for the arrest of the woman, but when the officers went to the telephone office after her, she had fled. She probably walked from Denison to some nearby town and caught a train for Chicago.

TWO KILLED BY TRAIN.

William Lawlar and Miss Murphy Meet Violent Death.

Ralston, July 27.—Zora Murphy, aged 19, and William Lawlar, aged 27, both of whom lived with their parents near Scranton, were struck and almost instantly killed at 2 a. m., by an extra gravel train on the Northwestern at this point. The train was in charge of Conductor T. A. Zingenfus. How it happened that Lawlar failed to see the oncoming train is a matter of conjecture as for a distance of a quarter of a mile the track is visible for four miles to the east. Engineer Zingenfus stated that he did not know when he struck the buggy. He said: "I did not know of the accident until we had passed the spot. I stopped as quickly as I could but at that we had to walk back half a mile. We were going very rapidly, getting up speed to climb the big grade into Ralston.

When the train was finally stopped and the crew got back to where the dead lay, they found the horse fully one hundred feet to the westward of the road. About half way between was the body of the girl. A few feet nearer the road was the body of the man, every bone broken. Death in both cases must have been almost instantaneous. The couple had been at a dance in Ralston and were going back to their homes near Scranton. The parents of both are well to do farmers.

Coroner Patter and the jury he empanelled rendered the following verdict: "That said William Lawlar and Zora Murphy came to their deaths by injuries received while crossing the C. & N. W. railroad crossing east of Rolfe on the morning of July 25."

Thomas McCracken, a pioneer of Taylor county, was instantly killed at Council Bluffs by falling from a load of hay. His neck was broken.

Calver Hooper, aged 15 years, son of Mr. J. H. Hooper, was drowned in the Des Moines river at Humboldt. He was swimming with other companions, when he got beyond his depth.

While engaged in driving a fine trotting horse on the race track at Newton, James Elliott was instantly killed by an unfortunate accident. He was training the horse and had been driving it on the track when the horse became frightened and unmanageable. The shafts of the cart fell down and Mr. Elliott was thrown beneath the cart. The horse began kicking to free itself from the harness and in so doing kicked Mr. Elliott in the head. The accident was witnessed by a number of persons, but they were unable to reach him in time to be of any assistance, and when he was picked up life was extinct. Mr. Elliott was an old and respected retired merchant and very well known. He was 66 years old, and leaves an aged wife completely prostrated by the sad accident.

An impromptu battle in which a dozen shots were fired occurred at Eddyille a few days ago. Town Marshal McHugh undertook to arrest a party of horse traders who had camped near the town and had made themselves obnoxious. They resisted and a fight followed. The running fire lasted for some time and more than a dozen shots were passed before the crowd was corralled by the town marshal McHugh was shot in the hand and the wound is serious. Mr. St. John, one of the horse traders, was shot in the abdomen and will die as the result of his wounds. Harvey Pea was shot in the chest and his collar bone broken He was one of the party of itinerent horse traders. His wife was shot in the ankle. After the battle the marshal corralled the whole bunch and they are in jail awaiting trial.

For Matilda had concealed every fault and every unkindness by her prompt action in the matter of Lord Neville, and Jane had been loving and praising her for it, until the sweetness of their first affection was between them. And Matilda enjoyed praise; she liked the appreciation of her kind deed, and was not therefore disposed to make light or little of what she had done, or of its results.

"And, pray, how comes my lord on towards recovery?"

"Slowly. Life was nearly gone; body and mind were at death's door; but he can walk a little now, and in two or three weeks we are going away,—far away,—we are going to my brothers in the Massachusetts colony."

"You will come back?"

"I think it is unlikely. Father feels a change approaching. The Protector's health is failing rapidly; he is dying, Matilda."

"If he dies?——"

"Father will leave England as soon as Cromwell is in his grave. Cymlin will keep old Swaffham fair, for Cymlin will never leave England while you are in it."

"And you can bear to talk of leaving England in that calm way, without tears and without regrets. Jane, it is shameful; it is really wicked."

"Dear Matilda, do not be angry at me because I had to do what I had to do. I was married to Cluny three days after he came home. We all thought he was going to die, and he wished me to be his wife. Now did I not do right to marry him when and how, he wished?"

"Yes," she answered, but her face and voice showed her to be painfully affected. "Jane, I cannot bear to lose you. I shall have no one to love me, no one to quarrel with," she added.

"You will have Cymlin."

"Cymlin is Cymlin; he is not you. I will say no more. When a woman is married, all is over."

Then Jane rose to go, and Matilda tied her bonnet strings and straightened out her ribbons and her gloves, doing these trifling services with a long-absent tenderness that filled Jane's heart with pleasure. "Good-bye, dear!" she said with a kiss; "I will come as often as I can."

"Very kind of you, Lady Neville," answered Matilda with a curtsy and a tearful mockery; "very kind indeed! But will your ladyship consider—" then she broke down and threw her arms round Jane, and called her "a dear, sweet, little Baggage" and bade her give Cluny some messages of hope and congratulation, and so parted with her in a strange access of affection. But true friendship has these moods of the individual and would not be true without them.

Jane walked home through the city, and its busy turmoil struck her as never before. What a vain show it was! A passing show, constantly changing. And suddenly there was the galloping of horsemen, and the crowd stood still, and drew a little aside, while Cromwell, at the head of his guards, rode at an easy canter down the street. Every man bared his head as the grand, soldierly figure passed by. He saw Jane, and a swift smile chased away for a moment the sorrowful gravity of his face. But he left behind him a penetrating atmosphere of coming calamity. His glorious life was closing like a brilliant sun setting in a stormy sky.

The fifteenth of May had been set for his assassination. Cromwell knew all the secret plans of this conspiracy; knew every member of it; and on the afternoon when Jane Swaffham saw him passing up London streets, so stern and scornful, he had just ordered the arrest of one hundred of them.

Jane heard constantly of these events, but her heart had closer interests. The ship which was to carry Cluny and herself to America was lying at the wharf nearly ready for sea. There were to be no other passengers; Cluny and Jane alone were to find in its black-ribbed cabin their home for many weeks, perhaps months. A recent experience had proven the necessity for this exclusion of strange elements. Early in June, Israel had taken Cluny to bid farewell to his old General, and the meeting had tried both men severely. At its close Cromwell went to a desk and wrote a few lines to the officials of the Massachusetts Colony; in them, commending Lord Neville to their kindness and care. His hands trembled—those large, strong hands—trembled as he gave the letter to Cluny. Then he kissed him once more, and with a "Farewell" that was a blessing, he turned away, weeping.

"It is another friend gone," he said mournfully to his own heart; "lover and friend are put far from me and mine acquaintance into darkness."

Cluny was so much troubled and affected by this visit that Israel thought it well to take him to see the ship which was to carry him to the solitudes of the great waters and the safety of the New Yorld. He was impatient to be gone, but there were yet a number of small interests to be attended to; for they were to carry with them a great deal of material necessary to the building and furnishing of their future home. Every day revealed some new want not before thought of, so that it was nearing the end of June when at last all was declared finished and ready.

Then Jane hastened home, resolving to see Matilda on the following day. But when she reached Sandy's House, Mrs. Swaffham met her with a letter in her hand—"Lady Jevery asks you to come to Matilda, who is in great trouble,' she said.

So Jane went to her friend. With her, also, she found the grief death brings.

"Stephen is slain!" were her first words. She could hardly utter them. But Jane knew how to comfort Matilda; she could talk to her as she could not to the ladies of Cromwell's household. "How was Stephen slain?" she asked, "in a duel?"

"No, thank God! He fell, as he himself could have wished, fighting the enemies of his king. He was with Conde and the Dukes of York and Gloucester before Dunkirk, and was killed while meeting the rush of those terrible Ironsides. Canby wrote me that he said 'Mother!' joyfully, with his last breath."

"Poor Stephen!"

"Oh, indeed 'tis very well to cry, 'poor Stephen,' when he is beyond your pity. You might have pitied him when he was alive, that would have been something to the purpose. All his short, unhappy life has been one constant battle with Puritans and poverty. Oh, how I hate those Stuarts! I am thankful to see you can weep for him, Jane. I think you ought. God knows he loved you well, and most thanklessly. And he is the last, the last de Wick. Root and branch, the de Wick tree has perished. I wish I could die also."

"And Cymlin, Matilda?"

"I shall marry Cymlin—at the proper time."

"You may have sons and daughters."

"I hope not. I pray not. I have had sorrow enough. My father and his three sons are a good ending for the house. It was built with the sword, and it has been destroyed by the sword. No, Jane, the line of de Wick is finished. Cymlin and I will be the last Earl and Countess de Wick."

"And Prince Rupert?"

"Is a dream from which I have awakened."

"But he may stil be dreaming."

"Rupert has many faults, but he is a man of honor. My marriage to Cymlin will be a barrier sacred to both of us. Our friendship can hold itself above endearments. You need not fear for Cymlin; Matilda de Wick will honor her husband, whether she obeys him or not. Cymlin is formed for power and splendor, and he will stand near the throne."

"If there be a throne."

"Of that, who now doubts? Cromwell is falling sick, and you may feel 'God save the King' in the air. If you had married Stephen, he would have been alive to join in the cry. I could weep at your obstinacy, Jane."

"Let it pass, dear. I was suckled on Puritan milk. Stephen and I never could have been one. My fate was to go to the New World. Stephen has escaped this sorrowful world and—"

"Oh, then, I would he were here! This sorrowful world with Stephen in it was a better world than it is without him. Jane, Jane, how he loved you!"

"And I loved him, as a companion, friend, brother, if you will. When you lay his body in de Wick, cast a tear and a flower on his coffin for me. God give him peace!"

At length their "farewell" came. The last words between them were soft and whispered, and only those sad, loving monosyllables which are more eloquent than the most fervid protestations. And so they parted, forever in this life.

The next afternoon Jane and Cluny rode through London streets for the last time. On the ship they found Jane's father, Doctor Verity and Sir Thomas Jevery. There were no tears at this parting; nor any signs of sorrow; every one seemed resolved to regard it as a happy and hopeful event. For, though not spoken of, there was a firm belief and promise of a meeting again in the future not very far off. Israel held his little daughter to his heart, and then laid her hand in Cluny's without a word; the charge was understood. When the last few minutes came, and the men were trooping to the anchor, Doctor Verity raised his hands, and the three or four in the dim, small cabin knelt around him, and so their farewell was a prayer and their parting a blessing.

Israel and Doctor Verity walked away together, and for a mile neither of them spoke a word. As they came near to Sandy's, however, Israel said:

"It is a short farewell, John. It wil be my turn next."

"I shall go when you go."

"To the Massachusetts Colony?"

"Yes. I am ready to go when the time comes."

"It is not far off."

"A few months at the longest."

"He is very ill?"

"The foundations of his life are shaken, for he lives not in his power or his fame, or even in the work set him to do. No, no, Oliver lives in his feelings. They are at the bottom of his nature; all else is superstructure. And Fairfax, as well as Lambert and others, think they can fill great Oliver's place!—no man can."

"For that very reason, when he departs, I will away from England. I have no heart for another civil war. I will draw sword under no less a general than Oliver."

"Good night, John."

"Good night, Israel. Have you told Martha?"

"Not yet. She will fret every day till the change comes. Why should we have a hundred frets when a dozen may do?"

But when Israel went into Martha's presence something made him change his mind. The mother had been weeping, and began to weep afresh when she saw her husband. He anticipated her sorrowful questions, and with an assumption of cheerfulness, told her how happy and hopeful Jane and Cluny seemed to be. "It did not feel like a parting at all, Martha," he said, "and indeed there was no need for any such feeling. We are going ourselves very soon now."

The words were spoken and could not be recalled, and he stood, in a moment, ready to face the storm they might raise. Martha looked at her husband with speechless wonder and distress, and he was more moved by this attitude than by her usual garrulous anger. He sat down by her side and took her hand, saying:

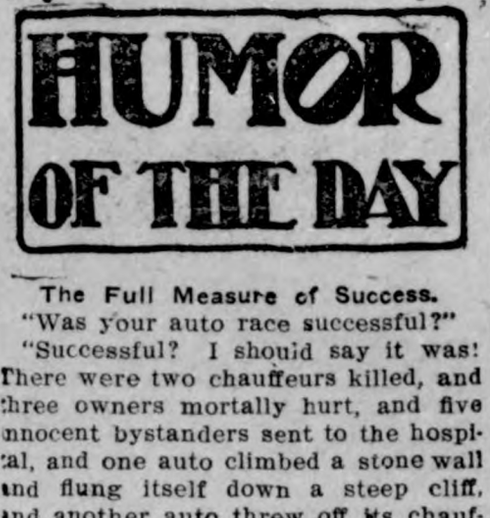
HUMOR OF THE DAY

The Full Measure of Success.

"Was your auto race successful?"

"Successful? I should say it was! There were two chauffeurs killed, and three owners mortally hurt, and five innocent bystanders sent to the hospital, and one auto climbed a stone wall and flung itself down a steep cliff, and another auto threw off its chauffeur and is now careering wildly across the country and terrorizing the community, and Hoskin's new touring car crossed the Verlaine at a single bound, and then jumped on the roof of a gamekeeper's cottage, and—well, it certainly was the most spirited and thoroughly enjoyable run we have ever had."

The Mashing of a Masher.



Reggy—Railroad accident?

Freddy—Yes. Tried to kiss a girl going through a tunnel.

Rash Act.

"Confound that cook!" growled the cannibal king. "Here dinner is two hours late and still not a sound from the kitchen. I'll discharge her for this. Chamberlain, go to the kitchen and tell that cook to get a move on her."

"Pardon me, your majesty," said the chamberlain, kowtowing properly; "but has your majesty's august memory failed to apprise him of the fact that he ate the cook this morning?"—Judge.

The Provider Kicks.

"Of all the erroneous proverbs," growled Markley, as he looked over the monthly statement from Bargen & Co.'s, "the worst of all is 'Time is Money.'"

"Why so?" inquired his wife.

"Well, you, for instance, save time by not asking the prices of things when you go shopping, but you don't save money."

The Woman and Her Age.

She—I heard you complimenting her upon her girlish appearance. What did she say?

He—She said: "Ah! but I'm sure I shall look very much older when I'm 40."

She—Huh! She means she'll look very much older when she admits she is 40.

Gave Herself Away.

Mrs. Newriche—Oh! dear me. I think slang is so wretchedly vulgar.

Jack Ahthere—I don't agree with you. I think it is very expressive.

Mrs. Newriche—That may be, but it doesn't cut any ice with me.

The Whole Thing.

"Then you've been to Niagara?"

"Yes. I was quietly married last Tuesday week, and the next day we reached Niagara. Soon as we got there I started out to see the Falls with my wife."

"Magnificent, eh?"

"You bet. You should have seen all the other men turning around to look at her as she passed."—Philadelphia Press.

Valuable.

"I've been mailing you quite a lot of my writings from time to time," said the struggling author, "but it seems I never send you anything that's acceptable."

"Oh! yes, you do," replied the editor, "the stamps are always acceptable."

A Proper Bath.

This is a story told on Mr. George A. McNutt, the Chesterfieldian passenger agent of the M., K. & T. R'y: In his travels through Nebraska he stopped overnight in a small town and registered at the hotel pointed out to him by the conductor as the best in town. In the morning he wanted to take a bath and consulted the proprietor about it. The proprietor shouted back to the rear: "Here', Tom, this here gent wants a bath. Bring the fixin's." Tom soon appeared, carrying a cake of yellow soap, a towel and a pick. "What's the pick for?" asked George. "Why," said the proprietor, "you'll have to dam up the crick."

Brother Brackett is entirely wrong in his surmise that we were warming up to begin a novel with which to astound the world when we said that one of Garner's business men said Garner would show us dirty ball when we played a return game there. The doctor challenges us to give the name of such business man. Brackett, if August Baumgartner doesn't object, next week we shall give the name of the business man.

August Lau and Sons elevator is now completed. On Saturday Mr. Lau accepted the building and it is certainly a fine structure. The building is equipped with all the modern conveniences and Mr. Lau starts in this season prepared to handle his grain business with more ease than ever before.

On Saturday George Schoper and Mat Palmer left for Adair, Ill., where they will continue in the employ of Boggis & Younglove. We were very sorry to see the boys go and they will receive a royal welcome home at the close of the building season. By the departure of George Schoper the Klemme Base Ball team has suffered a great loss, for to duplicate his playing on first base will be hard to do.

There was a ball game at the Garner Ball Park on Thursday last. On this occasion the Gar-Garner and Britt teams battled for supremacy and in a very spirited contest the Britt boys were defeated by a score of 3 to 4. A nice game was played up to the seventh inning but after that instead of playing ball the teams wrangled. Both towns have strong teams and each town was equally anxious that their team should win.

VICTORIOUS AGAIN.

Klemme, Though Only a Small Town, Yet the Garden Spot of the Earth, Takes Game Number Two From Garner's Sluggers. Klemme's Percentage Still an Even Thousand.

The return game with the Garner base ball team has been played and won. The two teams met on the Garner diamond on Thursday and Klemme captured the game by a score of 3 to 1. This was undoubtedly the best game of ball ever witnessed in Garner and the one very commendable feature of it was the absence of wrangling and ragchewing. The game was replete with brilliant plays and each side labored hard for victory. According to some of Garner's people it was one of Garner's days off. However this has been their second day off in just two weeks time. The Garner team is a good one but the fact that Klemme has won two games from them leads us to believe that Klemme has a better one. It is generally conceded that this was one of the cleanest games of ball ever played around this country. The work of the Garner battery was very good as was the playing of the balance of the nine.

Klemme is not possessed of a "Big Dutch Whirlwind" but has a "Little Dutch Whirlwind" whose speed and crooked ones is unequaled in northwest Iowa, while his worthy assistant Joe Nissen always captures everything in sight. Kluckhohn has 14 strike outs to his credit and but very few hits were made off him. George's baby is certainly fast and played his end of the game like an old leaguer. As for our catcher, Joe Nissen, they never come too high or too low. He has no pass balls scored against him and his head is always in the game. Joe was there with a strong right arm and the attempts of the Garner boys to steal second were fruitless. But one man got second and that on account of letting the ball hit him. Not one bad throw to second was made by our man, Joseph.

With Ben Kaste on first base to "glom" onto the high ones as well as the low ones, performed with much credit to himself. Nothing passed Benjamin. Paul Griesmer, our second baseman, got everything in sight, and caught several men at second. His splendid throw from the field home shutting off a score brought out much deserved applause. John Baumgaertner on third, played his position in fine shape, and his "south paw" never failed in throwing a man out at first when an opportunity presented itself. Ed. Ell in left field, Chas. Ell in center and Oscar Carlson in right made a background for the infield which could not be beaten. These boys played their positions to perfection and deserve much praise for their work. As for the shortstop, he missed a little grounder in the ninth and had this error been the cause of a score he never would have forgiven himself for it.

The Garner people were very docile after the game and, we believe, are thoroughly convinced that they cannot beat the Klemme team. Our boys had a host of friends on the grounds, and when Klemme made a good play or a score our rooters shouted right royally.

Chas. Icaacs, of Forest City, was umpire. He is certainly the best qualified man in the northwest for umpire, and his decisions were received with favor by the audience as a whole.

Klemme held in reserve as pitcher, Ed. Ell, but had no occasion to use him. Ed. however, was in splendid form and would have pitched a good game. The general verdict of the Garner people was that it was a good game—but.

MAD RACE RIOT AT DANVILLE, ILL.

Mob of White Men Wanted Negro Who Had Committed an Assault.

ONE NEGRO WAS LYNCHED

He Was Strung to Telegraph Pole, Then Burned and Hacked to Pieces—He Had Killed a White Member of the Mob.

Danville, Ill., July 26.—A race riot in this city, resulted in the violent death of two men; the fatal wounding of many others, with six of eight men, whites and blacks, injured, is the sequence of an assault made by a negro named Joe Wilson, upon a Mrs. Burgess of Alvan, a village near here, yesterday. The news of the assault was quickly spread; Wilson was soon captured and confined in the jail here. When the news of the affair spread throughout this city it took but a short time for a leader to arouse a mob, whose purpose it was to inflict summary punishment upon the ravisher.

Early last night this mob started toward the jail, but on the way a quarrel arose between the leaders and some negroes who had accompanied the lynchers. During this trouble Henry Gafferman, of Danville, white, was shot and instantly killed by J. D. Mayfield, a negro from Evansville, Ind. This intensified the fury of the mob, which immediately seized upon Mayfield and hung him to the nearest telegraph pole.

When this was done the crowd started on for the jail, intent on having Wilson's life.

Just as the mob was preparing to storm the jail someone suggested that they go back and cut down the dead negro.

The suggestion was immediately acted upon. Rushing back to the scene of the lynching, the mob cut down the victim and carried the body on a run to the public square in front of the jail. Hay, straw, bales and boxes were collected and the corpse was thrown upon the pile. A torch was applied and the flames shot up.

While the mob's victim was burning several men fired bullets in the flames. Several knives were drawn, with which they hacked the burning corpse. The ears were chopped off and the feet, which protruded from the flames, were hacked to pieces.

When the mob had done everything its fury could suggest, it turned again to the jail, in front of which was still smouldering the human bonfire.

A fence rail was procured as a battering ram, and the mob charged the jail door. Inside, guarding the prisoner, was Sheriff R. D. Whitlock, several deputies and a negro turnkey. All were armed. Sheriff Whitlock shouted to the mob to stand back or he and his men would fire. The warning was unheeded, as the mob was almost upon the jail door a volley rang out from inside. Several of the mob fell wounded and dying. A bullet pierced the heart of Adam Merry. His death is but a matter of a short time.

H. Hines received bullets in the shoulder and neck and his wounds are so desperate that his death is expected.

Otto Heinke was wounded in the arm Others received lesser injuries.

The mob was especially wild in its anger against the negro turnkey. After the fusilade it recoiled for a few minutes but immediately preparations were made for another attack. Finally, at 2:30 this morning, after fruitless efforts to break into the jail, the mob dispersed.

Danville, Ill., July 27.—Two killed and twenty-two wounded, the police station wrecked, the county jail with few of its windows left unshattered, the city in the hands of the state troops and a feeling of uneasiness and dread prevailing everywhere, is the situation left by the race riots of Saturday night and early yesterday morning.

Four companies of the Seventh Illinois infantry arrived at 9:30 yesterday morning from Springfield, where the regiment is holding its annual encampment. Streets were soon cleared and the threatening attitude of the crowds disappeared. Last night, 100 sentinels patrolled the streets in the vicinity of the jail.

Leading citizens say the outbreak has been feared for a long time, as bitter feeling has existed for several years between the negroes and a certain class of white persons. A number of minor outbreaks have occurred during the past year.

The feeling against the soldiers is noticeable. The commissary department yesterday had much trouble getting restaurants to serve meals. Many refused to feed the soldiers. There was one clash between the guard and a miner named Edward Liggett, who began abusing a guard. The soldier leveled his bayonet and Liggett was arrested and fined $100.

FAILURES IN WALL STREET.

Due to Present Period of Excited Stock Selling.

New York, July 25.—The announcement on the stock exchange late yesterday of the suspension of the firms of Talbot J. Taylor & Company and W. L. Stow & Company, was the sequel to a period of excited selling of stocks and wide cuts in prices, which has not been equalled before since the present movement to liquidate set in. There is nothing in either failure that can be traced to business or industrial conditions outside the exchange, the case lying close to a diagnosis of speculative collapse. Both firms have been largely concerned in speculative market pools, formed for the purpose of taking on a line of stocks, sustaining their price by supporting orders real or manipulative and seeking to realize profits by selling out to outsiders at the high prices. Such operations have suffered from increasing difficulties with the growth in the stringency of money, the solicitude of bankers over loans employed in such projects and the jaded appetite of the public for securities. The operations of the firm of W. L. Stowe & Co. were on a large scale in Mexican Central, and the difficulties which have accumulated upon them are understood by the price of 11 touched by Mexican Central under the forced selling yesterday and the high level at 31⅛ last year.

The failure of Talbot J. Taylor & Co. will inevitably be connected with the great market operations of James R. Keene by reason of his family connection with and frequent employment of the firm. Mr. Keene's operations in stocks are too numerous to detail and much mystery usually attaches to them necessarily from their nature. But the market management of the United States Steel stocks on behalf of the syndicate and the conduct of a Southern Pacific pool are the operations with which his name is most concerned.

In an interview Mr Keene said he was the largest creditor of the firm, but that he would not be affected, as his fortune was safe.

FLEETS READY TO FIGHT.

Alarming Story Sent Out Regarding Situation as to Corea.

London, July 24.—The Daily Mail's Tokio corespondent sends rather an alarming view of the situation in the east to his paper. He says that Russia's retention of Manchuria, the increase of her fleet, the despatch of reinforcements to Manchuria, the southward movement of the occupying army in Manchuria and the defiant conduct on the Corean frontier alarmed the Japanese many of whom are convinced that it would be better to fight now than risk the eventual loss of Corea and the relegation of Japan to a secondary place. He says the Japanese are accumulating stores and negotiating the purchase of ships; that a squadron is off Vladivostock, to which port Russian vessels have been sent as a precaution, and that both fleets are ready for action at any moment. He says a perusal of the Siberian press reveals the aggressive spirit of the Russian military party; that the Russians believe they will lose prestige if they give way now with the result that their far eastern empire will be lost and Japanese influence will become predominant. The appointment of Marquis Ito as president of the privy council, the correspondent says, is favorable to peace but that Russia must retreat or there will be very grave danger of war. He says the Japanese believe that France and England wil join in the expected conflict, which diplomatists at Tokio think might, if once begun, continue for years, involving disastrous results to Russia and France and the creation of a sort of Balkan difficulty in Corea. He adds that confidence is shown on the Angli-Japanese.

The Standard's Tien Tsin correspondent says that since the fifteenth of this month there has been an incessant increase in the concentration of Russian forces at Port Arthur and elsewhere, many who were ostensibly emigrants being in reality soldiers. He adds that there is not the slightest evidence that Russia intends to withdraw or moderate her policy.

FUNERAL OF POPE LEO.

Rome, July 26.—Sealed in its triple coffin, at the conclusion of the funeral services of grandeur, dignity and solemnity, the body of Leo XIII, vicar of Christ, and sovereign pontiff of the church of Rome, lies tonight entombed.

Over the majestic bronze doors of the left wing of the greatest cathedral in the world is the niche which holds Leo's body in its eternal rest.

Two hundred thousand and more men, women and children had passed in sorrow through the high walled corridors, the great columns swathed in artistic, rich draperies of purple and black and gold, to the glistening grating where Leo lay on his bier of state, his small body clad in all the august white and gold robes of his great station.

On the strike of mid day, when the great cannon of the castle of St. Angelo sent out a loud report, Cardinal Orgelia, acting chieftain of the church of Rome, made a sign and the Italian soldiery and the papal guards proceeded to clear the chapel of all but the cardinals, then, a few minutes afterwards took their leaves. The great doors of the chapel were swung closed, meeting in a solemn, sounding clang and the end of Leo in the eyes of all men, save those who were near to him in his life time, had closed. The final knell was the melodious singing of the basilica bells as they told the hour of midday.

In the great hall of the consistory Cardinal Oreglia, and all of his colleagues of the Sacred college held a reception in honor of the entire diplomatic force accredited to the vatican. The cardinals were seated in large arm chairs and then the diplomats passed in single file. They were headed by Senor R. Martins D'Antas, ambassador from Portugal and dean of the diplomatic corps.

Bowing to the cardinals and especially addressing himself to Cardinal Orgelia, the aged diplomat said:

"The diplomatic body accredited to the holy see wish to present to the sacred college their profound condolence on the occasion of the sorrowful and irreparable loss it has sustained and which puts all Christianity in mourning. The virtue and high wisdom of the sovereign pontiff, Leo XIII, will leave a luminous track in the history of the world. The diplomatic body beg your eminences to accept their condolence, while we express the hope that God in his divine wisdom and great bounty will inspire the sacred college in choosing a sovereign pontiff destined to maintain the prestige of the church."

Cardinil Oreglia in reply said:

"Your excellency, as dean of the diplomatic body, accorded to the holy see, has nobly interpreted the feeling of all your colleagues in the sorrowful circumstances of the death of the venerable pontiff, his holiness, Leo XIII, of glorious memory. The whole world weeps with us at such an irreparable loss. The sacred college, feeling in a special manner this terrible circumstance which has struck the apostolic holy see and the Catholic world, highly esteems the condolence received from the sovereigns and rulers of states, and this new proof of sympathy which the diplomatic corps has offered to us is profoundly appreciated.

"Believe me, Mr. Ambassador, that we are extremely grateful to your excellency and to each of your worthy colleagues, for your warm and sincere participation in our sorrow, while the condolences, expressed with so much delicacy through the intermediary of your excellency in the name of the diplomatic body, are true consolation for our afflicted hearts. The sacred college is preparing to exercise the highest among its prerogatives in the election of him who will govern the church as vicar of Jesus Christ. In such a grave and solemn moment God will certainly grant us the special help and grace necessary to accomplish the heavy task imposed upon us. With these sentiments the sacred college, on the eve of the conclave, takes leave of the diplomatic body, renewing to them the expression of its warmest gratitude."

Rome, July 20.—Pope Leo XIII. is dead. The last flicker of life expired at four minutes past four o'clock this afternoon and the pontiff now lies at rest.

Des Moines, July 27, 1903.

Adjutant General Byers says it has been concluded to select details from all the companies of the guard, outside of the Fifty-first regiment, for the purpose of bringing that regiment up to the required strength of 816 officers and men, which it must have when it goes to the maneuvers at Fort Riley. The orders of the war department are that the regiment must have a strength of 816. The Fifty-fifth has something over 500 officers and men. Instead of adding to it companies from other regiments, Adjutant General Byers will have details of five or six men each sent from the other companies in the service. This will give some of the members of each company in the guard a taste of real campaigning. The dates for the regimental camps in the state have been revised and definitely fixed. The Fifty-third will camp from August 13 to 20, the Fifty-fourth from September 11 to September 16, and the Fifty-sixth from September 2 to 9 inclusive.

The damage to the crops of western Iowa by the hail storm which swept over nearly half the state on the night of the 20th is inestimable, but will probably reach into the hundreds of thousands of dollars, judging from reports made to the hail insurance companies in this city. The path of the storm appears to have been about forty miles wide, but it followed no regular course, veering considerable. It entered the state from South Dakota, where the loss is said to be as heavy as in Iowa, first striking Lyon and Osceola counties and then traveling southward and sligthly east across the state, striking quite heavily in O'Brien, Cherokee, Monona, Warren, Greene, Shelby, Polk, Crawford and Cass counties. The severity of the storm varied and hail stones of unusual size and to a considerable depth, fell in many places. In most places the hail was accompanied by a terrific gale and severe electrical storm.

The horse show at the Iowa State Fair at Des Moines this year, from August 21 to 29, will be the best ever held in the state. There will be an exceptionaly strong showing of heavy horses and it is predicted it will be the best ever seen in Iowa. Professor C. F. Curtiss, of the Iowa State College, has been selected to judge the horses, this arrangement giving general satisfaction to the exhibitors.

The Scandinavian Relief commission, appointed by Governor Cummins some months ago, for the purpose of collecting funds in Iowa to be sent to the relief of the starving Scandinavians in Sweden, Norway and Finland, has made its final report to the governor. It shows that the people of Iowa contributed with great liberality to the cause. The total sum collected was $10,870.40. The expenses were light, reaching a total of but 449.62. The entire net sum left after deducting expenses has been forwarded to the sufferers. The report shows that about 60 per cent of the funds went to Sweden, about 20 per cent to Norway and the same amount to Finland.

The recent strike at Dubuque and the sending of the militia there at the urgent request of the sheriff, cost the state a considerable sum. Bills have been allowed by the executive council of $1,838.25. The warrants have been drawn by Captain Amos Brandt, deputy auditor under Mr. Carroll, and will be turned over to Adjutant General Byers.

The executive council is working steadily on assessments and has practically completed the task of equalizing the returns from the counties. The results, however, will not be made public until all the assessments have been fixed. It is known the council has not cut down the aggregate assessment in the state. Some of the valuations in the lower counties have been raised, and those in the higher have been depressed. It is understood this has resulted in a slight increase of the aggregate. The council is now working on telephone and telegraph assessments. As there are 1,200 telephone lines and over to assess, the task before the council is a heavy one.

Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, "the hero of the Merrimac," will speak in this city on the 29th on "The United States as a World Power." On the 30th William J. Bryan will speak on "The Value of An Ideal." Captain Hobson's lecture is one of the best known and most popular that has been delivered on the Chautauqua platforms for the past two years. Mr. Bryan's address will be of a political nature, and may contain statements as startling as those recently made at Chicago, which attracted attention all over the country. Mr. Bryan by special request will touch on the Iowa democratic platform. He will be introduced by J. B. Sullivan, of Creston, the democratic candidate for governor.

Attorney General Mullan has rendered an opinion to Secretary J. F. Kennedy of the state board of medical examiners, in which he holds the board exceeded its power in passing a resolution providing it would not issue a license as an itinerant physician to anyone not a resident of this state. A resolution of this kind was adopted last February, and the result of it was the exclusion from the itinerant field of several non-residents of Iowa. Under section 2581 of the code, the annual license required from itinerant practitioners is $250. Mr. Mullan says the board has no power to discriminate between residents and non-residents of Iowa if they are alike entitled to licenses. He holds the resolution cannot be enforced by the board.

Found a Friend.

Valley City, N. Dak., July 27th.—Mrs. Matilda M. Boucher of this place tells how she found a friend in the following words:

"For years I suffered with a dizziness in my head and could get nothing to cure me till about two years ago, when I was advised to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. These pills cured me before I had used the whole of the first box, and I haven't been troubled since.

"In January of this year I had an attack of Sciatica that made me almost helpless, and remembering how much Dodd's Kidney Pills had done for me before, I sent and got some and began to take them at once.

"In three weeks I was well, and not a trace of the Sciatica left, and I have been well ever since.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills have certainly been of great benefit to me. I have found them a friend in time of sickness, and I will always recommend them to every one suffering with the troubles that bothered me."

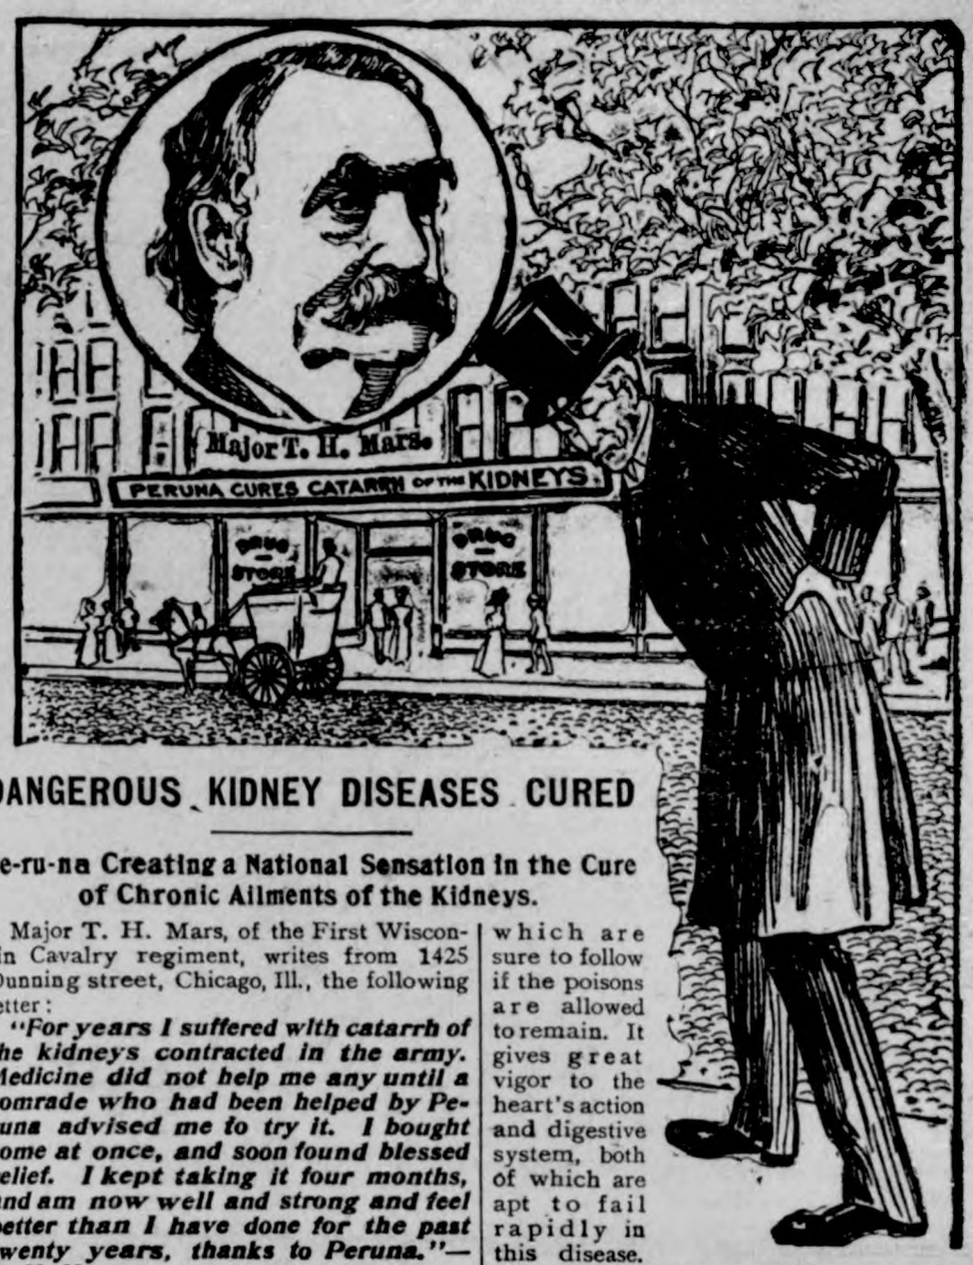
We do not need to expatiate upon the scholastic advantages of St. Mary's for the catalogue of the school shows the scope of work included in its curriculum, which is of the highest standard, and is carried out faithfully in the class rooms. We simply emphasize the spirit of earnest devotion which makes every teacher at St. Mary's loyally strive to develop each young girl attendant there into the truest, noblest, and most intelligent womanhood. FOR TWENTY YEARS MAJOR MARS SUFFERED FROM CATARRH OF THE KIDNEYS.



DANGEROUS KIDNEY DISEASES CURED

Major T. H. Mars, of the First Wisconsin Cavalry regiment, writes from 1425 Dunning street, Chicago, Ill., the following letter:

"For years I suffered with catarrh of the kidneys contracted in the army. Medicine did not help me any until a comrade who had been helped by Peruna advised me to try it. I bought some at once, and soon found blessed relief. I kept taking it four months, and am now well and strong and feel better than I have done for the past twenty years, thanks to Peruna."—T. H. Mars.

At the appearance of the first symptom of kidney trouble, Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once the very root of the disease. It at once relieves the catarrhal kidneys of the stagnant blood, preventing the escape of serum from the blood. Peruna stimulates the kidneys to excrete from the blood the accumulating poison, and thus prevents the convulsions which are sure to follow if the poisons are allowed to remain. It gives great vigor to the heart's action and digestive system, both of which are apt to fail rapidly in this disease.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys simply because it cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

PLAYED WITH A GREAT MAN.

Carnegie Regarded Tom Morris as Among the World's Heroes.

As is well known, Andrew Carnegie is a devotee of the ancient Scottish game of golf and never misses an opportunity to try his skill with stick and ball. When he was made a burgess of St. Andrew's, along with Lords Elgin and Balfour of Burleigh, he made a point of visiting the show places of the ancient city—the cathedral, the castle and the golf course. Among other clubmakers' places that of old Tom Morris faces the home hole. There Mr. Carnegie was met and welcomed by the Nestor of golf, old Tom, cap in hand. Mr. Carnegie hailed Tom as "the greatest man in the world," naming great soldiers, orators, musicians, principals and professors, none of whom could compare with Tom Morris, the greatest golfer. Pulling out his card, Mr. Carnegie wrote on the back of it, "To T. Morris, king of golfdom, from his loyal subject A. C.," which old Tom accepted with his old-world courtesy. Mr. Carnegie bargained with him for sets of clubs and for a match that he might be able to say: "I have played golf with old Tom Morris."

Abraham Lincoln's opinion of these Historical Celebrities: "I want to thank you and your brother for Abbott's Series of Histories. I have not education enough to appreciate the profound works of voluminous historians; and if I had I have no time to read them. But your Series of Histories gives me, in brief compass, just that knowledge of past men and events which I need. I have read them with the greatest interest. To them I am indebted for about all the historical knowledge I have."

TROPHY WON BY AMERICANS.

Plate Recaptured by United States Riflemen.

Some excellent shooting was recorded in the international match for the Palma trophy, founded by the American National Rifle Association in 1876, which this year was held in England. The trophy is presented for competition by the riflemen of the world, and international competitions have taken place for several years. The first time it left the United States was in 1901, when it was won by the Canadians.

In the following year the competition took place at Ottawa, and on this occasion the trophy was won by the British. This year the Americans recovered possession of the trophy by scoring 1570 points, to 1555 by Great Britain, 1510 by Canada, 1501 by Australia, 1399 by Norway, 1399 by Natal, and 1340 by France. The victors were warmly congratulated at the close of the contest. It is certain that next year a British team will make a strong effort to bring back the trophy.

TO ELECT A POPE.

Ceremony of Entrance of Cardinals in Conclave.

Rome, August 1.—The largest conclave in the history of the Catholic church has now assembled in the Sistine chapel for the purpose of electing a successor to Leo XIII. Sixty-two cardinals, with more than two hundred clerical and lay attendants, are, to all intents and purposes, prisoners within the vatican. One of them, Cardinal Herrana y Espinosa, archbishop of Valencia, was prostrated immediately after entering the conclave, and lies ill in his cell. This morning the cardinals entered on the solemn duty of choosing the new pope by ballot. The general impression exists that within two or three days possibly, though not probably, a new pope will have been chosen. But no matter how long a time may be required, the absolute seclusion of the princes of the church from the outer world must, according to the church law, continue until a choice shall be made.

Prognostications as to who will wear the tiara have little value, as even the cardinals seemed to be without definite ideas as to the issue. Cardinals Rampolla, Serafino Vannutelli, Di Pietro, Gotti and Oreglia continue to be most frequently mentioned as the likely candidates, but the moment the name of one of them is mentioned a hundred reasons are supplied to show that he could not possibly be elected.

So seldom have the majority of the cardinals now here met each other, and so widely do they differ in nationality and personality, that no organized movement in support of any one cardinal has thus far been practicable, nor, in fact, seriously attempted. This does not apply to the Italian cardinals, who, naturally, are well acquainted with each other. With their numerical strength the Italians could, if united, practically insure the election of a pontiff of their own choosing.

It is the disunion and rivalry among the Italian cardinals which, in fact, leaves the question of Leo's successor so open as to make one guess almost as good as another.

The rival claims of the leading Italian cardinals, so freely ventilated in the local press, are matters which are all-important in connection with the discussion of the conclave, because it is assumed, as a foregone conclusion, that the next occupant of the holy see will be an Italian. The foreign cardinals have shown no indication of opposition to this assumption, but however willing they are to honor an Italian, it is believed that serious differences among the Italians themselves on matters of political and religious opinion must be reconciled before one of them suitable to all sections can be elected.

An impression prevails in certain sections that, no matter what the verdict of the conclave may be, great changes are impending in the policy of the vatican, and within a year or two the new pope will no longer consider himself a prisoner in the vatican, but will, unlike Leo, leave his precincts when necessary.

LAST TRIBUTE TO POPE LEO.

Third Great Requiem Mass is Celebrated.

Rome, July 31.—The last tribute was paid to the late Pope Leo yesterday with the third great requiem mass celebrated in the Sistine chapel of the Vatican and the function was no less ceremonious and imposing than was the other two. While there was perhaps fewer persons present there was a greater display of gorgeous uniforms. Of the sixty-two cardinals now in Rome, all attended the mass except Cardinal Cretonio, prefect of the Congregation of Sacred Relics, who was ill.

The picture presented by the procession of cardinals, in violet robes and red capes bordered with ermine, escorted by noble guards in scarlet uniform and with drawn swords, the scene being softened by the clouds of incense and the chapel resounding with the strains of the incomparable Sistine choir singing "Libera Me Dol Mine," made those present feel as though lifted into another world.

In the churches of Rome yesterday began the offering of prayers to the Holy Ghost to assist and enlighten the cardinals to choose the right man to sit in the chair of St. Peter. During the conclave the blessed sacrament will be exposed in several churches for the special prayers of the faithful, with the same object in view.

CONVICTS AND MILITIA FIGHT.

Posses Meet Escaped Men and Desperate Battle Commences.

Placerville, Cal., Aug. 3.—Tonight shortly after 7 o'clock, Company H, of the California National Guards, met the escaped convicts on the Pleasanton Valley road, seven miles from Placerville, and a terrific battle ensued.

Private Gill, of Company H, was shot through the body from the right to the left shoulder, as the shooting began. The wound will prove fatal. When carried from the field by a relief force sent to the scene of the fight as soon as the news of the battle reached the neighboring posses, he stated that at least four of his comrades were hit by the convicts and probably killed.

It is not definitely known what happened to the desperadoes, but it is said that two were shot and dropped in the brush and are supposed to be dead.

Every available man and boy in the town of Placerville has been armed and all are now on the way to the scene of the fight.

The battlefield is at the base of a great hill adjoining the sit of the Grand Victory mine.

When the fighting began, Sheriff Bosquit was on the other side of the hill. With his men he started in the direction of the shots as soon as the firing commenced, and it is said is now in the thick of the affair.

The affair tonight overshadows anything of a like nature that has occurred in the west. At least sixty men are now participating in the fight. All sorts of rumors are floating into Placerville as to the result of the meeting between the soldiers and the convicts. The people are in a frenzy. Many of them have relatives at the front.

As the darkness has set in, it is impossible to tell just how many were killed or wounded. The thick underbrush renders it difficult to find a man if he drops helpless to the ground.

Sheriff's Son Slain.

Dallas Bosquit, the son of Sheriff Bosquit, is said to be among the slain, and a message by telephone says his body was found along the roadside. The greatest anxiety prevails here conman, Dill, who was unable to give any is known that six of them went into the brush after the convicts, and the only trace of them was the wounded clue concerning his companions. The convicts are believed to have taken refuge in the Grand Victory mine and there is talk of setting fire to it and driving out the desperate criminals.

Another account of the battle reached Brainard F. Smith, chief clerk of Folsome prison. He was notified that three of the attacking party were killed and that it was presumed two of the convicts were badly wounded. Two of the killed are presumed to be young Bosquit, Dill and one of the sheriff's posse whose name has not been ascertained. The scene of the shooting was near Cool, a small place a few miles outside of Placerville.

LEADER ARRESTED.

Man Who Led the Mob at Danville is Captured.

Danville, Ill., July 31.—The police yesterday arrested Winfred Baker, who, it is said, led the mob in its attack on the jail last Saturday night, and whom officers have been searching for since Sunday. He was found yesterday working in a small coal mine west of Danville. Baker came from Kentucky a few weeks ago. He was armed when arrested. Three more arrests were made yesterday in addition to that of the alleged leader, making seventeen in all. More warrants are still out and by Saturday night the officers expect to have twenty-five members of the mob in jail.

The city council last night passed resolutions commending Sheriff Whitlock for firing into the mob of lawless men that attacked the jail and thus defending the prisoners in his custody. The council, after adjournment went to inspect the city prison to see the damage wrought by the mob. When the aldermen entered the lockup in a body they frightened a negro prisoner into hysterics, as he was under the impression a mob had called for him. The prisoner could not be reassured and the aldermen gave up the inspection.

Health and beauty are the glories of perfect womanhood. Those who suffer constantly with weakness peculiar to their sex cannot retain their beauty. Preservation of pretty features and rounded figure is a duty women owe to themselves.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhœa, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and that prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues, and sleeplessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removes such troubles.

Case of this Prominent Chicago Woman Should Give Every Woman Confidence in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It affords me great pleasure, indeed, to add my testimonial to the great number who are today praising Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Three years ago I broke down from excessive physical and mental strain. I was unable to secure proper rest, also lost my appetite, and I became nervous and irritable to that my friends remarked it. I was unable to attend to my work. Our physician prescribed for me, but as I did not seem to improve he advised to go away. I could neither spare the time nor money, and was very much worried when, fortunately, one of my club friends called. She told me how she had been cured of ovarian troubles, and how like symptoms were to hers, seven bottles of your medicine cured her, and she insisted that I take some.

"I did so, and am glad that I followed her advice. Within six weeks I was a different woman, strong and robust in health, and have been so ever since.

"A number of my friends who have been troubled with ailments peculiar to our sex have taken your compound, and have also been greatly benefited." — MISS ELIZABETH [illegible], President of the St. Ruth's Court, Order of Foresters, Catholic. 270 Loomis St., Chicago, Ill.

What is left for the women of America, after reading such letters as we publish, but to believe. Don't some of you who are sick and miserable feel how wicked you are to remain so, making life a burden for yourself and your friends, when a cure is easily and inexpensively obtained? Don't you think it would pay to drop some of your prejudices and "Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound" which is better than all the doctors for cures?" Surely the experience of hundreds of thousands of women, whom the Compound has cured should convince all women.

Follow the record of this medicine, and remember that these letters of thousands of women whose letters are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, the great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want — a cure. Then — stick to the medicine that you know is the Best. Write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice.

is related that the dowager em- s of Russia once saw on her hus- 's table a document regarding a ical prisoner. On the margin ander the Third had written: rdon impossible; to be sent to ria." The czarina took up the pen, striking out the semicolon after possible," put it before the word. n the indorsement read: "Pardon; ossible to be sent to Siberia." The let it stand.

he late J. H. Shorthouse was af- ed with a terrible stammer, which used to say was a blessing in dis- se, having led him to use his pen his great instrument of expression. ere were times, however, when the mmer almost ceased, and he could k on interruptedly. One very strik- and touching habit grew up out of stammer. At "family prayers" he d his wife read all the prayers ether; because, in an attack of stam- ring came on, her gentle voice uld carry on the thread till he re- vered, and the knowledge of this pre- nted all nervousness on his part.

William Redmond's humorous and ointed interjections are becoming uite a feature of parliamentary life. he House of Commons was favored he other day with another laughable nterruption from Mr. Redmond. Banbury arose o perform his customary function of alking out the bill. The member for eckham succeeded in speaking for many minutes without saying any- hing, much to the disappointment of he Irish member, and started to con- clude his remarks with the words: 'For these reasons, Mr. Speaker——," when Mr. Redmond interrupted, amid a roar of laughter, with, "They ought to send you to the House of Lords."

What Was It?

Friarpoint, Miss., Aug. 3rd.—One of the strangest cases ever reported oc- curred here recently. The son of Mr. G. L. Butler was very ill. The doc- tor said he had some disease of the spinal cord, and treated him for two months, but he grew worse all the time, and finally the doctor told Mr. Butler that he did not know what was the trouble.

The boy would wake up in the night and say that he was dying. He would be nervous and trembling and want to run out of the house, saying he saw ugly things which frightened him.

His father was very much discour- aged till one day he saw a new rem- edy called Dodd's Kidney Pills adver- tised, and he at once bought some and began to give them to his boy.

"I feel it my duty to tell what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for my boy. All this remedy needs is a fair chance and it will speak for itself."

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, August 3, 1903.

One of the most attractive exhibits at the Iowa State Fair, which will be held in Des Moines August 21 to 29, will be the display made by the manu- facturing interests of Waterloo, backed by the Commercial Exchange and the Board of Trade of that city. It will be the first exhibit of the kind ever attempted at the State Fair. The purpose of it is to call attention to Waterloo as a leading center for the location of manufactories. It is pro- posed to exhibit in one large tent all the articles manufactured in Water- loo. As there are a number of manu- facturing establishments there, the variety of articles displayed will be great, and will include not only a wide number of farm implements but other manufactured products ranging from overalls to automobiles. A committee of leading business men of Waterloo recently waited on Sec- retary Simpson at Des Moines and perfected arrangements for the ex- hibit. It was at first thought that a permanent building would be erected. Owing to the fact that the time for the Fair is near at hand, it was conclud- ed to wait until next year before put- ting up a building. A large tent will be located a short distance west of the entrance to the amphitheater. It will be 30x250 feet and will be finely decorated. Among the attractions of the tent will be one of the finest bands of the country. Correspond- ence has been entered into with leading musical organizations of Chi- cago and other cities. A whole train- load of manufactured goods will be brought to the fair grounds from Wa- terloo and the train will be handsome- ly decorated with flags and banners. Automobile races will be arranged for on the race track by the Waterloo del- egation. It is the theory of the Water- loo business men that a good exhibit of their manufacturing interests will attract new manufactories to that city. One of the implements displayed will be the Twentieth Century manure spreader, the factory for which has re- cently been bought by Waterloo, capi- tal and moved to that city. It is not improbable that in another year, the example of Waterloo, which the fair management believes to be a good one, will be followed by other cities.

The annual report of the United States pension office for the Iowa-Ne- braska district, located in this city, has just been completed and signed by Pension Agent R. P. Clarkson. It cov- ers the fiscal year ending June 30, and shows that there has been expended for old soldiers' pensions from the Des Moines office $7,504,218.48. Of this amount $5,052,120.43 went to Iowa, $2,100,236.27 to Nebraska, and the remainder to pensioners scattered throughout other states in the union. Recently there has been a great emi- gration of Iowa soldiers to California, Colorado, Illinois, Missouri, Oklahoma, Oregon and South Dakota. To most of these states they have flocked to take up land claims on their rights. Hun- dreds of old soldiers are continually moving about, and accordingly con- tinue to keep their names on the pen- sion books in this city. At the pres- ent time, however, there are more leaving than are coming to the state. This is because of the movement north and west to take up land. Some have even gone into Canada. When in Canada, the pensioner has to be class- ified in the Washington agency and re- ceive his pay direct from there.

There is talk in some quarters that an effort will be made in the legisla- ture next winter to have a committee selected to visit and inspect the insti- tutions under the board of control. In support of this idea it is urged there has been no legislative visitation since the board of control law went into ef- fect, that large appropriations are being required for the institutions and that the legislature should not be con- tent with letting the board of control bear the entire responsibility for the institutions.

Judge G. S. Robinson of the board, in discussing the question of visita- tion, said: "I am sure the board would welcome the appointment of any fair- minded committee of visitation by the legislature. There is absolutely noth- ing to conceal in regard to the man- agement of the institutions and the board courts the fullest and fairest in- vestigation. The only regret I would have in a matter of that kind would be that it would hardly be possible to compare the condition of the institu- tions now with their condition before the board of control took charge, and thus the members of a committee would not be in position to know with entire accuracy what improvements had been made."

At a meeting of the republican state central committee at the Savery it was decided to call a conference of the Iowa delegation and the candidates on the state ticket about the first of Sep- tember. The exact date of the confer- ence will be left to State Chairman Spence. At the conference the issues to be considered in the fall campaign will be discussed. Senators Allison and Dolliver and all the members of congress, as well as other prominent republicans aside from the candidates, will be invited to attend.

According to a story sent out from Sioux City, A. C. Smith, of Storm Lake, and T. W. Purcell, of Hampton, are candidates for the offices respec- tively of state printer and binder, and are seeking election at the coming general assembly. Both Mr. Smith and Mr. Purcell are well known newspaper men and politicians.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. is the result of arrested physiology of the stomach, liver or bowels, and is one of the first symptoms of constipation. Those who suffer with sick headache frequently resort to the use of headache powders, irritating cathartics, which it is true do relieve headache by dulling the sensations of the sympathetic nerves, but such medicines never remove the cause, and to be candid, are really dangerous, death having been known to occur directly from their use.

A Business Change.

A deal was closed the first of the week whereby E. P. Schaefer becomes owner of the stock of merchandise and building formerly owned by Hunteman & Co. The invoicing of the stock began on Wednesday and the new proprietor will assume charge of the business at once. Ben Kaste will manage the business for Schaefer. We regret to see this firm retire from business here, but welcome the new one. Hunteman & Co. have enjoyed a lucrative business and have numerous friends. E. P. Schaefer has been in business here before, and he, no doubt, will make a success of this undertaking as he has done in his past business experiences here,

We understand that Mr. Hunteman will move to Minnesota to reside but have not learned what Mr. Lau will do. Whatever they undertake we wish them success.

The whole team and then some.

Byers admits that he struck at the ball that hit him in the Klemme-Garner game and in order to convince our readers that Captain Kluckhohn was right in his objection to the umpire's decision we publish the rule as it reads in the Spaulding's Base Ball guide:

The Batsman is Out.

RULE 46. SEC. 7. If, while attempting a third strike, the ball touches any part of the batsman's person, in which case base-runners occupying bases shall return as prescribed in RULE 50, SEC. 5.

This was not an intentional erroron the umpires part. Simply a mistake. This decision advanced the Garner base runner one base which accounts for their one score.

The city council met on Monday evening and transacted some business of interest to the public. After having allowed a number of bills the council proceeded to the election of a councilman to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. F. Koerner. They selected H. A. Sweigard to fill the vacancy. Mr. Sweigard will make a painstaking alderman and we consider the election a wise one.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Gilter Franklin, aged 49 years, died at Dakota City. Mr. Franklin was born in Illinois when it was a territory. He was the contemporary of Jefferson, Adams, Lafayette, King George III and Napoleon Bonaparte. His wife, with whom he has lived 71 years, still survives at the age of 92. They must have been one of the oldest couples in the state.

Mrs. Moses Pearlstein, of West Branch, ten miles east of Iowa City, was killed in a runaway near West Branch. The horse became frightened as she raised her parasol and ran into a barb wire fence and threw Mr. and Mrs. Pearlstein out. The former will possibly die. Mrs. Pearlstein struck a tree in her fall and was horribly crushed and torn about the breast. She lived one hour. The horse ran a three-foot board through its chest and died. The couple were married only last week. The groom is a prominent business man of West Branch and the bride was from Burlington.

Charles Holada, who confessed complicity in the murder of James Gallaugher at River Junction, is finding penitentiary life more than irksome. He writes to Court Reporter Ralph Otto, of Iowa City, as follows: "There is no one here to say a word to you when you feel bad. I have taken more than one cry since I have been here (Fort Madison.) I wish I could get out on parole. I am sorry that I didn't stand trial. I might as well be dead as here." Holada acknowledged that he had taken part in a plot to murder his benefactor, but in his letter to Mr. Otto, the notorious Lothario writes thus: "It is pretty tough when you think you have got to stay here for life—and what for? Nothing."

ELECTRIC ROAD FOR GREENFIELD

Cherry's Abandoned Survey May be Used.

Des Moines, July 31.—Announcement has been made by railroad attorneys this morning that Chicago capital was being interested behind a scheme for using the old Cherry survey of the Des Moines & Southern, which the Rock Island has abandoned after its purchase from F. W. Cherry through Stickney and the C. B. & Q.

A company is now said to be forming for the purpose of building a line of electric railroad from Winterset to Greenfield via the western route, located and purchased by F. W. Cherry. The company, it is said, proposes to build the railroad at once, connecting with the new branch of the Des Moines interurban railway company at Winterset. The proposal is to operate the two lines in conjunction, having a direct electric connection from Des Moines with Winterset and Greenfield.

There are twenty-six or twenty-seven miles of road to build. The Rock Island has announced that it will build to Greenfield by way of a southwest connection, running through the townships of Lincoln, Webster, Grand River and Lee. Cherry's survey, it was declared, ran to Greenfield from a northwesterly direction, going through the townships of Douglas, Jackson, Harrison and Grove. This line was declared by the Rock Island officials to run too close to its main Omaha line to tap a fresh territory. Accordingly, after buying the right of way, the Rock Island decided to use about eight miles of it running west along the section line from Winterset and then abandon the remainder of the road at the expense of the right of way which had already been purchased. The Greenfield extension of the Rock Island will run more than fifteen miles south of the main line to Omaha.

The real truth of the purchase of the Des Moines & Southern by the Rock Island has just been given out. President A. B. Stickney of the Chicago Great Western bought the road from Promoter F W. Cherry. He then sold it to the C. B. &. Q., which road in turn sold the line to the Rock Island. The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific agents in the deal were forced to pay a spot cash sum for the line.

HAS BULLET IN HEAD.

Theodore Koch of Dike is in a Critical Condition.

Dike, July 30.—Theodore Koch, a young man 23 or 24 years of age who has been living with his brother, four miles east of this town, is in a critical condition as the result of a bullet wound in his forehead. Whether the fatal wound was self-inflicted or whether caused by an accident, is unknown, but the suicide theory is generally accepted. Young Koch was employed about the farm of his brother at 9 o'clock, when he was observed by a neighbor who passed. No one else was at home at the time. Later he was found in his room in an unconscious condition with a bullet wound in his nose and forehead. He was brought to town and the physicians are doing what they can to save his life.

WIDOW GETS A FORTUNE.

Was Forwarded Check For Pension Accumulating Since the War.

Des Moines, August 3.—A check for $2,717.80 was forwarded yesterday from the pension office here to Jane C. R. Cameron of Davenport, a soldier's widow. The amount is in payment for a pension which was applied for 1862 but which was not granted by the government till recently.

The soldier for whose service in the civil war the pension is granted died for and one-half years ago after waiting more than the average lifetime for his services to be rewarded. This was James Cameron, who was a member of Company B, Forty-ninth New York infantry. Directly at the close of the war, in 1864, he applied for a pension, but because some satisfaction concerning his record, could not be secured, the pension was not granted. In the meantime the soldier died and his widow has grown aged. But once decided that it is right to act Uncle Sam does things right, and he has now paid the widow all of the pension money which has been accumulating during these many years.

The large sum represents a pension of $4 per month from January 29, 1863, to April 3, 1844; $8 per month from then to December 4, 1891, and $10 per month from then till 1899, the date of the husband's death.

The average lifetime is thirty-five years, and after the war Mr. Cameron lived longer than that. Now the large sum has come to his widow and will undoubtedly be a happy surprise to her. This is the second check of this nature which has been sent from the local pension office recently.

GRATITUDE OF INDIANS

Incident of the Early Day Settlement of Iowa.

Brooklyn, Ia., Aug. 3.—Prof. Parker spoke before the Teachers' institute at this place and in the course of his address recounted a bit of unwritten history that should be of interest to all residents of central Iowa. Prof. Parker, who has been connected with the historical department of Grinnell college and the State university for forty years or more, believes more of the history of the Indians once occupying Iowa territory should be recorded. In the course of his research along this line he has discovered an anecdote that is worthy a place in all school histories.

Written history records the Indians were at first very reluctant to give up the strip of territory now comprised by Hardin, Marshall, Tama, Poweshiek, Jasper, Mahaska, Keokuk, Wapello, Appanoose and Davis counties, but finally yielded by the treaty of 1842, but nowhere in the records state why this reluctance. Professor Parker, from letters and county histories, has unearthed the following story which he told the institute:

Prior to 1840 General J. M. Street had been made Indian agent for Iowa at Agency City, now near Ottumwa. General Street was an honest and true real friend to the Indians, which the traders were not. Street was trying to teach the Indians the ways of the white man, to farm and be self-supporting while the trader wanted to keep the redskins wandering in the pursuit of game that they might be exploited for the traders' gain. The Indians loved him who was their friend. When Street died, so great was the love of the Indians for their friend that they offered to the widow with an offer to give her a square mile of land and to each of her ten children a half section of land if she would allow the body of Mr. Street to be buried there, within Agency City, upon Indian soil instead of being taken back east. Mrs. Street accepted the offer.

In 1842, when Governor Chambers came to negotiate with the Sacs and Foxes, through their chiefs Keokuk, Wapello, Keokuk and Poweshiek, for the purchase of the land in central Iowa, the Indians finally consented to all the proposals of the treaty with the single exception that they insisted upon reserving the square mile to the Street family. Chief Keokuk was a powerful warrior with a strong appetite for fire water, yet a man of honor and truth always, declared heroically in the council, in his speeches, "There lies the best friend we ever had. We will not cheat his family so long as a single one lives among our people."

Governor Chambers was astonished. The sons of Street came forward and made an offer to relinquish their claim and let the Indians still hold out for the square mile for Mrs. Street. But Chief Keokuk, the orator of the assembly, was delegated to close the negotiations because he seemed to be the only compromiser among the Indians. He stuck for the square mile. Finally Governor Chambers asked: "Well, what do you want to reserve this land for? Why do you want to reserve this land for? Why do you want to reserve this land here," declared Keokuk, sweeping his arm around the spot where he and his people stood. "The United States government paid $2,500 on agency buildings which are now standing on this ground." "Will you take $2,500 out of the money yet due us for our land," answered Governor Chambers, and this was done.

Such was the magnificent generosity of Indian gratitude and the loyalty of a friend that stood in the way of the fulfillment of the treaty of 1842. Old Chief Keokuk, who afterward died far from his home at Agency City, was carried back by the remnant of his warriors at his dying request to be buried by the side of his beloved white friend, General Street, and his people moved out west in Indian territory.

BY AMELIA E. BARR

Author of "The Bow of Orange Ribbon," "I, Thou and the Other One," "The Maid of Malden Lane," Etc.

(Copyright, 1901, by Dodd, Mead & Company. All rights reserved.)

"My dear Martha, I did not think of telling you this just yet, and especially to-day, but the words were at my lips, and then they were out, without my leave or license. Now there is nothing for it, but letting you know, plump and plain, that you and I, in our gathering years, must up and out of England. Oliver Cromwell is dying; when he is in the grave, what? Either Stuart, or civil war. If it is the Stuart, my head will be wanted; and as for fighting for Lambert, or even Fairfax, or Sir Harry Vane, I will not do it—verily, I will not! I have fought under Cromwell; I will fight under no less a general, and in no less a quarrel than he led in. That is settled. You said Martha, 'for better, or for worse.'"

She did not answer, and he dropped her hand and continued, "I will never force thee, Martha, not one step. If thou lovest England better than me——"

"I don't! I don't, Israel! I love nothing, I love nobody better than Israel Swaffham. I was thinking of Swaffham."

"I shall sign the sale of it to Cym- in as soon as Cromwell dies. I and hou can build another Swaffham; hou art but fifty, and my years are ome short of sixty. We are in the rime of life yet."

"I am forty-eight—not quite that— srael; and Swaffham was very up nd down, and scarce a cupboard in . Wherever you go, Israel, I will go; our God is my God, and your country all be mine."

"I was sure of that, Martha. God ve you, dearest! And any country here your home is built, and your ildren dwell, is a good country; be- des which, this New World is really land of milk and honey and sun- ine. Tonbert and Will could not be ught back here with an earldom. ment of affirmation; he could not speak.

After the death of his beloved daughter Elizabeth, the life of Cromwell was like the ending of one of those terrible Norse Sagas with the additional element of a great spiritual conflict. Israel Swaffham was constantly with him. The two men were friends closer than brothers. They had loved each other when boys, and their love had never known a shadow.

"But I am in great trouble about him," said Israel to his wife. "It can not last. Since Lady Claypole's death he eats not, drinks not, sleeps not; his strong, masculine handwriting, the very mirror of his courageous spirit, has become weak and trembling. I can tell you one thing, Martha, a thinking soul is always sorrowful enough, but when it is a great soul like Oliver's, and it is wretched for any cause, then every thought draws blood."

Cromwell had hoped that his great afflictions would bring his friends back to his side; but envy, hatred and greedy ambition are not to be conciliated. Even at this time Ludlow, Lambert, Vane, Harrison, Marten—all the men whom he had trusted, and who had trusted him, stood aloof from his sorrow; and their sullen indifference wounded him to the quick. His unfinished work drove at him like a taskmaster. He must make great haste, for he knew that the night was coming.

"I am glad he is back in Whitehall," said Martha to her husband, when she heard of the change. "I remember something that Jane said about that old, gloomy Court; he will get better in London.

"I know not, Martha," answered Israel, sadly; "Fairfax was with him to-day, and he might as well have drawn his sword on his old friend—judgments on them. And there is one more charge for you; when all is over, speak to the army for me. Tell the men to remember me while they live. Truly, I think they will. Now let me lean on you, Israel. I am going to my last hard fight."

"Now let me lean on you, Israel."

When he reached his room, he stood a moment and looked wistfully round it. It was but a narrow chamber, but large enough for the awfully close, near conflict that he had to fight in it. For ten terrible days and nights the anguish of the struggle went on unceasingly, sometimes the great Combatant being "all here" and full of faith and courage, sometimes far down the shoal of life and reason, and wandering uneasily through bygone days of battle and distress and darkness.

He had turned to face his last enemy on the 24th of August, and on the 30th there was such a tempest as had never before been seen in England. Whole forests were laid on the ground; traffic was swept from the roads and the streets, and the ships from the stormy seas. The chambers of Whitehall were filled with the roar of the great winds. The guards leaned on their arms, praying or talking solemnly together on the prodigy of the storm.

Israel sat near the men, and heard something of what they said. Presently Dr. Verity joined him. They said a few words about the storm, their words were emphasized by the falling and crashing of trees outside the windows, and by thunder and lightning and driven torrents of rain; and then Dr. Verity said in a low voice, "He knows nothing of this—he is still as death; he barely breathes; he is unconscious; where is he, Israel?"

"Not quite gone—not quite here—— Is he watching the battle of elements in the middle darkness?" Then for some minutes only the pealing thunder and the howling winds made answer. But John Verity was thinking, and as soon as there was a moment's lull in the uproar, he said, "Oliver is no stranger to the Immortals, Israel. They have heard of his fame. In their way they have seen and helped him already. While his body lies yonder, without sense or motion, where is his spirit? Is it now having its last fight with its great enemy? Israel, I was thinking of what Isaiah says, about hell being moved to meet Lucifer at his coming."

"But, oh, John, John Verity, all this great life is to be a failure. All our travail and toil and suffering to be a failure!"

"No, indeed! There is no failure. No, no, nothing of the kind! We have ushered in a new era of Freedom. We have made a breakwater against tyranny. Kings will remember forevermore that they have a joint in their necks. Oliver has done, to the last tittle, the work he was sent to do. It is Oliver the Conqueror! Not Oliver the Failure. Remember, Israel, it is not incumbent on us to finish the work; we can leave it in God's hands. And though we have to leave it behind us incomplete, God will use it some way and somewhere, and the news will find us, even in heaven, and sweeten our happy labors there. I believe this, I do with all my soul."

On Thursday night, the 2d of September, being the ninth day of his hard fight, he bade his wife and children "a good-bye"; but into this sacred scene not even the tenderest imagination may intrude. Afterward he appeared to withdraw himself entirely within the shadow of the Almighty, waiting the signal for his release in a peaceful, even a happy mood, and saying in a more and more labored voice, "Truly God is good—indeed He is—He will not—leave. My work is done—but God will be—with His people." Some one offered him a drink to ease his restlessness and give him sleep, but he refused it. "It is not my design to drink or to sleep," he said; "my design is to make what haste I can to be gone." The last extremity indeed, but one full of that longing desire of the great apostle "to depart and be with Christ, which is far better."

The next morning, the 3d of September, his Fortunate Day, "the day of Dunbar Field and Worcester's laureate wreath," he became speechless as the sun rose, and so he lay quiet until between three and four in the afternoon, when he was heard to give a deep sigh. The physician in attendance said softly, "He is gone!" And some knelt to pray, and all wept, but unmindful of his tears, Israel Swaffham cried in a tone of triumph:

"Thou good Soldier of God, farewell! Thou hast fought a good fight, thou hast kept the faith, and there is laid up for thee a crown greater than England's crown, a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give thee."

But Dr. Verity went slowly to the beloved Dead; he put tenderly back his long gray hair, damp with the dew of death, and closed the eyelids over his darkened eyes, and kissed him on his brow, and on his lips; and as he turned sorrowfully away forever, whispered only two words:

"Vale Cromwell!"

(The End.)

TWENTY KILLED BY EXPLOSION

Frightful Loss of Life and Property By Blowing Up of Powder Magazine.

MANY HOMES ARE WRECKED

Houses Near Scene of Disaster Go Down as If Built of Cards—Workmen Poured Nitric Acid on Floor, Thinking It Water.

Lowell, Mass., July 30.—Two small gun-powder magazines, situated in the very midst of the humble residences of fifty mill operatives, exploded yesterday with a frightful concussion, and the resultant wave of death cut off the lives of more than a score of human beings and injured nearly fifty others. Half a dozen men who were loadinig kegs of powder from one of the magazines were blown to pieces; four boys 200 yards away were killed by the force of the explosion, and fourteen frame houses within a radius of 400 yards went down as if they had been built of cards. Seven of these houses immediately caught fire, probably from the kitchen stoves, and were completely consumed. At least three persons were caught in the ruins and burned to death, while seven or eight others, who were rescued, died subsequently of their injuries.

It is estimated that seventy separate pieces of property, including those already mentioned, were destroyed, while the force of the explosion wrecked windows for five or six miles around, and its thunder could be heard more than fifty miles away.

The magazines were the property of the United States Cartridge company of this city, but fortunately were situated more than a mile away from the factory itself. They were built of brick about 10 feet high, with a rounded roof of corrugated iron. They were constructed some thirty years ago, in what was then a broad open field on the banks of the Concord river. During the last decade small wooden dwellings have gradually sprung up in the vicinity, crowding nearer and nearer until they almost completely surrounded them, except on the river side, the nearest house being scarcely fifty feet away.

One of the magazines was just within the roadside fence while the other was about 100 feet behind it near the banks of the river. Both magazines ordinarily contained two or three tons of gun powder in tin kegs, each keg being about eighteen inches high and a foot in diameter. The company has for some time been desirous of strengthening the floor of the magazine nearest the street and this morning eight men, three of them employes of the company, three expressmen and two carpenters were sent there with three large express teams to take out the powder and mend the floor. Two of the wagons had been loaded and the other was almost full when at six minutes past 9 oclock the explosion occurred.

It was a long time before the actual cause of the explosion could be ascertained. It was thought at first that everyone within a radius of fifty feet of the magazines had been killed, but later it was found that Clarendon Goodwin, the foreman of the men who were loading the powder on the wagons, had survived together with one of his assistants, Amadee Boulanger, and this afternoon the latter was seen in the hospital.

He said that the men went down to the magazine nearest the street to fix the floor and after the wagons had been loaded with the powder which was in the magazine, it was discovered that a can of nitroglycerine, which was stored in the magazine, was leaking. Mr. Goodwin picked up what he thought was a jug of water and began pouring it on to the nitroglycerine with the idea of diluting it and washing it up. As soon as the fluid from the jug struck the floor, he found that it was nitric acid. The floor at once began to smoke and when the men saw it they rushed from the building, but had not gone ten feet when the explosion occurred.

This magazine was the first to go up, followed immediately by the gun powder in the three wagons, and several seconds later by the second magazine.

The entire catastrophe, however, occurred in the space of scarcely five seconds, but in that time the surrounding property was swept as if a small volcano had broken forth in its midst. Every house within two hundred yards collapsed. Trees were blown down, the grass within a hundred yards was mowed as if by a lawn mower, while bricks from the two magazines were hurled far across the river and all over the neighborhood.

Lowell, Mass., July 31.—A long line of hearses, moving slowly through the streets yesterday, was a pathetic reminder of Wednesday's terrible catastrophe at Wigginsville, when an explosion of tons of nitro-glycerine, dynamite and gun powder snuffed out nearly a score of lives, painfully injured more than double that number of persons, and scattered half a hundred buildings over a space of several acres. The number of dead stands at 19, but it may be increased to 21 at any moment by the death of two of the ten victims now at St. John's hospital.

SECRECY IN MARRIAGE AND ITS ANNULMENT

Michigan Judge Grants Decree Releasing Governor Bliss' Niece From Bonds of Wedlock.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 3.—The fact has become public that the marriage of Miss Fanny Ide, the governor's niece, and Robert Y. Larned of Lansing has been secretly annulled by Judge Rohnert, the decree being granted on a cross-bill filed by Larned. The husband said he had gone through a formal marriage with Miss Ide Oct. 2, 1902, at Saginaw, but that she refused to recognize the marriage and left him in New York a few days later. Larned claimed that his consent to the marriage had been obtained by fraud and deceit.

Miss Ide filed her original bill Dec. 18 last, but it was suppressed. In it she said her consent to the marriage was given at the earnest solicitation of a near relative, who is believed to be Governor Bliss. On numerous occasions she had begged this relative to be permitted to break the engagement to young Larned, but was refused. During the week previous to the marriage she again entreated to be freed from her promise, but the relative is alleged to have argued, entreated and threatened her in such a manner as to bring her to a high state of nervous excitement."

Fresh Effort Made to Have Him Returned for Trial.

New York, Aug. 3.—Col. T. C. Campbell, who has had charge of the prosecution of Gov. Goebel's alleged assassins and who for three years had lived in the Kentucky mountains preparing the evidence against the conspirators, has left for Frankfort, Ky., to obtain from Gov. Beckham a request to Gov. Durbin to deliver Taylor to the Kentucky authorities. In case this demand is refused a mandamus will be sought before the Supreme court of the United States. Should one be granted and disobeyed, contempt proceedings will be begun.

The Keeping Quality of Butter.

Dairymen and creamerymen throughout the country will be interested in a bulletin entitled, "The Keeping Quality of Butter," just issued by the Iowa Experiment Station at Ames. It is the work of Prof. G. L. McKay and Mr. C, Larson. Some of the subjects discussed are as follows. Sources of Deterioration in Butter, Cause of Rancidity, Defects in Butter, Effect of Working Upon Water Content of Butter, Purity of Well Water Methods of Purifying Wash Water, etc. It contains numerous tables reporting results from actual experiments conducted and several cuts.

From the results of the investigations it appears that much of the deterioration in butter is due to the presence of bacteria in wash water. Practical methods of removing these organisms are described and discussed.

The blluetin is No. 71 of the Station and can be had without cost by addressing a request to Prof. C. F. Curtiss, Director of the Experiment Station, Ames, Iowa.

POPE PIUS X NOW SUPREME HEAD OF ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

Giuseppe Sarto, Patriarch of Venice, Chosen by the Conclave of Cardinals on the Seventh Ballot---New Pontiff is 68 Years Old.

Cardinal Giuseppe Sarto, patriarch of Venice, has been elected Pope. Thus is the prophecy of his predecessor fulfilled and a priest 68 years old, native of Italy, has donned the robes of the pontifex maximus of the Roman Catholic church.

Cardinal Macchi, secretary of apostolic briefs, announced to the crowd assembled before St. Peter's Aug. 4 that Sarto had been chosen, and that he had taken the name of Pius X. The troops on duty immediately lined up on the piazza and presented arms. Then Pope Pius X. appeared inside the balcony of the basilica and blessed the populace amid the acclamations of the enormous crowd assembled on the piazza.

Announcement of Sarto's election was received with wild enthusiasm on the part of thousands of persons who had gathered outside St. Peter's. The scene within the basilica when the Pope pronounced his benediction was one of great excitement. Thousands of persons within the cathedral cheered and waved their hats.

While Prince Chigi, master of the conclave, was drawing up the official act of the election and acceptance of the newly elected Pope, the latter, surrounded by his friends, disappeared into a small room near the altar, where he donned the white robes of his office. He was assisted by his conclavist, who first knelt and kissed his master's hand and thus received the first apostolic blessing given by Pius X.

As the new pontiff stepped from behind the altar, the only touch of color about him being his red and gold shoes, he really seemed to be the embodiment of his holy office. His face was pale and softened by emotion. He paused a moment as he came before the expectant cardinals and then seated himself on the throne with a hurried movement, as though he had suddenly grown weak. His back was to the altar and he was enthroned to serve the so-called "first obedience" of the cardinals. They came forward, one by one, some calm and smiling, others sober and noncommittal, while still others found difficulty, even at that hour, in concealing their disappointment. All kissed his hand and foot, and he saluted each on the cheek with the kiss of peace. Then all broke into the "Te Deum" with such effect that scarcely an eye was dry.

Pius X. thereupon rose, and in a voice at first tremulous, but gradually becoming full and firm, administered the papal blessing to all the members of the sacred college. It was received with bowed and uncovered heads. the fisherman's ring not yet having been found, a new one designed by Camerlengo Oreglia was placed on the pontiff's finger as a symbol of renewed power and evidence that the Catholic church once more has a sovereign head.

Meanwhile masons and carpenters had been busy breaking down doors, so that the cardinal deacons, together with the master of ceremonies, the conclavists and many others might proceed to the balcony of St. Peter's. The populace, waiting in the piazza, had already seen the little thread of smoke, almost transparent, which told what to expect, so that when the windows on the balcony slowly opened and the great gleaming cross was seen the impatience became extreme.

Slowly Cardinal Machi, secretary of the congregation of apostolic briefs, advanced and exclaimed in a loud voice:

"Annuntio vobis gaudium magnum habemus papem eminentissiumum et Reverendissimum Dominum Cardinalem, Joseph Sarto, qui sibi imposuit nomen Pium X."

Then the bells of St. Peter boomed out as did those of all the churches of Rome, giving the glad news to the world.

As Cardinal Macchi returned to the Sistine chaped after having performed his pious duty, the new pope rose and an effort to make some kind of procession was made, but Pius X. was literally carried in triumph to his cell, followed by a great concourse and preceded by the cross. He was stopped every step or two by those anxious to kiss his ring and receive the papal blessing, which Sarto accorded with great benignity and patience.

When he arrived at the door of his cell the pope turned and raising his hands gave, in a voice almost suffocated with emotion, his benediction to the assembly, which received it on bended knees.

After a short rest, imposed by the fatigue and emotion of his election, Pius X. joined his court in the ducal hall for the solemn benediction which he was about to give the people of Rome. Although to ordinary eyes the confusion was as great as ever, to those practiced in the mysteries of the vatican order was coming out of chaos, and the bearing of all in the presence of the pope was much more formal. The babel of voices sank as his approach, while none addressed him unless he spoke first.

The procession traversed many noble halls until it reached the window looking into St. Peter's. From below rose a murmur of voices, which, although subdued by distance, denoted the presence of a large concourse of people.

The pope was seen to grow pale and then, turning to Cardinal Bacidieri, who stood beside him, he said:

"Now, I understand the emotion Pope Leo always showed when going into St. Peter's to have the eyes of a great crowd focused on him. It is almost terrifying."

Standing forward in the window, the others having fallen back, he deliberately controlled himself and looked across the great basilica. Crossing himself, Sarto raised his hand and in a voice palpably tremulous he said as soon as the cries from below gave an opportunity:

"Auditorium nostrum in nomine Domini."

To this came in reply from thousands of voices the cry:

"Qui fecit coelum et terram!"

In a thrilling voice the pope responded:

"Sit nomen Domini benedictum!"

Then raising himself to his full height and leaning forward as much as possible he intoned:

"Benedicat vos omnipotens Deus," etc., which called forth such applause that several minutes elapsed before the pontiff could retire. He then drew back and the procession re-forming, turned to the ducal hall. At the moment of leaving the window Pius X. turned to Mgr. Bisleti, who happened to be beside him, and said:

'I shall never again feel just the same emotion."

POPE PIUS X., NEW PONTIFEX MAXIMUS.

SKETCH OF THE NEW POPE.

Born at Riesi, Italy, in 1835—A Man of Liberal Views.

Giuseppe Sarto, the new pope, was born in Riesi, diocese of Treviso, northern Italy, June 2, 1835, and was created cardinal by Leo XIII. at the consistory of June 12, 1893, receiving the title of S. Bernado delle Terma. He is also patriarch of Venice since June, 1893, and Bishop of Mantua. He belongs to the ecclesiastical congregations of bishops and regulars, sacred rites, indulgences and sacred relics.

Pope Pius X. is very learned in the ecclesiastical doctrines, is modest, energetic, a good administrator and organizer, a patron of the arts, and his seriousness always has been proverbial. He has been known for many years as one of the greatest preachers in the church. Pius X. enjoyed great popularity in his diocese, and was honored by all for his purity, for the strict uprightness of his life and for liberal ideas. He is a modest and agreeable man, highly cultivated, kind-hearted, still strong and robust in spite of his 68 years. He has never taken much part in the political and public life of the church but has divided his time between study and good works.

Although most faithful to the holy see, he was presented to the king and queen of Italy in Venice. He may be considered among the more liberal members of the Italian episcopate and sacred college. He is rather timid in expressing an opinion. It is said that Leo XIII. always thought very highly of him and sided with him on one occasion when Sarto disapproved of Rampolla's policy.

Maud Howe, daughter of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who resided in Rome for many years, writing on "Who Will Be the Next Pope?" in the Outlook for the week dated Aug. 1, says of Cardinal Sarto:

"He is one of the most popular of the cardinals and is much beloved by the Venetians. He is a prudent, corpeace between the opposing factions directly opposing the policy of Leo XIII., he is noted for his abstinence from all aggressive action, and his influence is always exerted to keep the peace between the opposing factions. When King Umberto went to Venice to meet the emperor of Germany, Cardinal Sarto announced his intention of making a state visit to the king. A hint was sent him from the vatican that his course might not be a wise one and that he had best be absent from Venice at the time of the king's visit. The decision was left, however, with Sarto, who carried out his original plan, made his state visit to the king , and, it is said mentioned the fact that the vatican had advised against it. Personally he is a handsome man, carrying his 68 years lightly. Strong, modest, disliking the intrigues and the ceremonies of the papal court, he rarely comes to Rome and is content to remain in his beloved Venice, the friend of the people and of the clerics alike. For Italy his election would be fortunate; he has many well-wishers in the Roman world, where, his friends hold, he is too little seen."

Supreme Court Sustains the Foot-Ease Trade-Mark.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Justice Laughlin in Supreme Court has granted a permanent injunction with costs against Paul B. Hudson and others of New York City, restraining them from making or selling a foot powder which the court declares is an imitation and infringement on "Foot-Ease," now so largely advertised and sold over the country. The owner of the trade-mark "Foot-Ease," is Allen S. Olmsted, of Le Roy, N. Y., and the decision in this suit upholds his trade-mark and renders all parties liable who fraudulently attempt to profit by the extensive "Foot-Ease" advertising, in placing on the market the spurious and similar appearing preparation involved in the case. This the court declares was designed in imitation and infringement of the genuine "Foot-Ease." Similar suits will be brought against others who are now infringing on the Foot-Ease trade-mark rights.

DISASTER AT BALL PARK.

Overcrowded Walk Gives Way and Hundreds Are Carried Down.

Philadelphia, Aug. 10.—Four persons are dead, at least twelve are thought to be fatally injured and fully 150 others hurt, some seriously, as the result of an accident which occurred Saturday at the Philadelphia National League base ball park. A board walk which overhung the west field bleachers fell to the street, carrying 200 spectators.

Two games were scheduled between Boston and Philadelphia, and the game drew over 12,000 persons to the ball park. The accident occurred at 5:40 o'clock, while the Boston team was at bat in the fourth inning of the second game, and was directly due to a quarrel between two drunken men in the street. The National league stands are built of steel and brick, the brick wall extending entirely around the grounds. At the top of the left field seats, and extending from the grand stand to the end of the bleachers, there was a walk about three feet wide which overhung the street. It was this walk that gave way under the heavy weight.

Men who had been standing on the walk were attracted by a disturbance in the street. They leaned over the side of the railing to see what was the trouble, and this drew the attention of other spectators seated on the top rows of the bleachers. Then occurred what is seen almost every day at a ball game—a rush to see what other spectators were looking at. The walk became overcrowded, and without a moment's warning two hundred feet of it fell to the sidewalk, twenty feet below, carrying all who were on it. There were probably three thousand persons sitting in the left field bleachers, and the roar made by the falling timber created a panic. Instantly the spectators rose en masse and made a rush down the stand and into the playing field. It was one great black wave of humanity. Men and boys climbed over one another in their effort to escape from the grounds. Not knowing what had occurred, the ball players and others tried to stop the mad rush, but they were swept aside in their unsuccessful efforts, and several persons were hurt in the crush.

Outside the scene was one of horror. For an entire block on Fifteenth street, from Huntington street to Lehigh avenue, men and boys were lying writhing in agony. Some were buried under the wreckage, others stretched out in Fifteenth street, on the car tracks. Some lay unconscious, others were rolling over, suffering great pain, and others attempted to get up and walk, only to fall again. The 10,000 persons within the grounds left the place and crowded about the injured. Indescribable confusion reigned for a time because of the great crowd.

It is estimated that over a hundred persons who were slightly injured went direct to their homes. An examination of the walk after the wreck showed many of the wooden supports which extended three feet beyond the walk to be rotten. They were about two and a half inches thick and about six inches wide. They broke off flush with the wall.

ADOPT PLANS OF SEVERITY.

Macedonia Revolution is Growing Serious.

Constantinople, Aug. 7.—Consular advices which were received here yesterday from Monastir indicated that the situation in Macedonia was constantly growing worse.

At a meeting of the ministers it has been decided, therefore, to adopt measures of extreme severity in order to suppress the revolution. It is reported that Albanian troops will be employed, in which event massacres are almost inevitable.

The Bulgarian Exarch was summoned to the Yildiz palace Wednesday and urged to make a final appeal to his flock to deliver up their arms and thereby avoid bloodshed.

The menacing attitude of the Kurds in Armenia is causing increased alarm at Erzeroum, Bitlis and Kharput. It is asserted in some quarters that the authorities are secretly arming the Kurds while endeavoring to convict the Armenians of revolutionary intentions.

INHABITANTS FLEE.

Reign of Terror In The Province of Turkey—Reports Conflicting.

Constantinople, Aug. 8.—News received here as to the extent of the Bulgarian revolutionary movement in the village of Monastir is conflicting. In consular dispatches from Monastir which were received this morning the opinion is expressed that the insurrection broke out a fortnight earlier than its chiefs intended and before the bands were in readiness, presumably because the leaders were disconcerted by the active preventitive measures adopted by the authorities.

The Bulgarian inhabitants in a number of villages have fled to the mountains for refuge.

HONOR M'KINLEY'S MEMORY.

People of Hawaii Now Propose Lighthouse Instead of Park.

Honolulu, Aug. 6.—The proposal to establish a public park in or near this city as a memorial to the late President McKinley, will probably be abandoned. Instead of this tribute to the chief executive during whose administration the people of Hawaii became citizens of the United States, it is now planned to erect a McKinley memorial lighthouse at the entrance of Honolulu harbor. This would be a prominent situation from both land and sea, besides being of great practical utility. This project meets with much favor and is likely to be carried into effect.

U. S. SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA

Recommends Pe-ru-na

For Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Catarrh of the Stomach is Generally Called Dyspepsia — Something to Produce Artificial Digestion is Generally Taken.

Hence, Pepsin, Pancreatin and a Host of Other Digestive Remedies Has Been Invented.

These Remedies Do Not Reach the Seat of the Difficulty, Which is Really Catarrh.

EX. U. S. Senator M. C. Butler from South Carolina, was Senator from that state for two terms. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., from Washington, D. C., says:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine besides a good tonic."—M. C. Butler.

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh. Peruna does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods.

Peruna has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Peruna cures it. If catarrh has fastened itself in the throat or bronchial tubes, Peruna cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Peruna cures it, as well in this location as in any other.

Peruna is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Peruna cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

Klemme met their Waterloo in to-day's game here. The principal features of the game were hard hitting and poor fielding. Any old time that Klemme bats out 10 scores and yet loses a game something is radically wrong. Clarion got 18 scores.

The ball game Wednesday between the north and south side resulted in a victory for the north side by a score of 16 to 28. The south siders seem to be of the opinion that they can defeat the north siders and another game will undoubtedly be arranged.

Des Moines, August 10, 1903.

The state educational department has just issued a manual on accredited schools giving normal training, in which is included the course of study as prescribed by the state educational board, and all the information necessary to the proper conduct of these schools. The report indicates that they are now doing good work.

Secretary Simpson, of the state agricultural deparement, was happy today over receipt of a number of entries of horses in the horse department for the fair. He now has entries from nine of the largest horse-breeding firms in thhe country, assuring one of the best horse exhibits ever made here. A few days ago he received an inquiry from an Indiana breeder who wanted to send twenty-two head, but the express charges from the Sedalia fair would cost him over $700. Today the entries were received from him. One of the largest breeders and best known horsemen in the state, who has been absent from fairs for several years, gave notice that he would have his entries here tonight. A big breeder in Illinois telegraphed that he had mailed his entries last night.

Governor Cummins has been requested by the state department to call attention to a new federal law which provides that naturalization shall not be given to persons who are opponents of organized government, or anarchists. The records of the courts making naturalizations must show this fact as well as others.

The state board of health today took the most important action of its present session by modifying the rule in regard to vaccination so as to conform to the court decisions in Lucas county by Judge Vermillion. The rule is changed so that there will be no compulsory vaccination of school pupils except at a time when there is an epidemic of smallpox.

Judge Vermillion held in a case in which suit was brought against a school board to compel the board to admit pupils to school without vaccination, that the general rule of health boards in the state requiring vaccination before a child may be admitted to school, was too broad, and that the health boards have authority to require vaccination only in case there is actual epidemic of smallpox or other extraordinary conditions calling for the vaccination.

This will virtually put a stop to all compulsory vaccination in Iowa, as there is no smallpox in the state now, except a few isolated cases.

The board of dental examiners in their biennial report ask that the fee for examination be reduced to $15 in view of the fact that there is a surplus to the credit of the board; that reputable licensed dentists from other states be allowed to take the examination as well as those holding diplomas; and that dentists be allowed merely to record their names and numbers of their licenses with the county officials.

A second injunction proceedings during the week has been comenced against State Auditor Carroll to restrain that official from certifying the assessments on corporations fixed by the executive council at its recent session. Only a few days ago in the United States federal court the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad company secured an injunction restraining the state auditor from certifying the assessment placed on the new road between Muscatine and Rutledge, because it is claimed the road was not in existence on January 1, 1903. Now the Western Union Telegraph company is objecting to the assessment against it for 366 miles of telegraph line which it claims is the property of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad company.

The report that President Stickney, of the Great Western, has announced that upon the completion of his new Iowa lines the road will place on sale a one thousand mile ticket at the rate of two cents per mile, the use of which will be unrestricted, is causing considerable discussion among local railway men. The issuance of such a ticket will have a far-reaching effect, in that it will mean a two cent a mile rate for all Iowa points and also in the territory embraced by the Great Western. The ticket being unrestricted as to the user, every one can purchase one and if unable to use that much transportation can allow some member of his family or other parties to do so. All that the road will require is that the transportation be purchased in one thousand mile lots. Mr. Stickney claims that the issuance of such a ticket will not mean a reduction in the passenger receipts, on the contrary, will increase them, as it will have a tendency to increase the volume of travel. Instead of people waiting for reduced excursion rates, they will use one of the tickets. The introduction of the tickets will mean its use by all other roads in Iowa, as they will have no resource but to meet the competition.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Pius Print, of Council Bluffs, the Creek Indian, who was wounded by Ed. Campbell, a Kiowa redskin in a grading camp fight, died yesterday, and the coroner is holding an inquest. There seems to be no doubt that Campbell struck Print with an ax in self-defense.

Information comes from Van Buren county to the effect that the dam in the Des Moines river at Bonaparte is fast washing away and that unless the river subsides soon there will not be much left of the original dam. It is understood that the owners of the dam purpose building an entire new one of concrete.

Glen Marks, the 12-year-old son of Geo. L. Marks, a prominent citizen of Eldon, was accidentally killed there this afternoon by the premature discharge of a target rifle in the hands of playmates. The lads were camping out and practicing with the gun at the river. The same weapon killed a lad a year ago in a similar manner.

The wonderful fertility of Iowa soil has been tested by David Littell of Sumner, Iowa, this season. He harvested an early crop of potatoes on the 19th of June, and on the next day seeded the ground again. The second planting has produced large healthy vines, which now have potatoes on them which promise to attain the regular size.

Because his wife ran away taking with her their four children, John Chadduck, night watchman at the Phillips mines, Ottumwa, this morning attempted suicide by shooting himself in the left breast. He now lies in the city hospital here in a precarious condition and it is feared that he will not live. The bullet pierced his left lung. Chadduck is 38 years old and has been married thirteen years.

A meeting of the Federated clubs of the state has been called at Marshalltown for the purpose of planning legislation against the employment of child labor in the factories of the state. An effort will be made to enforce the law against the practice and to prevent some of the ways to avoid the law that have been brought into play. Evidence has been collected by some of the ladies and will be shown at the meeting which is to be held August 25.

A terrific hail storm visited northwestern Iowa on the 9th, extending as far east as Hamilton county, and doing almost untold damage in some localities. Corn was stripped and beaten to the ground and some live stock was killed. In Sioux City the mischief by hail and wind was almost unprecedented. Chunks of ice fell as big as a man's fist, and millions of individual stones were as large as walnuts. Plate glass windows even, were broken, screens and awnings torn and tin roofs perforated. Many fine shade trees were ruined.

Four persons were killed in the wreck on the Great Western railroad near Dover, and not seven, as first reported. Three of the dead are Italians, whose names are not known, while the fourth was the daughter of Hans Nelson, the boss of a boarding car. A freight train had picked up the board car containing Nelson's family and twenty-five Italian workmen. The train in going up a grade broke in two and the boarding car was thrown from the track and wrecked. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson were badly injured and several others were more or less hurt.

The state capitol commission is in session engaged in making inspection of the work in progress at the state house by a number of contractors. There are a great many things that need looking after, as the contractors find many obstacles that were unlooked for, and it is necessary for the commission to direct changes or provide for contingencies. Work is in full blast all over the capitol and a hundred or more workmen are busy. Nearly every office in the building is in a state of chaos at the present time. Work on the new roof has progressed nicely.

Ed Puckett, serving a sentence of six months in the Polk county jail for killing Al Eucher, the horse trader, was yesterday given an additional thirty days for an assault upon a fellow prisoner in the county bastile. The fight was fast and furious, and after flooring his opponent Puckett used his feet and broke four of the fellow's ribs. Dr. Conklin, the county physician, was called, and it was found that the man was in a very bad condition. Puckett was taken before Police Judge I. L. Silvara and upon a plea of guilty of assault and battery was given thirty days.

Before adjourning the state board of medical examiners rescinded the resolution of the board which was passed last February which directed the secretary to not issue licenses to itinerant doctors residing in other states. The attorney general has since decided that the board exceeded its authority in making this discrimination. Complaint had come to the board because of doctors holding licenses and residing in other states. They would send their agents into the state and do a fraudulent business, but because of their living in another state the victims would prefer to let the matter go and not prosecute. Hereafter the old system of issuing licenses to outside doctors will prevail again.

J. D. Weaver of Waterloo has just passed his 90th birthday in good health. At the dinner party, surrounded by four generations, he won the first prize in a domino contest.

The Burlington police had a running fight with a man who appeared to be getting ready for robbery at the post-office. He used a knife to defend himself and tried to stab Fire Chief Blank, who knocked him down. He gave the name of George Miller, but is thought to be William Powell, who escaped from the Leavenworth, Kan., jail.

Charles Lang shot an alligator on the banks of the Mississippi near Clinton. The reptile measured a little more than nine feet in length. He is supposed to be the one that has been seen near that city a number of times during the present summer. This is the farthest north an alligator has ever been known to travel up the Mississippi river.

During the electric storm early Wednesday morning, the new barn of Henry L. Snakeberg, north of Sigourney, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. The loss will run up to $2,000, with $500 or $600 insurance. Mr. Snakeberg had just finished storing away forty tons of hay, closed the barn door and went in to supper. While eating the barn was struck.

Full pardon has been granted to John Webster of Council Bluffs, who was serving a 12-year term at Fort Madison for the killing in 1895 of "Texas" Baker, a negro. Webster was convicted in 1896 and given twelve years. He was paroled more than a year ago, accepted a position as fireman on the Omaha road and has since led a useful life. He has now been given pardon and is restored to his civic rights. The murder of "Texas" Baker, a notorious negro, occurred in Council Bluffs one evening during the fall campaign, and indirectly was the result of a prominent quarrel.

Twenty-two men in the employ of the South Muscatine Button company, Muscatine, walked out at noon yesterday because the company made a cut of one cent per gross on all lines of blanks. Next Tuesday, it is said, a similar cut will go into effect at the old Bendle factory in South Muscatine and that the employes of that concern will duplicate the action of the men yesterday at the first named plant. Both sides deny that a strike has taken place in the South Muscatine concern, yet each admits that no work is being done and the chief cause for it is the cut. Officials of the button factory say the factory may close for an indefinite time.

It is currently reported in railroad circles that on September 1st the Chicago & Northwestern will take full control of the Chicago, Iowa & Dakota road, which the former system secured partial control of some months ago. A number of changes will result in the management of the line, which has heretofore had its headquarters at Eldora. It is stated on good authority that the division at Eldora will be abolished and that the line will be under the control of the superintendent at Eagle Grove. The Northwestern has been putting the track in better shape and an improved train service is anticipated, beginning September 1.

A case came up in police court today at Burlington, which disclosed a state law to the effect that finding an article does not entitled the finder to keep it. H. C. Picking found a package of valuable papers belonging to Building Commissioner Hammerman. Hammerman's name was on the package, so there was no doubt of the owner. Picking demanded $5 reward for restoring the lost papers, but Hammerman refused to pay and Picking retained the papers. Picking was arrested today on the charge of larceny and it developed on hearing the case that the state law holds that the person who finds property and does not take the proper steps to restore it to its owner is guilty of larceny.

Reports on the condition of the fruit at the close of July are now in the office of Secretary Wesley Greene, of the Horticultural society, from all the counties of the state. They bear out in large measure the earlier estimates, which were based on partial returns from the counties, but make a rather better showing for the summer and fall apples. The corrected returns on the fruit prospects for the state make the following showing: Apples, summer, 50; fall, 53; winter, 42. Plums, American, 14; Japanese, 10; European, 11. Pears, 0. Peaches, 20. Grapes, 68. A short time ago, Mr. Greene said the fruit crop would be this year about the same as in 1889. In that year there were 3,129,862 bushels of apples. Mr. Greene predicts about the same number of bushels this year. He says fall and summer apples promise fairly well, but the winter crop will be small and prices high.

MANY HOUSES DESTROYED.

Death Dealing Tornado Sweeps Through Mining District.

Pittsburg, Kansas, August 10.—About half past 1 o'clock Saturday morning a tornado passed through the thickly populated mining district northeast of Pittsburg, destroying hundreds of homes, mine tipples and buildings of every description, leveling to a mass of wreckage a large portion of every camp between the Devlin-Miller shaft north of Frontenac and the Morgan shaft on the state line, and converting into ruin a strip of thickly populated territory eight miles long and two miles wide and leaving death and desolation in its wake. At least two persons were killed and fully sixty injured, some of them fatally, and perhaps many others were injured whose names have not been procured.

The tornado swept across the country from the northwest, doing great damage in all of the mining camps, which are thickly clustered in that section of the country. The destruction appeared to commence at the Devlin-Miller camp, known as Millerton, and from there southeast through camps 17 and 31, Nelson, Midway, Yale, Cornell, Litchfield, and the other camps, nearly destroying some of them and doing terrible damage to all. The property loss will not be great, for most of the homes destroyed were the humble houses occupied by the miners, and in most cases belonged to the coal companies.

Parsons, Kan., Aug. 10.—Early Saturday Parsons was visited by the most severe wind storm that ever struck the city, and heavy damage resulted. The new blacksmith and boiler shops of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railroad were demolished, while in the residence sections many small buildings were wrecked. Several stores were badly wrecked. The front of the Hail Dry Goods Company's building was blown in, and the De Jarnette Hide company's building was badly crushed. Six persons were hurt slightly. The storm was severe in the surrounding country also, and great damage has been the corn crop.

WAR CLOUDS GROW DARKER

Constantinople, Aug. 10.—The insurectionary movement in Macedonia appears to be widening. Bands are reported to be active in the Sanjok of Uskub and the district of Krushevo, where the government telegraph offices have been dynamited; while in the district of Di Bra four Bulgarian villages have risen, provoking a corresponding rising in the neighboring Albanian villages. According to the statement of the porte, however, the authorities have succeeded in calming the Albanians and inducing them to return to their homes.

The diplomats here are uneasy, fearing that the trouble may spread outside the bounds of Macedonia. So long as the trouble is confined to the usual skirmishing bands and occasional dynamite outrages, it is not believed that there will be any serious cause for alarm.

Up to the present the action of the embassies has been confined to advising the porte to prevent the Musselmen from engaging in fights with the militiamen.

J. J. HILL TO INVADE CHINA.

St. Paul, Aug. 7.—James J. Hill, who built railways in the Northwest when everybody said he could not make them pay, will attempt the equally difficult undertaking of building railways in China. It became known to-day that R. Van Bergen, a personal representative, is making a very careful investigation of the Chinese field. Mr. Van Bergen has just reached China, after a trip from Shanghai to St. Paul to interview Mr. Hill and his associates, and the first of his reports are authoritatively stated to contain information of a very favorable character. It was stated today that an announcement of Mr. Hill's plans may be expected within a month or two.

CHAPTER I.

Pope and Crystal.

It was one Tuesday in the city of London, in the early part of the last century, and the large dining-room of the Mitre tavern was full of hungry men sitting in boxes and giving hoarse notes to their wants. The beet-pot foamed at their elbows as they ate with a will. They bore the true aspect of the children of the deep; you would have known them when they hove in sight a mile off by their clothes and cut.

Jenkinson went about nodding to this man and to that, calling deep pitched answers in response to friendly greetings. He stopped at a box at whose table sat one figure only. This was a captain in the merchant service named Pope, a fine, tall man of very noble build. He had a merry eye with something careless and cruel in its glance and light; an Irish eye blue and arch. But to-day the face that overhung his plate, chewing steadily, with Jenkinson staring at him, was a long one.

"Well, Captain," said Jenkinson, "have you got a ship yet?"

"Don't talk of it," cried Captain Pope with passion. "The pavements are full of helpless idlers. They wander starving and forlorn."

Jenkinson smiled sarcastically.

"Don't tell me," he said. "There are always plenty of ships, and where there are ships there is demand and room for good men."

The other shrugged his shoulders and bit his food with anger.

Just then a middle-sized man came to the entrance of the box, and Jenkinson stood up.

"How d'ye do, Captain Crystal? What are your commands?" Crystal named his joint, and seated himself opposite Captain Pope, and Jenkinson went away.

This Crystal was a very rugged-looking man of about forty-five years of age. He showed a cutlass scar over his nose, and it fixed the expression of a surly frown upon his face. He was very broad, as powerfully built as Pope, dressed in sailor's worn clothes; but as in Pope, so in this man, there was wickedness in his looks.

Captain Pope closed his knife and fork and watched the other for some minutes in silence. Then he got up and looked over into the box on either hand, then sat a little closer opposite Crystal, and said, "This is the advertisement I was telling you about." He read in a low voice as follows.

"Brig Gypsy—This beautiful and admirable clipper ship having been condemned by the Admiralty, has been purchased by a private gentleman, who has laid out a considerable sum of money in completing her equipment. She is now for sale, and may be had on a very great bargain. Parties disposed to purchase her will apply to Mr. Staunton in the Minories."

"It's the strangest matter that ever was heard of," said Captain Pope, speaking with a cautious face. "A man had his father who left him a brig and a little in cash. Jackman was his name. He got command, but it was plain the job didn't satisfy him. He came ashore with a bag of fifteen hundred pounds, and pretended to have been knocked down and robbed. There is no doubt he stole the money. The owners did not seem able to prove anything, and the next traverse this man Jackman set out to work was painting and equipping of his brig, and the preparing her for sea as a—what d'ye say?"

"I heard it. Piracy!" said Captain Crystal.

"He got men under the pretense that he was bound out on some liberal undertaking—it was a story of treasure, I fancy—and went away down Channel. His game was suspected and he was followed out of one of the reaches by a government cutter. They exchanged shots, and the pirate brought the cutter's mast down. Jackman in the Channel brings his men aft and tells them the truth. He is going for a pirate, he says. The men heard him. In time they came abreast of some caves which Jackman had purchased down on the extreme west coast, and he and his father-in-law and Mrs. Jackman went ashore. When Jackman returned to his ship, the men seized him, swearing they were not going to be hanged for pirates, and they locked this Jackman up in his cabin, and carried the brig to the Thames and handed her over. Jackman sprang through the cabin window and was drowned. He did well. He was a ruined man and a felon."

"The biggest fool," said Captain Crystal, "that ever took charge of men. Only think of shipping a crew on representations of honesty, to tell them, before they were out of sight of Execution Dock, that the brig's colors were the black flag.

"I have a mind to view this brig," said Pope. "We require a permit from the owner, and that is one reason why I am calling on him. Come with me and view the brig, Crystal."

"Right," said the square-shaped seaman; "and if you have the cash for the purchase of her stowed away in some old stocking in an inshore chimney, I'm your man as first mate."

They entered the shop of a nautical instrument maker. Mr. Staunton, the owner of the brig, dwelt over this shop.

"This is your notice, I suppose?" said Captain Pope, pulling out the paper, and putting his hand upon the advertisement. "What's your price?"

"Not a penny less than six hundred pounds," replied the money-lender. "Have you seen her?"

"No," answered Pope, with a gloomy grin, "we're here to ask for leave to look at her."

Mr. Staunton quickly and eagerly began to write, talking meanwhile. His writing was soon ended. "Show this, gentlemen," said he, "to my shipkeeper, and I hope you'll lose no time in taking the vessel off my hands."

"We'll view her," said Pope, pocksting the permit.

The two sailors went toward London Bridge. A hoy was proceeding from London Bridge down the river, and the two captains boarded her for Deptford. There they landed, and took oars, as the expression then was, for a brig with the topgallant mast housed, lying in the stream within a convenient pull.

"She appears in very good condition," said Pope, directing searching looks about him, and letting his eyes rest aloft. I'll give her royal stun'sails and by the saints, there shall be nothing afloat she shan't be able to overhaul."

"Oh, ho!" muttered Crystal. "So that's the lay."

He looked at Pope and burst into a horse laugh.

"'Tis a pity, though," says he, "that there should be a difficulty of six hundred pounds in the way."

"How am I to get this ship?" said Captain Pope, standing on stretched legs. He spoke in soliloquy. His companion seemed not to heed, merely eyed him askant, and then after whistling softly for a bit while he reflected, he said: "I never heard of a ship stolen out of the river Thames in my life."

"There was the Dorothy," said Pope swiftly; "and there was the Arethusa, a small West Indiaman; in each case a company of men entered, gagged and pinioned the ship-keeper, softly let go the fasts and slipped away on the stream without a hail from shore or water. Both those vessels were lost to their owners; what became of them I don't know."

"It was a midnight job," said Crystal, and then both men went on deck and entered the forecastle, examined the caboose, lifted the main hatch and looked at the guns in the hold; next hailing their boat, the two captains went ashore.

Pope had asked Crystal to sup with him, and the rugged seaman had consented. It was a dismal street. The Captain seemed struck. He paused grasping Crystal's arm.

"What sort of life can that be?" said he, "that lands a man in this sort of thing? Yet, so help me God," he cried with Irish emphasis, "after using the sea since I was a lad of fifteen, I can do no better than this first floor at seven shillings a week."

"It's a dirty part of London," said Crystal, scowling up and down the street. "Why didn't you keep near the docks. Five shillings hires me a room and a clean turn-up bedstead just out of the Commercial Road."

Captain Pope pulled the bell of the house. The door was opened after a considerable passage of waiting—during which Pope continued to curse the sea as the most poverty-stricken of callings—by a dirty little servant who seemed a compound of flue and blacklead. The Captain pushed in.

They refreshed themselves in a dingy little bedroom, adjoining the parlor. There was a handsome sea-chest here, and a sparkling long telescope.

"That's what it's come to," said Pope, pointing to these things. "I, Captain Pope, and as good and careful a mariner as any as sails out of the ports of this kingdom, cannot get a ship."

"There are scores of us," said Crystal, drying his face. "My money sinks and the ships depart, and I return to my dirty little lodging sick with cursing the times I have fallen on."

"And disappointment and poverty don't raise hell and the pirate in your heart, hey?" cried Pope, staring with a wild stormy look into the other's dark face.

"How do you know that it don't?" answered Crystal, picking up a hair brush.

"I'd rob a church. I have no honesty left. I mean to set up as a villain, and you shall help me make a fortune for us both, Crystal."

"You're not thinking of the highway are ye, Pope?"

"Ay, the highway that reflects the canvas of rich keels. But step into the next room." He pulled out a gold watch. "I'll tell you what's in my mind, and we can debate it over a pipe after we've supped."

"I heard it. Piracy!"

CHAPTER II.

The Camperdown Public House.

"Well, now, what's your scheme?" said Crystal, when they had entered "I'll be beforehand with thee thus far; it's piracy or you shall choke me."

Captain Pope's eyes gleamed. "Piracy it is; the most gallant of trades. If I had my way I would not choose a brig. She should be the swiftest schooner that ever sailed out of an American port, coppered to the bends with buttons of trucks melting to the stars."

He laughed, rubbing his hands in a glowing way.

Crystal said, "High enough. But you are a broken man. How, unless you run away with her, are you to come at a brig or a schooner, swift or slow?"

"If you want to go upstairs," exclaimed Pope, "you take one step at a time. Some take two, and those are the fools. How much money have you got, Crystal?"

"So help me as I sit," cried the square, rugged seaman, half starting out of his chair, with his eyes all in a heat at once, "I cannot muster four guineas in this accursed world of toil and want."

He tore a few coins out of his pocket and dashed them in a small handful upon the table. Pope, folding his arms leaned back on the sofa and eyed the money with mingled sorrow and disdain; then after a pause he exclaimed:

"Put that coin up, Crystal, and cease to fret. I can muster eighty pounds and a gold watch, and trifles"—here he heaved a deep sigh—"which might be worth thirty pounds more to me With this capital I mean to go to work."

Reed as a Joker.

When William A. Peffer was senator from Kansas he met "Czar" Reed one day and in the course of conversation complained of having a headache. "I don't understand it," said the senator "I guess I will have to see a doctor." "A doctor for trouble with your head?" returned Mr. Reed. "No, no! You'd better see a wheelwright.'—Boston Post.

There is great grief at Rouen France, where the famous bell known as "Rouvel," which, for an uninterrupted period of 600 years, has rung the curfew, has just exhibited a serious crack. It is feared that repairs are impossible, and that the bell will never ring again.

She Didn't Care.

Maplehill, Ia., Aug. 10th.—"I felt as though I didn't care whether I lived or died, I was so miserable all the time."

In these words does Miss Nellie Barfoot of this place describe her condition. Every woman who is, or has been sick and suffering will understand and appreciate just how Miss Barfoot felt, and there are no doubt many thousands of similar cases.

It is truly an awful thing when a woman gets so low that she can say "I don't care whether I live or die."

But Miss Barfoot tells a different story to-day, and her words should guide every suffering woman to the path of health and happiness.

"I used Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I am cured. I feel like a new person, and I would say to every woman suffering as I did, give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial and you will not be disappointed. They are worthy of the highest praise."

To the housewife who has not yet become acquainted with the new things of everyday use in the market and who is reasonably satisfied with the old, we would suggest that a trial of Defiance Cold Water Starch be made at once. Not alone because it is guaranteed by the manufacturers to be superior to any other brand, but because each 10c package contains 16 ozs., while all the other kinds contain but 12 ozs. It is safe to say that the lady who once uses Defiance Starch will use no other. Quality and quantity must win.

ONE OF THE LARGEST IRRIGATING CANALS IN THE WORLD.

A Project of the State of Idaho.

On the west side of the Snake river in Idaho, between Blackfoot and American Falls, there is being constructed by the American Falls Canal & Power company, under a contract with the state of Idaho, an irrigating canal 85 feet wide and 60 miles long. When finished, this canal will be one of the largest and most perfect irrigating systems in the world. By its means a valley of 100,000 acres of the most fertile and productive fruit and farm land in America will be reclaimed.

The climate of this valley is ideal. Cyclones, hot winds, floods or destructive storms have never been known.

Grain, grass, vegetables and all varieties of fruit grow in abundance. A healthful climate, a sure crop, a heavy yield, high prices and a ready market, are features of this country.

Ten thousand acres of this rich land are now ready for irrigation and settlement. Purchase tickets to Blackfoot via Oregon Short Line Railway Co.

Monday Master Ray Gruetzmacher arrived at the dignity of nine years of age and his parents invited in a number of his young friends to help him celebrate this important event. The hours of entertainment were from 3:00 to 9:00 p. m. Ray made a remarkably fine host so says the youngsters, and a real enjoyable time was had.

"Ralphie" Spayde, editor of the Crystal Lake Reflector, is very complimentary to the Klemme base ball team when he says the team's strong points are wrangling and scraping. We cannot account for such an assertion from Mr. Spayde in any other way but that he was formerly a Garner boy and is yet married to the "will be" metropolis.

Ben Kaste is now the owner of the stock of goods formerly owned by Huntsman & Co. The deal which brought about this change was made on Wednesday. Mr. Kaste is well known by our people and needs no introduction, he having lived among us the greater share of his life. He has a good practical business education, having spent the last several years clerking in various places. His thorough knoweledge of the value of goods will be of great help to him in buying which is more than half of any business man's success. His large circle of acquaintances here will make it comparatively easy for him to build up a lucratives business which his honesty and integrity justly entitles him to. We bespeak for Benjamin abundant success.

The game of ball, Klemme vs Clarion of which we made brief mention last week was a very odd affair. Both teams were decidedly off and the poorest exhibition of ball that has been seen here this season was dished up. From the beginning poor ball was played and it was evident that those who came to the game expecting to see good ball would go away disappointed. Our young wonder, Kluckhohn was not at himself, but everybody has off days and this was one of Kluck's. However, in the estimation of our people his true worth as a pitcher has not been decreased and we warrant in the next game he will redeem himself. The entire nine was off and each individual player had one or more errors to his credit, The Clarion team played very poorly also, and deserve but little credit for their victory. A return game will undoubtedly be arranged for later.

RUSSIA READY TO ENFORCE DEMANDS

Will Not Accept Promises From Sultan in Regard to Murder of Consul.

SENDS THE BLACK SEA FLEET

Will Make a Show of Strength in Turkish Waters to Indicate the Czar Is in Earnest—Must Act With Promptness.

St. Petersburg, August 17.—A squadron of Russia's Black sea fleet has been ordered to sail for Turkish waters. Notification of this has been telegraphed from Sebastopol to the Russian ambassador at Constantinople.

The dispatch of the squadron is intended to emphasize Russia's intention of exacting complete compliance with her demands as to the satisfaction for the murder by a Turkish gen d'arme of her consul at Monastir.

The following telegrams exchanged between the foreign office and Russian representatives abroad show the first steps taken as a consequence of the murder of M. Rostkovski, the Russian consul at Monastir:

On August 11, Count Lamsdorff, the foreign minister, telegraphed to M. Zinovieff, Russian ambassador at Constantinople, that neither the sultan's expression of regret, the visit of Prince Ahmed, the sultan's son, to the ambassador, nor the expressions of sympathy by the grand vizier and other high Turkish dignitaries was considered to be adequate satisfaction for the murder of M. Rostkovski, When M. St. Cherbina, the Russian consul, was murdered at Mitrovitsa, the czar took into account the fact that the murderer was an Albanian whose tribe was in rebellion.

The czar ordered that no promise on this time should be accepted, but that this time should be acepted, but that demands be made as follows:

"That immediate punishment of the murderer, the arrest and punishment of the person who fired at M. Rostkovski's carriage, the immediate production of positive proofs that the vali of Monastir has been actually banished, the immediate severe punishment of all the civil and military officials responsible for the murder."

In addition to these demands, Ambassador Zinovieff was instructed as a means of general pacification in the vilayet of Monastir to make the following demands:

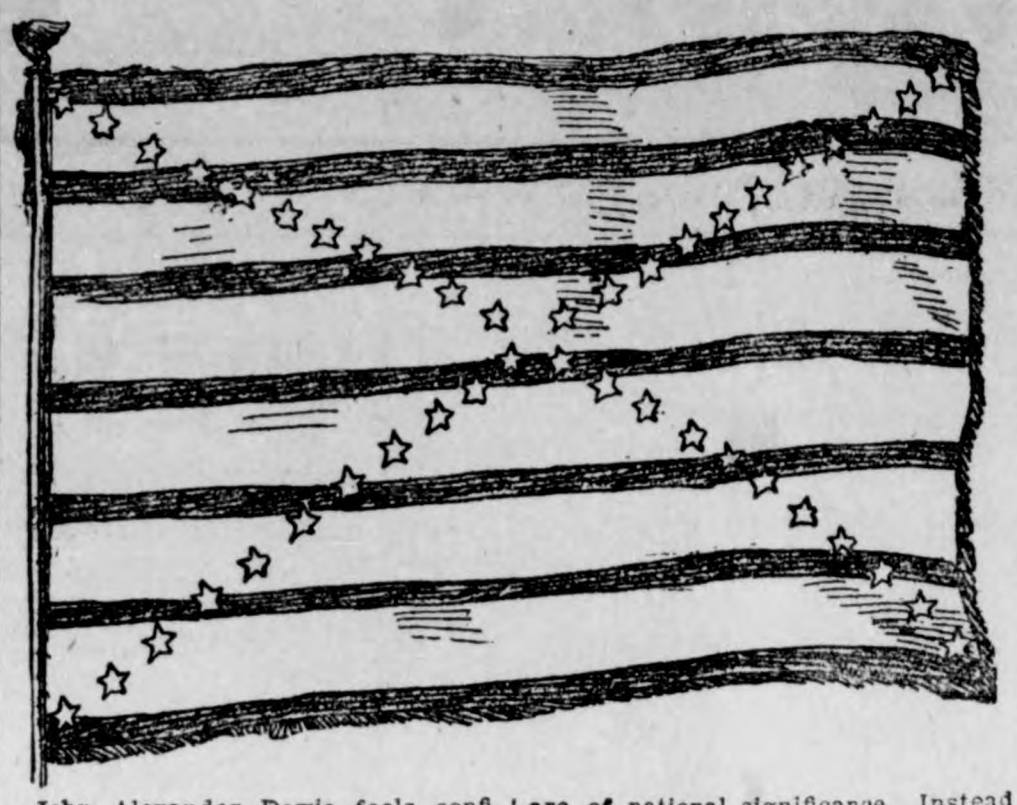
The immediate severe punishment of all Turkish officials regarding whose outrageous behavior a report was made by the director of the Russian consulate at Uskub, after making a tour of the vilayet of Kossovo in company with the Austrian consul; the reinstatement of Ismal Hakki, who was dismissed, but whose efficiency was endorsed by Hilmi Pasha, inspector general of Macedonia; the immediate release of the peasants on whom according to the reports of the Russian and Austrian consuls, the Turks perpetrated atrocities; the instant dismissed and punishment of the officials of the administration of Salonica and Prisrend, whose malpractices have been brought to light, and finally that the foreign officers employed in Macedonia shall immediately enroll fresh gen d'armes and police for the requisite protection of the peaceable population and introduction of legislative order.

On August 12, Count Lamsdorff telegraphed to the Russian diplomatic agent at Sofia that the government could not obtain an adequate satisfaction for the assassination of M. Rostkovski and therefore had already taken measures to secure redress. As on the occasion of the murder of Consul St. Cherbina the suppression of the insurrectionary movement among the Albanians was demanded, so on the present occasion demands had been presented to the Ottoman government for the severe punishment of all the military and civil authorities guilty of atrocities against the Christians.

Count Lamsdorff impressed upon the diplomatic agent that it was his duty to see that Russia's vigorous attitude towards the porte was not interrupted by the Bulgarian government or the Macedonians now as indicating any change in the political program laid down in previous government communications.

It would be a dangerous error, added the Russian foreign minister, on the part of the principality to consider Russia's present action as fostering the revolutionary agitation of the Macedonian committee whose criminal activity was a hindrance to the pacification of the vilayet, and therefore to the introduction of reforms. From the Russian consular reports it was clear that the peaceful Christian population suffered at the hands of the revolutionary bands as much as they did from the outrages and robberies committed by Turks. All these circumstances, concluded Count Lamsdorff, proved the necessity for the most vigorous counteraction on the part of the Bulgarian government with a view to the suppression of the troubles in the Balkan peninsula.

DOWIE FASHIONS NEW AMERICAN FLAG



John Alexander Dowie feels confident that his new design of the national emblem is an artistic improvement over the Old Glory which the forefathers fashioned. While the design which Dowie has patterned is to prevail in Zion City, Illinois, he has no objection to its being used in other sections of the country. In the Dowie design the field of blue has been dispensed with, but the stars and stripes have been retained, as he says they are of national significance. Instead of being crowded into a narrow margin, the stars are extended in the shape of a St. Andrew's cross across the whole banner. The stripes are narrower than on the original emblem, and are not woven so close together. Some time ago Dowie says he became convinced that the national emblem was faulty and inartistic, and he believes his pattern is an improvement.

TORTURE, MURDER, PILLAGE.

Terrible Arraignment of Turks by Bulgarian Government.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 17.—The Bulgarian government has presented a memorandum to the powers setting out at great length the condition of affairs during the past three months in Macedonia since the Turkish government undertook to inaugurate the promised reforms. The most precise details, dates, places and names of persons are given in the memorandum, the whole constituting a terrible category of murder, torture, incendiarism, pillage, and general oppression committed by the Ottoman soldiers and officials. These particulars were obtained entirely from official sources, such as the reports of the Bulgarian consuls and agents of the Bulgarian government and in many instances the reports made by Turkish authorities. The Bulgarian government guarantees the absolute truth of every statement and challenges the porte to disprove a single charge made in the memorandum. The memorandum begins by stating that during the past three months the Ottoman government has taken a series of measures with the alleged intention of inaugurating the era of promised reform and of assuring peace and tranquility to the Bulgarian population of European Turkey, but which have had the contrary effect of further exasperating this population and reviving the revolutionary movement. Instead of proceeding solely against persons guilty of breaches of the public order, the military and civil authorities have sought every possible pretext to persecute, terrorize and ruin the Bulgarian inhabitants, alike in the large cities and in the small villages.

Wholesale massacres, individual murders, the destruction of villages, the pillaging and selling, ill-treatment, tortures, arbitrary imprisonment and banishment, the closing and disorganizing of churches and schools, the ruining of merchants, the collection of taxes for many years in advance—such, proceeds the memorandum, are among the acts of the Ottoman administration of the vilayets of Salonica, Monastir, Uskub and Adrainople.

The memorandum next relates in detail a number of such cases in each vilayet.

The memorandum has made a strong impression in diplomatic circles. The Austrian diplomatic agent has already called on the premier to express his anxiety regarding the results that may ensue from its publication. The French and Italian agents also expressed uneasiness, although they took a less gloomy view.

THOUSANDS ARE HOMELESS.

Awful Damage by Hurricane in Jamaica Now Apparent.

Kingston, Jamaica, Aug. 15.—There are heartrending scenes all over the eastern and northern portion of the island of Jamaica. At Port Antonio, thousands of homeless and starving people have sought shelter in the old prison and the few other buildings which survived the hurricane. Those who could not be thus accommodated are cowering in the lee of ruined walls and dismantled piazzas. The railroad shed and waiting rooms are filled with women and children. The merchants of the place are feeding the hungry to the best of their ability, but the majority are depending upon green, unripe bananas knocked down by the storm. This is their sole food supply, and it will be exhausted in nine or ten days.

Similar conditions prevail at many other points. In the interior the distress is equally acute. Scarcely a peasant's home is standing. Even the dwellings of the planters, which are built of substantial stone, have been unroofed with a few exceptions.

The misery of the peasants' families is indescribable.

JEFFRIES REMAINS CHAMPION.

Knocked Corbett Out at San Francisco in the Tenth Round.

Mechanics' Pavilion, San Francisco, Aug. 15.—James J. Jeffries, champion heavyweight of the world, played with Jim Corbett for nine rounds and a half and then Corbett's seconds motioned to Referee Graney to stop the fight in order to save their man from needless punishment. The end came shortly after the beginning of the tenth round, when Jeffries planted one of his terrific left swings on Corbett's stomach. The man who conquered John L. Sullivan dropped to the floor in agony and the memorable scene at Carson City, when Bob Fitzsimmons landed his solar plexus blow, was almost duplicated.

This time, however, Corbett struggled to his feet and again faced his gigantic adversary. With hardly a moment's hesitation, Jeffries swung his right and again landed on Corbett's stomach. Jim dropped to the floor and then it was that Tommy Ryan, seeing that it was all over, motioned to Referee Graney to stop the punishment.

The fight last night demonstrated beyond all doubt that Jeffries stands alone in his class. He showed remarkable improvement in both speed and skill. Corbett, during the first part of the fight, was almost outpointed, and the few blows that he landed on Jeffries were apparently without sting. Jeffries was never in better condition. He looked lighter than usual, and the way he moved about on his feet and the frequency with which he countered Corbett's leads astonished everybody. Corbett, in comparison with the big man opposed to him, looked very light, but was really heavier than ever before. He appeared to have lost some of his old time speed and skill during the early part of the fight, but this may have been due to Jeffries' marvelous improvement.

JETT AND WHITE CONVICTED

Good Name of Kentucky is Partially Redeemed.

Cynathiana, Ky., Aug. 15—The jury in the case of Curtis Jett and Thomas White, charged with the assassination of James B. Marcum at Jackson, Ky., returned a verdict of guilty yesterday and fixed the punishment in each at life imprisonment. The verdict was returned at a time when there were but few persons in the court room. The only attorney present was County Attorney Webster. Jett received the verdict with apparent indifference and calmness. White has been under a severe strain during the trial. He flushed up and his eyes filled with tears. Attorney Golden for the defense, stated that a motion for a new trial would be made as soon as possible. The verdict occasioned little surprise here after the deliberation of the jury had been so prolonged. The only question which caused the delay was that of punishment—death or life punishment. The verdict is regarded as a victory for the defense, as the prosecution asked that no middle ground be taken, and the men either go acquitted or be hanged.

ASSASSIN EXECUTED.

Man Who Killed Russian Consul at Monastir Put to Death.

Constantinople, Aug. 15.—A court martial held at Monastir condemned the gen d'arme, Halim, to death for the murder of M. Rostkovski, the Russian consul at Monastir. The sentence was immediately carried out.

Another gen d'arme was sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED
by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Charles Dudley Warner, who was itor of the Hartford Press in the xties, was one day confronted by a mpositor, who said: "Well, Mr. arner, I've decided to enlist in the my." The editor was pleased, and plied that he was glad to see the an felt the call of duty and was has- ning to serve his country in its oublous time. "Oh, it ain't that," re- arked the printer, "but I'd rather be ot than try to set any more of your —d copy."

Senators Blackburn and Lindsay, of entucky, were once traveling togeth- through the Alleghany Mountains. lackburn went into the smoking-room d returned in a few minutes looking much depressed that Lindsay asked: What's the matter, Joe?" "Why, I've st the better part of my baggage," ld Blackburn, in heartbroken tones. Was it stolen or did you leave it be- nd?" "Worse than either—the cork me out."

Mrs. Leslie M. Shaw, wife of the ecretary of the Treasury, has always en noted for her wit. It is said that young man of humorous bent one y exclaimed in her presence: "What uld be more dreadful for a woman an after mending her husband's coat find in one of the pockets a love- tter from another woman?" "Fortu- tely,' said Mrs. Shaw, "that could ever happen. The woman would find e letter first and then she would not end the coat."

When President Roosevelt was in haron Springs, Mo., a countryman is id to have stepped up and said to member of the presidential party: Whar's the president?" Mr. Roose- elt, scenting something good, said: Do you wish to see him particular- ?" "Gosh ter blazes, ou're the feller," said the man as he urried away.

An amusing story is told of Presi- ent Loubet's humble brother-in-law, hom an enterprising interviewer alled upon directly after the French resident's election. "How did you ake the news?" asked the interviewer. Oh, fairly well; without any rejoic- ngs, of course. Now, here am I, for xample, an ironmonger; in what ay do you suppose it will benefit me hat my brother-in-law is president of he republic? Why, this very morn- ng I received three letters from peo- le begging me to get them govern- ent tobacco shops. That is the only dvantage that the election will be- tow upon me. People fancy that I ave influence, and I shall therefore e worried."

Chinese Incubators.

The Chinese have been using incubators for centuries, how many no man can tell. Hatching chicks by this means is a trade there, and certain Chinamen do nothing else, at least during the four months of the hatching season. We illustrate herewith a Chinese incubator seen from the outside, and show also a cross section of the same. Such an incubator will hold from 1,200 to 1,350 eggs. The incubator is three feet high and three feet in diameter. About 20 to 30 of these are kept in a single room, and this room is heated by a fire of charcoal. No thermometer is used, but the heat of the eggs is ascertained by touching one or two to his eyeball. Nothing is done by rule; but the man that takes charge of the incubator plant becomes very expert in the matter of temperatures and has little trouble in keping the heat about right. If the eggs become too hot, he airs them; if they become too cool he covers them with warm blankets. The per cent of hatches usually runs from 60 to 70. This is very good when it is understood that it includes the infertile eggs, which are taken out and sold after a few days of incubation. Chicks are hatched out by the thousands and retailed to the villagers at from 1 to 1½ cents each. The practice of heating the whole room instead of the incubator only is one that has been followed to a small extent in this country.

The Partridge Cochin.

The Partridge Cochin is a beautiful yet difficult fowl to breed, and in plumage is much after the pattern of the Dark Brahma, the color being red and brown, instead of the steel-grey effect of tne latter. The head of male in color is bright red hackle, bright red or orange red, with a distinct black stripe down the center of each feather; saddle feathers same as hackle; breast and body rich deep black; wing bows, red; primaries, black on the inside web, with a bay edging on the outside web; secondaries black on the inside web and rich bay on the outside web, terminating with greenish-black at the end of each feather; wing coverts, greenish-black, forming a well-defined bar of that color across the wing when folded; tail, black.

The female is the prettier of the two. Her head is small and of a rich brown plumage, with a stout, well-curved beak, yellow in color. Her eyes are bay and mild in expression. The head is ornamented with a small single comb, set perfectly straight upon the head and bright red in color. The wattles are small, well rounded and fine in texture; the earlobes are well developed and are also fine in texture.

"Black Tom" of Snake Hill, N. J., who has just died, at the age of 102, attributed his longevity to the fact that he drank whisky and smoked tobacco all his life. He also spent his whole life in New Jersey, which may help to account for it.

Mary Proctor, who writes of "Five Hundred Little Worlds" in the August St. Nicholas, is a daughter of the great Proctor, the astronomer, and is living at present in New York City. She is a small woman, exceedingly quiet, almost shy in manner, but has proved a successful lecturer and writer in the field where her father won distinction.

A certain officer in the army, who is very much disliked by his men, was returning to barracks recently, when he slipped into some deep water. A private in his regiment happened to see the occurrence, and with great difficulty pulled the officer out. The latter was very profuse in his thanks, and asked his rescuer how he could reward him. "The best way you can reward me, sir," replied the private, "is to say nothing about it." "Why, my good fellow," said the astonished officer, "why do you wish me to say nothing about it?" "Because, if the other fellows knew I pulled you out, you can depend upon it, they'd get even on me by promptly throwing me into the water."

At the Portsmouth luncheon to the American squadron, United States Consul Swalm, of Southampton, who was stationed at Montevideo during the war with Spain, told the following story: "They were expecting the Oregon during the Spanish-American War, and they also expected that she would be short of coal. He could not buy so much as a pound of fuel, but one evening a Scotsman came to his door and said: 'You want coal?' The consul replied that he never wanted a drink as badly as he wanted coal at that moment. The Scotsman had no power to sell, but he pointed out that he had eight hundred tons on board, and said he pitied the American captain who could not put his ship alongside, take out the bags of coal, and then 'cut the painter.' It so happened that the Oregon did not call, but such an act of friendship which defied law and order touched his heart."

A German Farmer's Case.

Rich Fountain, Mo., Aug. 17th.—Rev. Joseph Pope of this place is widely and favorably known as a clergyman who has done and is doing much for his people. He is very much beloved by everyone for the faithfulness of his pastoral work.

Rev. Mr. Pope has given for publication a statement made to him by a German farmer who is a member of his congregation. The man's name is George Hoellerer, and he has given Rev. Mr. Pope this letter:

"Last winter I suffered very much with Rheumatism. I could neither walk nor ride on horseback nor do any farm work.

"I took medicine from different doctors but they did not do me any good. Then I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills procured for me by a good friend. After I had taken the first box I felt already a heap better; I was relieved of the pain and could walk and chop wood; and the contraction of my fingers began to resolve.

"Now since I have taken six more boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel well again and am able to do all the work on the farm."

THE SALESWOMAN

Compelled to Be on Her Feet the Larger Part of the Day Finds a Tonic In Pe-ru-na.

Miss Curtain, of St. Paul, Gives Her Experience.

MISS NELLIE CURTAIN, 646 Pearl street, St. Paul, Minn., head saleswoman in a department store writes:

"I have charge of a department in a dry goods store, and after standing the larger part of the day, I would go home with a dull ache, generally through my entire body. I used Peruna and feel so much better that I walk to and from the store now. I know Peruna to be the best medicine on the market for the diseases peculiar to women."—Miss Nellie Curtain.

Nothing is so weakening to the human system as the constant loss of mucus. Catarrhal inflammation of the mucus membrane produces an excessive formation of mucus. Whether the mucus membrane be located in the head or pelvic organs, the discharge of mucus is sure to occur.

This discharge of mucus constitutes a weakening drain; the system cannot long withstand the loss of mucus, hence it is that women afflicted with catarrhal affections of the pelvic organs feel tired and languid, with weak back and throbbing brain. A course of Peruna is sure to restore health by cutting off the weakening drain of the daily loss of mucus.

An Admirable Tonic.

Congressman Mark H. Dunnell, National Hotel, Washington, D. C., writes:

"Your Peruna being used by myself and many of my friends and acquaintances not only as a cure for catarrh but also as an admirable tonic for physical recuperation, I gladly recommend it to all persons requiring such remedies."—Mark H. Dunnell.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Another feather has been added to the already well bedecked sky pieces of our juvenile base ball team. This plume was plucked from the Garner third nine who visited our town on Wednesday. Some good and some poor ball was played but in order to settle the game it was necessary to play ten innings. The Garner boys are very gentlemanly little fellows and took their defeat gracefully, Each town has the material for a fast ball team in a few years hence. The score was 19 to 15.

Engineer Lon Rush was probably fatally injured in a wreck on the Great Western near Minden. He was backing up with a train of thirty empty cars when one of the cars was derailed and three other empties and the engine were piled in the ditch at the side of the track. Rush was caught between the boiler head and the side of his cab and so tightly pinned down that it required three hours' work to release him. Steam from the engine would soon have cooked him to death but for the heroic efforts of Fireman Henry Ribling, also seriously injured, who clambered into the cab and turned the steam off. The injured man was taken to Minden, where an examination revealed that his injuries from inhaling steam are serious and will almost surely prove fatal. His legs are also badly crushed and will have to be amputated if he regains sufficient strength to undergo the operation.

Superintendent Jas. E. Robinson has begun the excavation for the new physical science building of the Iowa State Normal school at Cedar Falls, to be built out of the $300,000 appropriation granted at the last session of the general assembly. The new building will cost $40,000, will be three stories high exclusive of the basement. The first and second floors will be devoted entirely to the use of the physical science department. The third floor will be devoted to the exclusive use of the department of chemistry, while the entire basement will be used for the carpenter shop. The building will be equipped with all the modern improvements and will be fire proof throughout. The plans were drawn up by Superintendent Jas. E. Robinson, who has charge of the buildings and grounds of the school. He has been instructed to put in the foundation this fall and have it all in readiness for the masons to begin operations early in the spring of 1904. Work on the new gymnasium is progressing in the most satisfactory manner.

Isaac Markley, a wealthy farmer arrested at Schaller last May, charged with the murder of his wife, and out on $10,000 bail, committed suicide a few days ago by hanging to the rafter of his corn crib. The trial was to have been held at the present term of court at Sac City, and the case promised to be very sensational. When Markley was found, his body had apparently been hanging about two hours. The Markley case attracted much attention at the time of his arrest on account of the peculiar actions of the man's sons, who seemed more concerned about their property interests than the guilt of the father. One son suggested that the father plead guilty, as it would save much expense, and while the father might be put to death it could be done by electricity and wouldn't be very painful. Mrs. Markley was found dead in the barn yard, where she was supposed to have committed suicide. Developments in the case, however, indicated she had been murdered and the old man was arrested. It is said he made some damaging admissions. The family is quite wealthy, but, it is said, indulged in frequent quarrels.

Worrying for months because he could not get forgiveness for an imaginary deed, Harry Weymouth, 21 years of age of Sioux City, read the Bible until his mind gave way under the strain and the unfortunate young man was ordered confined in the state insane hospital at Cherokee for treatment. "I must get forgiveness" he would say when efforts were made to stop him. He never attended church.

Carl Coulson met with an accident at Grinnell which may result fatally. He had taken the job of cleaning the smokestack of the electric light plant preparatory to painting it. He had ascended to the top of the stack, fifty feet, when the half-inch rope parted, and he fell, striking in a partially sitting position, on a tin roof with such force as to crash through the tin and also to break the boarding, and a joist to which the tin was fastened. He was picked up and taken to his home. The extent of his injuries are not known at present. He did not lose consciousness, and the fact that he was not paralyzed shows that his back is not broken.

There were born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Huffman, prosperous farmers living four miles northwest of Lamoni, a few days ago twin boys, each weighing exactly ten pounds. They are probably the largest twins ever born in Iowa, and are attracting much attention. To this same family were born six years ago triplets. They are now fine healthy girls, and look so much alike strangers cannot tell them apart. The appearance of these twins does not attract the attenion in their township, Bloomington, as it does from other places, as this is the fourth pair of twins to make its appearance within that immediate neighborhood within six months.

S. Bird is under arrest at Council Bluffs charged with being one of the three men implicated in the recent hold-up at Graves' store on Graham avenue. George W. Catterlin, the railroad man who was one of the victims of the robbers, has identified Bird as one of the two men who entered the store and compelled him to hand over his watch and chain and $2.50 in cash. Catterlin has filed an information against Bird and Archie Walker. Walker is alleged by Catterlin to be the man who robbed him, while Bird kept a revolver pointed at him. Bird is well known to the police. He but recently completed a sentence in the penitentiary at Ft. Madison, having been sent up for burglary.

J. J. Stevenson, a salesman for the Garr-Scott threshing machine people, was killed in a runaway at Gilbert Station, six miles north of Ames. Stevenson had been in the country west of Gilbert to see a threshing outfit. After completing his work Geo. McNaughton was driving him back to Gilbert to take the train for Des Moines. Arriving in Gilbert the team was frightened by a couple of rolls of woven wire which were in front of one of the stores. Plunging suddenly to one side the pole of the buggy was broken off and the team, which was a pair of wild three-year-olds, started to run. Mc Naughton jumped out and received several scratches and bruises but nothing serious. Stevenson failed to jump until the team had acquired considerable speed. In crossing the railroad tracks the broken pole caught, thereby causing the buggy to rear up in the air, pitching Stevenson violently from the vehicle, striking on his head with such force that his skull was crushed. Medical aid was called but death occurred shortly after the body was picked up.

Bert Sheppard, the young Oskaloosa man arrested recently at Muscatine on the charge of the murder of Arthur Meade at West Liberty May 14th, was acquitted in his preliminary hearing and fifteen minutes later a negro, Tom Clay, who was largely responsible for his arrest, was ordered to leave Muscatine by the first train. The testimony of Bert Jordan of Iowa City was conclusive evidence that Sheppard corresponded in no particular to the man seen in Iowa City by Officer Mac Burnett on the night preceding the murder and who the officers are sure committed the crime. Clay, who was just released from the Johnson county jail, where he served a sentence for crushing a man's skull, led Sheriff Hoffer and Officer Mac Burnett to believe that the man who had been seen by them was in Muscatine. Coming to Muscatine he pointed out Sheppard. He also claimed to have other evidence at hand. Accordingly Sheppard was arrested. Following the Oskaloosa man's release the indignation against Clay was so intense County Attorney Ingham, Sheriff Sweart and Justice Eversmeyer called him up and gave him until the next train to leave town. He left. Clay is a detective who figured in the cases against saloonkeepers in Muscatine ten years ago when the Mahin house was blown up with dynamite. Sheppard left town and it is believed he did not return to Oskaloosa.

IOWA LEADS ALL.

State Fair to Surpass the Chicago Live Stock Show in Every Respect.

Des Moines, August 15.—Secretary J. C. Simpson, of the State Agricultural society, has not only booked every exhibitor at Chicago with but one exception, but has many more in addition. The list of exhibitors puts this year's fair the greatest in the history of the country. When the new cattle, horse and hog barns were built last year, the management felt that the capacity would be sufficient for all time. In one year, however, additional barns, sheds and pens are required. What is true of the Live Stock exhibit holds good in every department. The machinery exhibit has taken all the available space for such purpose and tents by the score on acre after acre of space will be filled with the greatest exhibit of machinery ever shown at a fair. Iowa is the largest purchaser of farm machinery of any state in the world as shown by the last government census and manufacturers are courting Iowa markets as they never did before. Space for these are at a premium and the State Fair management is confronted with the necessity of purchasing more land to add to the 266 acres now filled to over-flowing.

The races will be better than ever and the amusements before the grand stand will present the newest, most startling and daring features ever put before. Space for these is at a premtechnic display, the burning of Rome will be the most gorgeous fire works spectacle the Pain people ever produced. This will be shown four nights during State Fair week. Additional facilities in railroad and trolley cars have been secured to handle the crowds to and from the city. The Rock Island will have night service on their Fair Ground line. The new street car depot within the grounds is a new and novel attraction in itself. The new hog pavilion will be dedicated the first day of the fair. Applications from people in counties as far as Dubuque on the east and Sioux City on the west have been made by the score for camping on the grounds. Whole neighborhoods will drive to the fair and erect their tents or rent them from the fair management and will be inhabitants of the State Fair city during the entire week. As the grounds are furnished free this year for camping, families are coming by the hundreds. It is an economical way to see the State Fair. Special arrangements for board and lodging are being provided by the Commercial Exchange of Des Moines which will maintain a bureau of information near the Union and Rock Island stations where respectable lodging places may be secured at reasonable rates.

Roy King, seventeen, and Albert Hagen, sixteen, are under arrest at Davenport charged with the theft of jewelry, spoons, opera glasses and other valuables stolen from the home of ex-Alderman William Hunt. Hagen confessed and led the officers to the spot where the stolen plunder was buried. He gave a $500 bond. King is in jail.

Albert E. Isenhart, the Iowa Central fireman who, with a wife living in Marshalltown, married Emma Mitchell of Clemons, at Webster City on July 16, was bound over to the Hamilton county grand jury, at Webster City, at the conclusion of his preliminary hearing. His bonds were placed at $500, which he was unable to furnish, and he was remanded to jail. Mrs. Isenhart was in Webster City to testify against her husband at the preliminary hearing, as was also Miss Mitchell, his illegal wife. The defense was not outlined in the preliminary, no evidence being introduced. The grand jury in Hamilton county will meet next month and Isenhart's trial, before the district court, providing an indictment is returned, will likely occur at the September term.

After thirty years of preparation and eighteen years of active writing, ex-Governor Benjamin F. Gue of this city is about to pronounce his task of writing a history of the state of Iowa from the glacial period to the twentieth century, completed. The last proof on the history has been read and when the index is prepared the four volumes, each containing about 500 pages, will be ready for the last stage of book making. Nearly all of the printing is done and some of the volumes are bound, but it is not expected any distribution of the books will be made before the first of January, as the Century History company of New York, the publishers, were given until that time in the contract between them and the author to solicit subscriptions before the issue was made.

According to the latest reports, the Great Western has been sold to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Missouri, Kansas & Texas systems. The story emanates from Chicago, where rumors have been rife concerning the Great Western for several days, owing to the fact that President Stickney admitted that he was negotiating with the Gould systems for the sale of his property. The new story is regarded by many as very plausible, as it will enable the combined systems to turn the traffic to the south, where, in probability, will be established the great seaport of the future. It is claimed in railroad circles that President Stickney is anxious to dispose of the road. This is said to be the cause of the rate cutting which he has been doing the past few years. By slicing the rates, it is alleged that he has endeavored to force the lines which are in competition with him to form a pool and purchase the road.

Do not fail to try Colfax Mineral Water during the warm weather. It is a good all-round tonic and cleanses the system. Pure, sparkling and pleasant to drink. Colfax Bottling Works, Colfax, Iowa.

The Two Captains

Here the conversation was interrupted by the arrival of supper, and the two men talked of trivial things until the conclusion of the meal, when Pope produced a bottle of brandy, filled a glass, and passing the bottle to the leveled arm of his guest, began in sober earnest:

"The idea of trying for my fortune as a pirate came into my head on hearing of Jackman's adventure. You have the spirit of the buccaneer and know something of the life of the pirate. Why should not a shrewd, resolute and fearless man easily fill his hold?"

"Given a ship, given a crew, there is plenty to be done, no doubt," said Crystal. "But it's perilous work; it's short shift if you're nabbed. But why won't you give me your scheme?"

Captain Pope considered a little. "If I satisfy you that it may be done, will you join me as second in command?"

"Yes," answered Crystal like an echo.

"See here," said Pope, in a low, cold, emphatic voice. "I want money to fit out this expedition. Now there was a deal of valuable plate in my family and it all went, in ways there is no need to describe, into the hands of an aunt of mine, a woman who lives on a small income in a little house called Updown, hard by Margate. A large portion of that plate is mine by right of my being my father's son. I choose to think it so, and I mean to have it." He clenched his fist and let it fall.

"The value?" said Crystal coolly.

"All fifteen hundred pounds."

"That'll buy you the ship. Where's the cash to come from to victual her?"

"Staunton will take three hundred down and a bill for the remainder. I'll help ye to find some stiff 'uns. How many of a crew?"

"A hundred and eighty tons," mused Pope. "Allow for ten men to be sent adrift. What say to a company of forty?"

"Oh, plenty," echoed Captain Crystal swiftly, "but plenty if you please, Pope, for sharp work. This sort of cruise is not a thing a man extends."

"No, by heaven," answered Pope. "But I shall want ten thousand pounds out of it."

"A man must live," said Crystal. "I've fought for this country as a privateersman, and as God is our saviour I don't mean to starve for her. I'm with ye, Pope."

They sat drinking and talking until about the hour of eleven. Pope found the ideas, and Crystal the objections; and in this fashion they trimmed the sail of their ordinary project, till, with a strange hearty cry, Pope struck a powerful hand into his friend's, saying, "You see now how it may be done? To-morrow we'll dine together at the Mitre, and thence to Rotherhithe."

Mr. William Crossman was a well-known character at Rotherhithe in the early years of this century.

His public house was after the regular pattern of low taverns. It had a bar behind which stood sometimes Mrs. and sometimes Miss Crossman; and it had a parlor which was very comfortably fitted. The place smelled foully of acid ale, and was commonly full of seafaring men, some of them of a rather peculiar type.

Now, after dining at the Mitre, as had been prearranged, Captain Pope and Captain Crystal arrived at the Camperdown public house, and entered.

"This is Captain Pope, a friend of mine, Miss Angelica," says Crystal, and Pope flourished his hat to the lady, who bowed and simpered as she sank in a curtsey.

Pope Flourished His Hat.

Curse him! if he didn't give me that chance, he'll find his ship gone. For I've made up my mind. I'm a desperate man. The black flag flies aboard the Gypsy already, and I see plunder enough in our hold to maintain us as gentlemen for life."

"How dy'e mean to fetch this plate?" asked Captain Crystal.

"There be two ways," responded Captain Pope; "you may take it by road, or you may take it by water. My idea, Crystal, is to hire a ten or twelve-ton cutter, and sail to Margate, land, seize the plate, march with it aboard, and sail away across to Hamburg, where I know a merchant who would take the stuff off my hands at a good price. We should then return and there will have been no risk."

"It may be done," said Crystal, "but what with the burglary, and what with the bringing of the plate across country, and what with its shipment on a coast where the blockaders get the sight of lynxes and the smell of bloodhounds from the jobs the smugglers put 'em to, it'll prove as dangerous an undertaking as could ever make the stoutest heart pause."

"Do you pause?" cried Pope, wildly leaning forward and staring with desperate glowing eyes at the other.

Crystal tapped here and there with his square foot.

"I don't pause," said he. "I raise objections to grease your keels with. It may be done, I say. Where do you look to find seamen?"

"I may profess a respectable voyage, and they'll sign for an honorable run. When we are at sea, I'll call them aft, and those who object I'll send adrift."

"That's it," said Crystal grinning.

Pope was about to order two glasses of brandy, when Crystal stopped him by saying they would drink with Crossman, and as he spoke Crossman himself stood in his parlor door taking a view of the company with his one eye. He saw Crystal and nodded, and the two captains immediately made for him.

"We've come to have a yarn with you," says Crystal, taking Crossman's great fist. "This is my particular friend, Captain Pope. Shut the door, William, for we want to be private."

"But first, sir," says Captain Pope, "will you ask your lovely daughter to bring us something to drink."

Miss Crossman placed a bottle of brandy upon the table and went out, languishing at Pope, who had a very good knowledge of the use of his own eyes.

"Crossman," says Crystal, opening fire at once, "I'll tell you what we've come here to talk to you about. My friend Captain Pope is the son of a gentleman who owned a quantity of plate. This fine silver plate found its way into the possession of an old lady, Captain Pope's aunt, but it don't belong to her, it belongs to Pope. He was at sea when the lawyers got fingering the property, and, like all sailors he was robbed. My friend wants to recover his own."

"Very natural and proper," exclaimed Crossman. "What might be the value of this 'ere plate, sir?"

"From twelve to fifteen hundred pounds," answered Pope. "But it'll fetch, I allow, no more than from six to eight hundred."

Crossman nodded as though he should say, "Fire away, I don't see your meaning."

Pope then told him that the plate was stowed away in a lonely house near Margate, occupied by the old lady, and maybe others—he could not yet tell; that he had once had an idea of fetching his property by road; but was hindered by the troubles and perils he foresaw when he and his companions left the house with the plate.

"In fact," he said, "we should be chased and captured."

"And hanged," said the ex-prize fighter.

'For possessing myself of my own?" cried Pope, with his eyes full of cruelty and temper, as he bridled and threw his strong arm dramatically on to the table.

"They'd hang us, Pope," grunted Crystal.

"Any way," continued Pope, flashing into cheerfulness and cordiality, "the road being out of the question, Mr. Crossman, nothing but the water remains; and we propose to proceed for our property by sea."

"How can I help you?" said Crossman, looking uneasily at Crystal.

"You may put me in the way of hiring a sloop of ten to twenty tons," Pope said; "but that's the least part."

"William," exclaimed Crystal, "the long and short of it's this—we want you to give us the names and the homes of three men who may not be wholly unused to jobs of this sort, and who, for a handsome consideration, will be willing to ship as our crew."

"Oh, that's your want," said Crossman thoughtfully. He put his finger to his nostrils, and striding to the door opened it, and stood looking forth upon the bar with its crowd of drinkers.

On a sudden the ex-prizefighter whistled and beckoned, and after draining a pewter pot, there approached him, with some marks of astonishment on his wicked face, a middle-sized man wearing an old beaver hat and a worn-out monkey-jacket.

"Bobbin," exclaimed Crossman, "step in here a minute. There's two gents who want a word with you. Here's one man for your purpose, Captain Pope," he said; but he remained in the doorway.

"What's your name?" said Captain Pope to the man the prizefighter had summoned.

"Robert Bobbin," answered the fellow, in a rough, raw voice, with his head stooped, twirling his hat, his greasy black hair tumbling about his face, on which the devil had written the word rogue in eye, nose, and mouth.

Captain Pope began to talk to him in a very low voice, and Captain Crystal drew close, pipe in hand, and listened. Crossman, in the doorway, seeing this, directed his one eye at Captain Pope, to whom he said:

"There must be no arrangements made in this 'ere house, master. I'm willing to oblige my friend Crystal, but I can't allow myself to be involved."

Then looking at the fellows in the bar, all of whom were eagerly staring in the direction of the parlor, thirstily wondering why Bobbin had been called in, he called out the names of two men, who instantly came tumbling toward him and lurched into the parlor.

Pope looked them up and down; one was a haggard man, of a broken and dangerous appearance; he was very dark, with a savage squint, and rolled on his legs as he stood, as though the floor of the parlor had been a heaving deck. The other was a little man, very thickset, pale, with brown hair that sat upon his head like a wig, and moist blue protruding eyes. He looked as harmless as the other seemed terrifying.

But they were three men, and very fit for the errand Pope and Crystal designed to carry them on. Beyond a few questions, however, and the taking down of a note or two, Crossman would not permit any conversation.

"No, you must settle your business out of my house," said he; whereupon the three men agreed to present themselves at Captain Pope's lodging next morning. Pope gave each man a guinea, shut the door upon them and the silence was charming.

"Can you put me in the way of hiring a little vessel, something fit to cross the Channel in?" said Captain Pope.

Crossman pondered; there was nothing sinister in this request. After a considerable pause he said:

"There's Jem Marling; you'll find him in Rock street, Greenwich. I know he has a little vessel in which he goes a-coasting, and I believe she'd suit your purpose. Tell yer what I'll do; I'll find out if she's in the river, and if you'll send here to-morrow afternoon I may be able to give you some particulars."

Nothing could be more satisfactory. Pope thanked the prizefighter heartily, and he and Crystal departed.

"Here you'll find your crew for the Gypsy," said Crystal to Pope, as they stepped into the street.

And Pope assented in loud laugh of satisfaction.

ANCIENT POMPEII

EVIDENCES OF CHRISTIANITY

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE)

Were there Christians residing in Pompeii at the period of its destruction? Or, rather, are there any evidences or remains which would lead people to accept this probability?

There are several plausible reasons for conjecturing that Christianity might have reached Pompeii. In the Acts of the Apostles it is related that when St. Paul was on his way to Rome in consequence of his appeal to Caesar, he landed at Puteoli, the modern Pozzuoli, where he was met by Christians, "brethren," who desired him to tarry with them some days. The distance betwen Pozzuoli and Pompeii is about thirty miles. It is not unreasonable, therefore, to expect that, if there were Christians in Pozzuoli, when St. Paul landed at it, there might well be Christians in Pompeii during the twenty years that elapsed between that date and the destruction of it in A. D. 79. Christianity made rapid strides, and it is quite natural to think it reached Pompeii, thirty miles from Pozzuoli, within the space of twenty years.

Temple of Venus.

The most interesting, and, indeed, the most remarkable of discoveries, more or less associated with this subject, was that made in June, 1882, a fresco in which what seems the "Judgment of Solomon" is clearly represented, though the figures are dwarfs. When it was brought to light it was described as the first representation of a sacred subject yet found in Pompeii. It was transferred at once to Naples museum, where it may now be seen. It is 5 feet 6 inches in length by 19 inches high, and is surrounded by a black line about one inch in width.

"The scene," wrote Mr. E. Neville Rolfe, the British consul at Naples, who was, I believe, the first to make its discovery known to the English-speaking world, "the scene is laid upon a terrace in front of a house adorned with creeping plants and shaded with a white awning. On a dais, represented as being about four feet high, sits the king, holding a scepter, and robed in white. On each side of him sits a councilior, and behind them six soldiers under arms. The king is represented as leaning over the front of the dais toward a woman in a green robe, who kneels before him with disheveled hair and outstretched hands.

"In the center of the court is a three-legged table, like a butcher's block, upon which lies an infant, who is held in a recumbent position, in spite of his struggles, by a woman wearing a turban. A soldier in armor, and wearing a helmet with a long red plume, holds the legs of the infant, and is about to cleave it in two with his falchion. A group of spectators completes the picture, which contains in all nineteen figures. The drawing is poor, but the colors are particularly bright, and the preservation is excellent."

How such a subject came to be represented here is a puzzle. Italian archaeologists, said a writer, are generally inclined to think that the biblical narrative had penetrated into Pompeii; Jews from Alexandria, dwelling in a Roman city, must have possessed the Septuagint translation of the Bible. And Niccolo Lazzaro of Naples declares that the facts of the Old Testament were unknown to the pagans, because they were jealously guarded by the Israelites, and they have come down to us by the transformation of Judaism into Christianity.

Of the other people of Pompeii we know much. It is no exaggeration to say that of all the ancient cities of the earth no one has revealed so much of its inner life and manners and customs, its vices and its arts, its beliefs and its costumes, and all that can be known, as Pompeii.

Here on one side we wander into the Temple of Venus, where the worship of that deity prevailed; anon we pass into the semi-ruined amphitheater, once clamorous with the shouts of maddened multitudes, now abandoned and silent save for its marvelous echo.

The empty houses, with the painted columns, rising into the blue air, and now supporting nothing, for the roofs are gone, make the place desolate and lonely to the sensitive mind. Yet there is a joy in wandering in and out of these residences now in ruins, once so elegant and refined, and so rich in works of art, such as the house of Castor and Pollux. The house of the Vetti, a recently excavated dwelling restored in accordance with the ancient style of construction employed in the city, and with nearly all its paintings and statues and gardens, just as they were eighteen centuries ago, is one of the most interesting spectacles that the past has bequeathed to the present.

I have not education enough to appreciate the profound works of voluminous historians; and if I had I have no time to read them. LORD SALISBURY PASSES AWAY Peacefully and Without Evidence of Pain He Sinks Into Eternal Sleep.

HIS WONDERFUL POWER

Entered Parliament at Age of 23 and Became Leader at Once---Held Position of Prime Minister Longer Than Any Other Man.

London, August 24.—Lord Salisbury, one of the last of the great statesmen of the past generation, is dead under the burden of his advanced age. He died at 9:15 Saturday evening.

Lord Salisbury had been ill since early last winter, but his condition was not regarded as serious until early in the present month. According to the medical journals he suffered from intestinal paresis, which developed from the illness following the death of his wife in 1899. Notwithstanding his illness, he had persisted in working until he was forced to take his bed. As recently as August 7 it was reported that the marquis was engaged on an important work on chemical electrical science, his favorite hobby.

The village of Hatfield which still retains many features of the feudal period, was filled with anxious residents awaiting the news of his lordship's demise. The great Hatfield house, hidden behind the screen of pine trees, was lighted at every window, and gave no sign of the approaching fatality. Groups of watchers clustered on the Elizabethan arcehs' flood gates, anxiously questioning each other.

Finally the news came when a hatless servant dashed down the graveled roadway, saying as he passed, "He has gone," and then disappeared in the church. Soon thereafter the slowly and the villagers at the street corners uncovered in acknowledgment of the passing of their neighbor and friend, England's great statesman.

Viscount Cranborne, who now assumes the title of Marquis of Salisbury, immediately notified King Edward and Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales and others, including Lord Edward Cecil, the soldier son of Lord Salisbury, who is now in Egypt, and who was the only child of the marquis absent from his deathbed. Soon messages of condolence began coming in, and the little telegraph office at Hatfield was swamped with unprecedented business.

The death of Lord Salisbury occurred on the fiftieth anniversary of his entry into public life as a member of the house of commons for Stamford.

The elevation of Lord Cranborne to the house of lords creates a vacancy in the Rocnester district, and probably will entail the selection of a new under secretary of foreign affairs.

In the death of Lord Salisbury passes the greatest Englishman of the day. Ten years ago half of the nation only would have asserted so much; today there is no dissentient voice. To the last day of his premiership Lord Salisbury remained exclusive and aristocratic in life and thought; yet the whole nation learned to trust his guidance and his overwhelming sense of public duty. That sense of public duty never left him; having once thrown off the reins of office, he made none of those sudden excursions into politics so often brught dismay to Mr. Gladstone's ex-colleagues.

In 1860 he was appointed secretary in Lord Derby's second administration. His progress from that time on may be judged from the following table:

Secretary of state for India, 1874-1878.

Secretary of state for foreign affairs, 1878-1880.

Special ambassador at conference on eastern affairs at Constantinople, 1876-1877.

Second plenipotentiary for Great Britain at congress of Berlin, 1878.

Prime minister and secretary of state for foreign affairs, 1885-1886.

Prime minister and first lord of treasury, 1886-1887.

Prime minister and secretary of state of foreign affairs, 1887-1892.

Prime minister and lord privy seal and secretary of state for foreign affairs, 1895-1900.

Prime minister and lard privy seal, 1900-1902.

ADDICKS ACCUSED

Wilmington, Del., August 21.—In the United States circuit court yesterday, George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia, receiver of the Bay State Gas company of Delaware, filed a bill of complaint against J. Edward Addicks, United States Senator J. Frank Alee and others, alleging fraud in connection with a transaction involving the stock of the company, said to be valued at $75,000,000. The bill charges the directors as defendants, except Addicks, with entering into an unlawful combination to issue to Addicks 100,000 shares of stock of the Bay State Gas company, without consideration.

VICTORY EASY FOR RELIANCE

Defender, After Close Fight to Windward, Ran Away From Shamrock.

SHE WON BY NINE MINUTES

That Was Actual Time, But Allowance to Shamrock Cuts It Down---Lipton Still Hoping for the Success of His Boat.

New York, August 23.—In a splendid 12 to 15 knot breeze, over a windward and leeward course of 30 miles, the gallant sloop Reliance Saturday beat Shamrock III in a commanding style by exactly nine minutes actual time, or seven minutes and three seconds after deducting the one minute and fifty-seven seconds which the defender concedes to Sir Thomas Tipton's third challenger on account of Reliance's larger sail plan as at present measured. It was a royal water fight for the ancient trophy which carries with it the yachting supremacy of the world, and by a strange coincidence, the first victory in the cup series of 1903 occurred on the fifty-second anniversary of the day on which the old schooner America captured it for her famous race around the Isle of Wight. Reliance beat the British boat three minutes and twenty-four seconds in the thresh to windward and five minutes and thirty-six seconds in the run down the wind.

The nautical sharps, who had already made up their minds on Thursday that the Reliance could take the measure of the challenger in any kind of weather, regard Saturday's test as conclusive, although they hardly anticipated so overwhelming a victory. The race even dampened the ardor of Sir Thomas who insisted, after Thursday's fluke, that his confidence in the beautiful craft designed by Fife was greater than ever. Still like a true sportsman he does not acknowledge defeat, and hopes for better luck next time. The single criticism he and his friends make of Saturday's race is that the only shift of the wind which occurred was to the advantage of the defender. As this shift of wind occurred on the windward beat, even granting that it accounted for the Reliance's lead at the turn, the time the defender gained on the run home was more than ample to have given her the race. It must be conceded, however, that Shamrock III showed herself a wonderful boat in beating to the windward, perhaps the ablest craft in this respect ever sent across the ocean on a cup hunting expedition. For twelve miles the great single stickers raced like a team of horses and during that portion of the duel the patriots made no attempt to conceal their nervousness.

The size of the enormous excursion fleet and number of sightseers aboard, in the estimation of those who have witnessed many contests, made a record for an international cup race.

Surprised at Russian Action.

Constantinople, Aug. 19.—The report that Russia is about to make a naval demonstration in Turkish waters has been kept a profound secret here, the public being entirely ignorant of Russia's movement. The sailing of the squadron was an unwelcome surprise to the officials here.

Soldiers and safe robbers are obliged to do a lot of drilling.

CZAR'S FLEET RETURNS.

Black Sea Squadron Ordered to Return to Sebastopol.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 24.—The Russian Black Sea squadron, which was ordered to Turkish waters, which arrived at Iniada, European Turkey, Aug 19, to support Russia's demands on the sultan growing out of the assassination of M. Rostkovski, Russian consul at Monastir, has been recalled to Sebastopol, the squadron's point of departure.

The recall followed a notification from the porte that the sultan had ordered all the Russian demands to be complied with.

The dispatch from M. Zinovieff, Russian ambassador at Constantinople, announcing that the sultan had yielded completely to Russia's demands was as follows:

"The porte has taken the following measures to fulfill the demands of the Russian government: In addition to the condemnation and execution of M Rostkovski's murderers and the punishment of their accomplices, those officers who made disrespectful allusions to M. Rostkovski are dismissed from the service. A careful search is being made for the persons who fired at the consul's carriage. All the officials, twenty-four in number, whose names were handed to the porte as objects of unfavorable comment by the Russian ambassador are relieved of their posts and handed over to justice. All private persons mentioned in the same list as guilty of various offenses will likewise be tried.

"Ismal Haki Pasha, the chief of police at Palanka, province of Uskub, is restored to his post. The persons under arrest for accusing Mussulmans of outrage and abuse are liberated.

"Hussein Hilmi, inspector general of Macedonia, is reprimanded. The chiefs of gendarmerie and police at Salonica are replaced.

"The porte has ordered the appointment of a gendarmerie of several foreign officers whose names, will be announced later and finally all military civil and judicial authorities have received the strictest orders to take measures to secure order and tranquility."

CHINA WILL OPEN PORTS.

Chinese Minister Notified of Intention of His Government.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Sir Lien Chen Tung, the Chinese minister, yesterday informed Acting Secretary of State Adee that he had received a dispatch from his government confirming the information previously received that Prince Ching had informed Minister Conger that in the treaty to be signed on October 8, provision would be made for opening two ports in Manchuria. The Chinese minister, after his last conversation with Secretary Hay informed his government that the United States would insist upon open ports in Manchuria, and he advised them to yield gracefully to the American demands.

KILL SULTAN OF SOKOTO.

Battle in Nigeria in Which 700 Were Slain.

London, Aug. 21.—Dispatches received at the colonial office from Zunguru, North Nigeria, dated August 17 give details of the destruction of the town of Burmi by a British force of thirty whites and five hundred native rank and file. The enemy's loss was 700 killed, including former sultan of Sokoto and a majority of the chiefs. The British loss was eleven men killed, including one officer, and sixty-two men wounded. The enemy made a desperate house to house resistance.

Dan Patch Breaks Pacing Record.

New York, Aug. 20.—Dan Patch broke the world's record for pacers by pacing a mile in 1:59 at Brighton Beach yesterday. It was a magnificent performance, and seemed an impossibility as there was a stiff breeze blowing and the track was a little slow.

Gen. John C. Black of Illinois, was elected commander in chief of the G. A. R., at the San Francisco encampment, and Boston was chosen as the place for the holding of the next encampment.

Gen. Black made a brief address of thanks to the convention, and pledged himself to work for the good of the order.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles was called upon as soon as Boston was chosen as the next meeting place, as the selection was taken as a declaration that it meant the election of Miles to the chief office in his home city in 1904. Gen. Miles made a speech that was cordially received.

A proposition to admit sons of veterans into the Grand Army posts was strongly supported, but after an extended debate was defeated by a small majority.

ONE OF THE LARGEST IRRIGATING CANALS IN THE WORLD.

A Project of the State of Idaho.

On the west side of the Snake river in Idaho, between Blackfoot and American Falls, there is being constructed by the American Falls Canal & Power company, under a contract with the state of Idaho, an irrigating canal 85 feet wide and 60 miles long. When finished, this canal will be one of the largest and most perfect irrigating systems in the world. By its means a valley of 100,000 acres of the most fertile and productive fruit and farm land in America will be reclaimed

The climate of this valley is ideal. Cyclones, hot winds, floods or destructive storms have never been known.

Grain, grass, vegetables and all varieties of fruit grow in abundance. A healthful climate, a sure crop, a heavy yield, high prices and a ready market, are features of this country.

Ten thousand acres of this rich land are now ready for irrigation and settlement. Purchase tickets to Blackfoot via Oregon Short Line Railway Co.

WHAT FOR? A Good, Healthy, Happy Home.
WHY? Because our $20 to $30 an acre land is producing as heavy crops of corn and small grain as your $100 an acre land, with half the work of cultivation. Because we have the soil, the climate, the rainfall and the resources to make our state the richest and the Best State in the Union.
Don't you believe it? Well, then, you wouldn't believe us either, so write for letters of testimony from the HUNDREDS OF HOMESEEKERS we have LOCATED IN THE PAST FOUR YEARS. All questions cheerfully answered. Statistics for the asking. Its worth your stamp.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Their Use.

"What I don't see," remarked the cheerful idiot, "is the use of scientists discovering new metals like radium and polonium, that costs thousands of dollars an ounce."

"It is done for the benefit of the future trillionaires," replied the wise guy. "They can get rid of some of their money by building yachts, automobiles and airships out of those metals."

Now They Are Strangers.

Edyth—That handsome reporter for the Weekly Zazoo paid me a pretty compliment.

Mayme—Indeed!

Edyth—Yes. In his account of the reception I was mentioned as being among the most beautiful girls present.

Mayme—Why, of course, now that you mention it, I remember seeing you among them myself.

A Fish Dinner.

Charlie once said that there was nothing he liked better than a good fish dinner. This would have been rather conceited of Charlie had he known at the time he himself was destined to be one.

As Good as His Word.

The Sultan of Jingjangju frowned.

"Much as it pains me," he remarked to the abject subject who has displeased him, "I must make an example of you."

Adding something about subtracting the sum from his salary, which had been recently multiplied, the Sultan drew his sword and neatly divided the subject.

Merely Amusing.

"You may talk as you please," said the man who thought he was in society, "but it is ridiculous to pretend that the masses are not interested in the reports of the doing of the swell set."

"Of course they're interested," replied the plain man; "everybody's interested in a good joke."

Turned Out.

"Our colleges turn out some pretty good men nowadays," remarked the elderly gentleman.

"Yes," replied his son gloomily, "our college turned out the man who was sure to have won the 100-yard dash for us next year—just because he didn't pass any of his examinations."

On a Charger.

Teacher—And what was the request that Herod's daughter made in respect to John the Baptist?

Pupil—She asked to have his head brought in on horseback.

Teacher—Where did you come by that ridiculous idea. She asked to have it presented on a charger.

Pupil—Well, and ain't a charger a horse, I'd like to know?

Explained.

Willie (who has attended three rainy Sunday school excursions)—Mamma, why does it rain every day?

Mamma—Well, Willie, I think that all the farmers must have prayed for rain, and God has been answering each prayer separately.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

L. C. Tiedmann, a traveling salesman of Burlington, was struck by No. 13, the fast Burlington train at Mount Pleasant and probably fatally injured.

While sitting at an organ at the home of Mrs. Ida M. Irelan, near Cincinnati, Joe Clarke, son of J. G. Clarke, was shot through the head, accidentally, and died instantly. A son of Mrs. Irelan discharged the revolver while passing it to Clarke.

Chief of Police Rundgren of Clinton received a message from the chief of police of Winona, Minn., saying the murdered body of Newton Hillard of Clinton had been found opposite Winona. The body was identified by letters in the pockets. A few weeks ago the father of the murdered man died, leaving considerable property. Soon after this Newton left home and but little had been heard from him. He leaves a wife and children in Clinton. No particulars regarding the tragedy have been received.

Timothy Fairchild, Sr., of Coralville, is the possessor of some fine hogs. He raises two breeds and most of them are registered, and are of the right sort. Neither of the breeds are very common in this section of the country. One is the Tamworth and the other is the Yorkshire. The Yorkshire hog is a lengthy, white hog, and the breed has long been known in the west, though not common of late, while the Tamworth is not only lengthy but has large, fine bones, stands high and weighs well. Mr. Fairchild has a number of the latter that are wonders for this section of the country. Without any flesh to speak of one of them weighs in the neighborhood of 1,000 pounds and another weighs 800. He has several that weigh in the vicinity of 600.

Allen Eleigh, a young farmer living near Stanwood, was killed by a Northwestern train at a crossing at Cedar Rapids. His horse was killed and buggy smashed.

S. F. Creitz, an old citizen of Deep River, committed suicide. He left the house at 5:30, went to the barn and there ended his life by shooting himself. The bullet passed through the lower part of the heart. He died about one hour later.

Ida M. Illingsworth of Cambridge has brought suit against M. D. Illingsworth of the same village, for $5,000 damages alleged in her petition to have been sustained by her through false and malicious language uttered by the defendant in the case. Mr. Illingsworth, the defendant, is a father-in-law of Ida, and a short time ago herself and husband were divorced. Through the action and talk of her husband's father her peace of mind and general reputation has been injured to the extent that it will take the above amount to repair the damage and properly replace her before the eyes of a cold and cruel world.

Notice has been served on the county auditor of Webster county of a suit for damages to the amount of $20,000 filed by M. Wheeler against Webster county for injuries received on July 4. Wheeler, it will be remembered, was the man who was injured on the Fourth of July by being struck upon the head by the falling body of Clara Rassmussen, the young woman who lost her life in an attempt to perform the "Slide for Life" act from the north side of the court house. Wheeler sustained injuries of the head which were considered serious at the time, besides other injuries about the body. He was taken to the hospital, where he remained several weeks.

W. C. Whiting, of Whiting, chairman of the Agricultural Division of the Iowa Commission of the Louisiana Purchase Commission, has personally presented to Ames college and the Iowa Corn Growers' association, a trophy valued at $450.00, which will be awarded annually for seventy-five years for the best results in corn growing. The trophy will be a gold and silver representation of an ear of corn mounted on an ebony pedestal. The ear of corn will be eighteen inches high, the husks of sterling silver and the outside ones turning down for use as handles. The ear of corn will be of gold. Its top will be detachable and it will contain a space inside of the ear. W. H. Beck, the well known Sioux City jeweler, originated the design which has been universally commended for its beauty and appropriateness. The trophy will be in charge of the Iowa Agricultural college and in case of failure to compete for it, it will become the property of that institution. It was originally the plan of the Iowa commission of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition to give the trophy for an Iowa showing of corn. There was insufficient funds for this purpose so Mr. Whiting made a personal donation to permit the award of the prize. The base of the cup will be of ebony with shields decorated with tiny golden ears of corn on each of the four sides. The frost shield will be a map of the Union in silver with the Louisiana Purchase shown in gold and with Iowa marked as a state. On the shields on the opposite side of the base the following will be engraved:

"Iowa State Corn Trophy presented by Will C. Whiting, Whiting, Iowa, Chairman of the Department of Agriculture, for the best specimens of corn grown in the state of Iowa in 1903, corn to be used as an exhibit at Louisiana Purchase Exposition at St. Louis, 1904."

On one of the shields the following will be inscribed:

"This trophy will be competed for annually and awarded by judges appointed by the Chairman of the Department of Agronomy of the Iowa Agricultural College."

Lightning struck the barn of Herman Richtsmeier, four miles southwest of Ackley, totally consuming it with his horse barn, cattle barn, and granary. The barn was a large one and was built only last year. Mr. Reichtsmeier had already threshed, and all his grain and hay were in the barn and granary. None of the family was at home, and the place was literally swept of everything but the house. The financial loss will be heavy.

Sidney Dodge, who left Marshalltown with the contents of the cash drawer of the Postal Telegraph company, has been arrested at Wilton Junction.

A frightful accident occurred at the McConey bridge near Villisca, in which Frank Kenworthy and Bert Sadler each lost a limb and will perhaps lose their lives. In crossing the bridge with a traction engine, the bridge gave way and dropped twelve feet, pinning both down underneath it and crushing and scalding them in a most terrible manner. The men from the surrounding country worked heroically, but it took almost three hours to release them. Doctors were summoned and amputation was decided necessary in both cases. Everything is being done for them, but there is little hope for their recovery.

John J. Johnson, a laborer, who had been working in the Morrell packing house at Ottumwa, was found dead in the city park. Heart failure, resulting from overwork, is given as the cause of his death.

Fred Meyers, a brakeman on the Illinois Central, was almost instantly killed by being run over by his train near the city limits of Waterloo. The train crew did not miss him until they reached Jesup. Mrs. Kennedy, heard Meyers' cries and found him almost cut in two. He lived thirty minutes after being found. His family resides in Waterloo. Meyers was 25 years old Brakeman J. L. Roby, whose home is at Creston, and who was working for Conductor Longstreet, met with an accident at Glenwood that cost him part of his foot. The train was switching and Roby attempted to step on the brakebeam when his foot slipped and the engine run over it. His foot was so badly crushed that amputation was necessary. He had been employed with the company a little less than a year.

A death from a most peculiar cause occurred at Creston a few days ago. The 7-year-old daughter of John Ponte, a Burlington conductor, was taken sick ten days ago, with what physicians pronounced dysentery. In spite of their best efforts the little one grew worse, till her death occurred. An autopsy revealed the fact that the child had swallowed peas whole, that they had sprouted and were growing in her stomach. The case is said to be one of the most peculiar on record.

Rachel Watkins, a professional nurse of Ames, has brought suit against five prominent ladies of that city for $2,000 damages which she claims she has sustained through alleged malicious and slanderous talk of the defendants. She claims that in addition to defaming her character and injuring her reputation they have accused her of aiding in a theft. Two thousand dollars is not too much to repay her for the damage sustained she considers, and brings suit against Mesdames Nina Smith, Hattie McCarthy, Sallie Moffat, Anna C. Nichols and Addie Trusdale through her attorney, George Underwood, to recover that amount. The defendants in the case are all prominent Ames ladies.

Fearing to trust the banks with his accumulations, Samuel Johnson went to sleep at Centerville with $1,300 in gold and greenbacks in his pockets and awoke to find them gone and the man with whom he had gone to bed, missing. After considerable drinking during the afternoon with some companions he had retired at the home of John Strickland with Bob Strickland and Will Burgess in the same room. All had been on a spree and Johnson had been pretty free with his money. On waking Johnson found Strickland had gone to his sister nearby, gave her $20 in gold and told her to keep still and then fled. He has not been found. He has been a sort of wandering character with Ottumwa and Muscatine as his principal haunts. Officers are watching for him at both places. Johnson was for many years engaged in liquor selling and at present is said to be an agent for some wholesale liquor house with headquarters at Mendota, Mo.

Hon. Thomas Bell of Fairfield dropped dead behind the counter in his store while waiting upon a lady customer. The deceased has been in ill health for several years, but recently he was considered to have regained his old time vigor and the news of his death comes like a flash from a clear sky and the blow to his wife, who is ill, is a severe one. The deceased was born in Pennsylvania and at his death was about 63 years of age, having resided in Iowa for a period of forty-four years. He removed with his parents from that state to Kossuth, Iowa, where he enlisted in the war of the rebellion, serving through the war and then moving to Fairfield, where he embarked in the grocery business. He also served as one of the trustees of the College for the Blind at Vinton, and became very much interested in the work there. In 1895 he was nominated and elected as senator to the Twenty-sixth general assembly, representing the Second senatorial district, composing the counties of Jefferson and Van Buren, where he served one term, being succeeded to that place by Hon. H. H. Brighton.

A tray of diamond rings valued at $3,000 was stolen from the jewelry store of A. C. Taylor & Son at Cedar Rapids a few days ago. There is not the slightest clue as to who committed the robbery, and how the tray was taken from the show window without attracting attention is also a deep mystery. There were eighty-one rings in the tray. As is the custom they were placed on display in the show window in the morning. About 10 o'clock one of the clerks went to the window to get an article for a customer and noticed that the valuable tray of diamonds had vanished. There has been no one in the store during the morning who would attract suspicion as a diamond thief, nor had anyone been observed loitering near the inner doors that encase the windows. To secure the diamonds it was necessary to unlock the window doors and slide them back. It takes little time to do this and there is generally some noise connected with the operation. But the party or parties who made the rich haul were evidently experts as not the slightest suspicious noise had been heard in the store. The Messrs. Taylor and their clerks are at a loss to account for the manner in which the valuables disappeared, but they are of the opinion that it was the work of experts at diamond lifting. The police are at work on the case but so far not the slightest clue has developed.

CHAPTER III.
The Burglary.

Twelve days had passed since the foregoing. Approaching Margate roads was a small sloop with a great mainsail swelling at her mast, which was stayed in the most unsightly manner aft.

Crystal and Pope stood together near the long tiller over which Bobbin was hanging, gazing at the scene around them.

"I have been turning the matter over, Crystal," said Pope, "and I'm certain our best chance lies in bringing up off Margate and sending the boat round to Dumpton Gap to wait for us after we've landed. If this sloop comes within sight of the Ramillies she'll be sending a boat."

"You're right in keeping out of sight of that there Ramillies, gents," exclaimed Bobbin. "I don't know a ship-of-war where a brighter lookout's kept."

Presently the sloop was within an easy pull of Margate town. Here Captain Pope brought her to a stand, and the boat was launched. Pope and Crystal had talked long and earnestly. All was settled and nothing remained but to go ashore, get the plate, and sail away for Hamburg.

There were three men and Captain Pope; these were to go in the boat, leaving Crystal to see to the sloop, whose canvas they had snugged for him. The three were to plunder poor Miss Hornby, and Captain Pope, her nephew, was one of them.

When the boat reached the shore he stepped out, and the hired men, one of them named Steve merely, the other called Maddison, followed.

It was drawing on to midnight when Pope and his men came to a gate in a tall hedge. Pope pushed open the gate, and the three walked swiftly to the house, using one side of an emerald sward that was divided by a narrow path of gravel; so that their footfalls were as a cat's.

A bar was thrust into the keyhole, all three stormed and sweated, and immediately, amid a great noise of the rending of bolts and the splintering of wood, the door flew open. There was no light in the night to flow in through the doorway, and the passage was in pitch darkness. Pope, though not a professional burglar, had provided for this. He pulled out of his pocket a little engine whose invention belonged to that age. It consisted of a trigger and a flint, and when the trigger leaped a clear flame sprang. At this flame the Captain lighted a piece of candle.

He then sprang up a narrow staircase. Pope could not err in deciding which of the two doors that stood before him belonged to his aunt's room; he entered, and by his candlelight saw the figure of the poor old lady stretched in a fit upon her back on the floor. Alas, poor old Miss Hornby! her seventy-one years could not support the shock of a burglary, and she lay as dead in a swoon in her nightgown and nightcap.

Pope dragged down the window-blind and lighted a candle in a stick, then, casting a glance at the lean high perched nose that shot out betwixt the closed eyes and the disordered frills of the nightcap, he seized the candlestick and ran to the door.

Voices were to be heard upstairs.

"Now come you down quietly and we won't hurt you. Put on a petticoat and bear a hand."

"Bring her down," roared Pope.

He held high his candlestick and there descended a narrow, wooden uncarpeted staircase the shape of a female in a flannel petticoat, the rest of her apparel being that of the bed. She was a middle-aged female, and was indeed the only servant Miss Hornby kept, or perhaps could afford to keep. She was of a dreadful whiteness and her eyes shone like fire.

"We don't want your life," rattled out Captain Pope, speaking behind his mask. "Where does your mistress keep her plate? Take us to it."

The wretched woman fell upon her knees.

"Oh, don't ask me!" she shrieked. "Must I?" she yelped hysterically.

"Up you get," said Maddison, hoisting her on to her legs. "You must, and if you don't and at once, I know where that knife's kept which——"

On this, with a flinging carriage and awful air of distress, the unhappy woman moved down the staircase in ghastly silence, Pope and the seamen following closely. She opened the door of a room that might have been the parlor, and pointing to a great cupboard that stood out from the wall like that article or furniture they call a wardrobe, she said in a whisper, "You'll find it there," and instantly sank speechless upon the floor in a kind of fit.

Pope rushed to the cupboard. It was locked, of course; they pried the door open in a minuate, and there on three shelvees was arranged a quantity of handsome, massive plate, mostly of old pattern. They found tableclothes and quilts and very rapidly they made up the plate into three weighty loads, none, however, too heavy for a stout fellow to carry with ease, and Pope took care not to leave a mustard-spoon behind him.

CHAPTER IV.
The March to the Sea.

When they left the cottage they shut the house door, securing it by a wedge. Not a living shape moved in any direction. "Come now," says Pope, "and let's step out lads."

They got into the road, every man with a heavy bundle of plate over his shoulder, and started at a walk that came near to a trot. By-and-by they came to a narrow turning which they took, and skirting the little town of Broadstairs, they entered some undulating fields, sinking and rising over which went a tape-like path.

"Look," says Steve, coming to a stand, "ain't those two men ahead yonder lookouts?"

Captain Pope, after a prolonged stare at the shapes which were growing in the gloom and therefore approaching, cried out with one of those oaths he was so free with, "I believe I see their muskets. Are they armed? If so they are blockaders and we must cut them down or be taken."

"Not by two," says Maddison, and he struck the pistol in his breast.

The line of path rose and fell. There was not a bush behind which the three could conceal themselves. But since the approaching men were plain in view, the three also must have been seen by them. It was useless to turn aside.

"Shove right on," says Pope, "and leave me to do the talking. They may not be what I think."

He set his teeth and they trudged on, grotesque in bulk with their bundles. The approaching men were walking leisurely. Not until they were within pistol shot, so unsatisfying was the light, could Pope make sure that each carried a musket on his shoulder, that they were sailors, a couple of blockaders, in short, from the man-of-war in the Downs. They stopped and one challenged Pope's party.

"You're out late, bo's. Where 's bound to. Are them your kits on your backs?"

"We're bound for Ramsgate," Pope answered. "I'm master of a ship lying in the Downs, and these are two of my men. Good-night. Let's pass you."

And he made as if he would advance.

"What's in them bundles?" asked one of the man-of-warsmen gruffly and determinedly. "Come, we must find that out."

"These bundles contain property of my own," said Pope, speaking coolly. "See here we are three to two, and shall we ask you to give us or yourselves a chance? Why, my hearts, though we serve under different flags, we are sailors all. Here's ten guineas to divide between you."

He dropped his bundle to get the money, and the plate clanked as it smote the hard path.

"Take this," said he, pulling out a long leather purse, "and let us be gone as peaceably disposed men in the name of the King."

The seamen answered with a menacing movement of their muskets. One of them then drove his bayonet into the bundle Pope had dropped, and said:

"It's metal, Tom."

"Down with them bundles," said the other man-of-warseman to Steve and Maddison, and he stepped close to them, holding his musket dangerously.

"If it must be," shouted Pope, "Steve, Maddison, this is for your lives; have at them.

He was a man of great strength and commanding figure. He drew his knife, springing with nervous murderous violence upon the man-of-warsman who had pricked his bundle. He caught the leveled bayonet in one hand, and went twisting with the musket on to the unfortunate seaman, who, shrieking, "Tom, he's done for me!" fell at his whole length across the path.

Steve and Maddison and grappled with the other man-of-warsman, and Steve had whipped out his iron jemmy meaning to brain the man; but when the seaman fell to Captain Pope's blow and cried out, his mate, leaving his musket in the hands of his assailants, broke from them like smoke, and fled across the fields in the direction of the sea.

They left the man-of-warsman lying dead, stretched across the narrow pathway. The figure of the running seaman had disappeared in the gloom upon the fields.

They shouldered their heavy loads and went away at a rapid trot for Dumpton Gap, which, in about ten minutes' time they turned into and descended.

As they neared the bottom, where they might see the faint yellow shadow of the sands stretching into the white line of surf. It was a quarter to four.

"Daybreak!" shouted Pope, "and as I live, there's the boat."

Captain Pope had no need to hail the boat; Bobbin instantly saw them and stood up, simply lifting his arm, then, with incredible activity, he drew in his fishing line and, springing over the thwarts into the bows, dragged the anchor into the boat, and all in a minute, the little fabric came sculling toward that part of the sand where the three men were standing.

Pope directed his eyes to the right and to the left of the range of cliffs; not a human soul looked down. But the flying man-of-warsman must have already gained Broadstairs, and by this time the alarm would be raised.

"Has the blockade a station at Broadstairs?" said Pope, hoarse with fatigue and the passions which were plowing up his soul.

The others, not knowing, made no answer. It was blowing a small air of wind out of the West. Three vessels, lying abreast about a mile and a half distant, were getting under way. There was no life of shipping visible to the men, save those three vessels.

"Got it all right?" said Bobbin, as he sculled the stem of the boat through the racings of thin surf on to the sand.

"Ay," was the answer. "In with you swiftly. A man's been killed!"

The three heavy bundles were thrown into the boat and the captain and his men tumbled in after them.

"Where's the sloop?" asked Pope.

"Round the corner," answered Bobbin, poling off.

"They'll be running from Broadstairs to trap us here," said Captain Pope. "Lie low in the bottom of the boat, that only the man who's been fishing may be seen."

Bobbin kept a lookout and reported as he sculled. The boat went slowly.

"Have you opened Broadstairs yet?" said Pope at the bottom of the boat.

"Yes, sir."

"What do you see?"

"Some fishing craft and a bunch of wherries just off the pier."

"Nothing in motion?"

They left the man-of-warsman lying dead.

Told Out of School.

The infant terrible is always with us, and in making trouble runs a close race with the wagging tongue of scandal. Accompanied by her young hopeful a woman was calling on a friend who happened to live in one of a row of houses of exactly the same appearance.

"The great objection to living in a row of houses," remarked the hostess, "is the liability of making a mistake. Do you ever have any difficulty, my dear?"

"Oh, no," replied the little fiend, breaking in unexpectedly. "Ma says she can always tell your house by the dirty windows."

Hard on Dad.

A crowded street car was standing at the corner of Broadway and First street on the Fourth when some enthusiast threw a torpedo in that direction. The explosive struck the window ledge, making a terrific noise and scattering its load of tiny gravel stones into the face of a man sitting near. The unlucky passenger, evidently in great pain, quickly covered his face with his hands, and the whole car was in a solicitous silence, when the victim's little son pumped to the seat beside him and called out of the window:

"T'row anudder! Pop got that un!"

Abraham Lincoln's opinion of these Historical Celebrities: "I want to thank you and your brother for Abbott's Series of Histories. I have not education enough to appreciate the profound works of voluminous historians; and if I had I have no time to read them. But your Series of Histories gives me, in brief compass, just that knowledge of past men and events which I need. I have read them with the greatest interest. To them I am indebted for about all the historical knowledge I have."

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

A man who was found dead at East Fourteenth and Market streets, Des Moines, was identified as Arthur Gibford, of Newton. Death is believed to have resulted from suffocation as a result of Gibford falling into a pool of water while in an epileptic fit. The foul play theory, at first entertained, has been abandoned.

John Kostich, whose parents, said to be of noble blood, were murdered recently in Austria, was found a few nights ago near Centerville, almost dead from a bullet in the breast. Kostich will probably die. The police are undecided whether Kostich attempted to commit murder or fell at the hands of confederates of the murderers of his parents.

The residence of Andrew Helmer, of Iowa City, was completely destroyed by fire a few nights ago. The contents and house were enveloped when discovered. Helmer jumped from a second story window in order to save his life. He escaped with a wrenched ankle. He then found a ladder and rescued his wife unharmed. Loss, $3,000; partly insured.

W. L. Addison of Clinton, one of the best known freight brakemen on the Northwestern, was instantly killed at a point two miles west of Blairstown. Addison was braking for Conductor Charles Mann, on an extra. While walking on top of the cars he fell between, and nearly every car of the long train passed over his body. He was horribly mutilated.

After being out seventeen hours the jury in the case of C. C. Beird, on trial in Keosauqua on the charge of having murdered Captain W. A. Dundy in Keokuk, returned a verdict of not giulty. The case was taken to Van Buren county from Lee county district court on a change of venue, and has been watched with much interest. Captain Dundy was shot and killed in Keokuk in 1901.

Twenty people who were in the Iowa Central depot at Eddyville came nearer to death than they ever will again. Lightning struck the depot in which 1,500 pounds of dynamite was stored. The bolt hit the end of the building opposite the freight room where the explosive was. Rather than tempt fate a second time the people remained outside and away from the depot in the drenching rain.

During a storm at Guthrie Center lightning struck the barn on the farm of Wm. Bates, burning the building and contents and doing damage to the amount of nearly $3,000. The barn was a frame structure 36x50 feet. Two horses were burned to death and the loss included three buggies, two wagons, 100 bushels of oats, 20 tons of hay, hay scales, farming implements and harnesses. The insurance was $600.

The farmers of two townships in Grundy county are organizing for the purpose of co-operation. The society will consist of about 250 leading farmers and they will subscribe $100 each. One of the first things they will do will be to establish a general store at Wellsburg where they can purchase their goods at actual cost and dispose of their produce. Linderman Bros., D. E. Aukes and Liebsohn Bros. are at the head of the movement.

Frank Seaman, a coal miner of Bussey, bade his wife good-bye a few nights ago, telling her that she would find him hanging in the barn in the morning. Mrs. Seaman paid no attention to his remark, believing it an idle threat. The following morning, however, she found the dead body of her husband hanging in the barn according to his prediction. Seaman was 55 years old. Domestic trouble is said to have caused him to commit the act.

Near Waukon Max Promenitz informed his employer, Jake Beal, a milkman, that he could no longer deliver milk for him. Thereupon Deal hit Promenitz in the back with a wedge, tied him to a tree, whipped him and threatened to shoot him with a revolver; also threatened to shoot Beal's mother and a young man who tried to prevent Beal's further abuse of him. Beal was arrested, brought before Justice S. R. Thompson and fined $25 and costs.

The Davenport retail butchers and grocers are up in arms against the branch offices of the packing companies because they have taken off the delivery wagons and refuse to deliver goods any longer. Armour Packing Co., Swift & Co., and Cudahy Packing Co. have signed an agreement to discontinue the delivery of goods and thereby reduce their expenses in Davenport about $5,000 per year. As all the companies are in the agreement, there is nothing for the retail merchants to do but to send their own delivery wagons after it.

Serious charges and counter charges are made in the case of John Drain vs. the Lehigh Brick & Tile company, which comes up in the district court at Fort Dodge. The case promises to be one of the most interesting tried here for many months. The case comes from an alleged black list of the Brick & Tile company against twelve of its employes. The men sue the company for treble damages of $1,000 each, or, a total of $36,000. The case was postponed from last term. Now comes an answer and counter claim by W. C. Beem, proprietor of the Lehigh Brick & Tile company, in which he sues plaintiffs for $2,000 actual damages and $2,000 exemplary damages.

Burt Isenhart, the Iowa Central fireman of Marshalltown, who is in jail at Webster City awaiting the action of the Hamilton county grand jury on a charge of bigamy because he married Miss Emma Mitchell of Clemons, while he had a wife living in Marshalltown, is to work the insanity dodge. G. W. Makepeace of Marshalltown, an attorney retained by Isenhart, has gone to Webster City, and expects to file an information charging insanity, and have his client taken before the commissioners for a hearing.

Orrin C. Beach, a well known resident of Albion, was placed under arrest by Sheriff Shoemaker, on a warrant issued from the court of Justice Robert Denbow of Albion, charging assault with Laura Larison as his alleged victim. Frank Larison, brother of the alleged victim, is the complaining witness. Beach, who is a painter, was taken into custody at the home of William Davis, two and a half miles northwest of Bangor, where he was working. Beach says he can prove an alibi without any trouble. When taken into custody he simply said it was an awful thing to be arrested on a charge of that kind. He added: "I don't know where they are going to get their evidence."

Governor Cummins has named the following delegates to the national irrigation congress at Ogden, September 13: Wesley Greene, Des Moines; Fred S. Robinson, Oelwein; R. W. Orchard, Glidden; P. A. Smith, Scranton; Chas. Stallcopp, Brooklyn; T. J. Bray, Grinnell; S. W. Searles, Iowa City; D. H. Logan, Washington; P. T. Wolf, Fairfield; Thos. D. Murphy, Red Oak; C. F. Saylor, Des Moines; S. S. Scull, St. Anthony; S. M. Greene, Chariton; Wm. C. Howell, Keokuk; L. E. Johnson, Albia; T. G. Ferguson, Le-Mars; George Wright, Eagle Grove; Harry Wallace, Des Moines; Allan Dawson, Des Moines; A. H. Grissell, Guthrie Center; W. W. Morrow, Afton; Professor Kennedy, Ames.

By the unarmed intervention of Geo. Cook and Harvey Lilliard, a hired man on the Cook country place eight miles from Davenport, Gus Teros, a Greek laborer who had used a revolver in a quarrel with other section men, was saved from lynching at the hands of eighty of his infuriated compatriots. They drove him into a building on the Cook farm where the two men interferred and stood guard over him until officers and a posse of citizens summoned by telephone arrived from Buffalo, a couple of miles away. The hunted man in fear of his life was taken to Buffalo and placed in jail. Young Cook, whose coolness and nerve saved the man's life, is a professor at Leland Stanford university and author of "Roderick Taliaferro," one of the popular novels of the year.

The farmers of Webster county who were in fear of losing fourteen tracts of land in that county only to see it go to a scrip dealer in Omaha named Moses have taken a fresh breath as a result of the recent decision of the secretary of the interior at Washington. The secretary of the interior has overruled the decision of Commissioner W. A. Richards, stating that the land was non-swampy in character, and denying them a hearing to determine in the courts whether it was swampy or not. Fearing that they might lose their precious farms the claimants appealed to the secretary of the interior. The result was the recent decision. The date for the hearing before the Des Moines register and receiver has not yet been set. The land involved, if found to be of swampy character, will settle the title once for all. If found to be non-swampy at the time of the United States grant of swamp lands in Iowa to the counties, it will revert to the United States. The land was originally sold by the county of Webster as swamp land to R. P. Hunter and others. It has been filed on as non-swampy land by Mr. Moses of Omaha.

The dairy exhibits at the fair were remarkably fine. The average score of the butter entered is 94½ per cent, the highest ever recorded at any fair or in any butter competition, so said Dairy Commissioner Wright. The judge of butter, Prof. G. L. McKay, of Ames, is one of the only five or six first-class judges of butter in the country. He has officiated at fairs and contests all over the west, so that his markings would be a fair comparison with many other fairs. According to the rules of the Iowa State fair the butter is judged on a scale of one hundred. Flavor counts 45 points, body 25, color 15, salt 10, and packing 5. Perfect butter would be marked 100; but of course none of that class has ever yet been found. As was said, the average score at the fair this year was 94½ per cent, while the score usually made at butter competitions is only 90 to 92. All the entries were for creamery butter. Out of the sixty-seven entries made, seventeen scored 97 or better, a remarkable showing. The winner of the first premium is C. D. Elder of Manchester with a score of 98¾. The second premium went to W. S. Smarzo of Masonville on a score of 98⅝. The third to Harry Evans of Strawberry Point with a score of 98½.

ARTHUR MEADE MURDER.

Young Man at Chickasha, I. T., Believed to Know Something of It.

Chickasha, I. T., August 31.—Enoch Schafer, 17 years old, an employee of the Rock Island eating house here, was arrested Tuesday, charged with being an accomplice in the murder of Arthur Meade at West Liberty, Iowa, May 14. He is held awaiting the arrival of a deputy with papers, when he will be taken to that place.

Schafer insists that he knows nothing about the murder, and did not even know Meade. He says his home is in Quincy, Ill., with a sister, where he stays when not "on the road." He claims his arrest was caused by a joking conversation with the cashier at the eating house, who is from West Liberty, and who asked him if he had heard about the murder. He says he replied in the affirmative and pretended to know all about the particulars. The young woman immediately wrote home of her conversation with Schafer. Instructions were forwarded to Marshal Madsen, and his arrest followed.

Des Moines, August 31.—Sheriff John Wiley, of Muscatine county, reached this city Friday evening and secured requisition papers at the office of Governor Cummins for "John Doe," accused of the murder of Arthur Meade, leaving the same night for Wichita. He is expected to return with his captive this evening.

The murder of Meade caused a sensation at the time when it was committed on May 14th, of this year. It was designed after the Jesse James pattern, which has become so nearly obsolete.

Meade, with six or seven companions, was standing in the restaurant of Tom McCarthy, in West Liberty, when a man, wearing an overcoat and a mask, entered and called upon all in the room to hold up their hands. All obeyed except Meade, who, exclaiming, "I know you," advanced on the stranger. The robber called on Meade to keep off, but he persisted in advancing, and the highwayman shot him dead, escaping in the confusion incident to the shooting.

The stranger disappeared, as completely as if the earth had swallowed him. Governor Cummins offered a reward of $300 for the arrest of the murderer, lately raising it to $500, but all the efforts of the officers failed to reveal a single clue. The case had been given up, when the news from Indian Territory gave the officers new hope.

Several suspects of the murder had previously been arrested, but all were released on account of the lack of sufficient evidence.

SOUTHERN IOWA FLOODED.

Said to Be Worst Deluge in History of State.

Council Bluffs, Aug. 28.—Never before in its history has southwestern Iowa been so hopelessly in the grasp of floods, and never before has there been such general destruction of property of all kinds. This city seems to have been the center of the heaviest downpour of rain ever recorded for twenty-four consecutive hours, the fall at midnight Wednesday amounting to a little more than eight inches. This fall varied somewhat at the various towns throughout the section, but all report heavy rains, almost cloudbursts.

Yesterday of the nine railroads entering the city from the north, east and south, but one was able to move a train, and that road, the Illinois Central, has tendered the use of its track to the other roads for the passage of their most urgent passenger trains.

Between here and Missouri Valley the Northwestern is under water the greater part of the distance, and the amount of track that is washed out is problematical.

The Rock Island and the Milwaukee between here and Neola are completely under water a greater part of the distance, but the water is receding some this evening, showing that thousands of feet of track on both roads have been washed away. It is estimated that it will take a week to make repairs so trains can pass.

On the Avoca-Carson branch of the Rock Island, a bad washout was reported near Oakland, by the Nishnabotna.

The Great Western's new grade has been a great sufferer, and there is hardly a rod of the grade for miles out of Council Bluffs that is not honeycombed, and will have to be repaired before the passage of trains. Where its grade passes over the Milwaukee, three miles east of this city, the flood water of Mosquito creek has cut out a large section of the grade that will require several days to repair.

The Wabash has not been a great sufferer in this immediate neighborhood but at Malvern its tracks are under two to three feet of water and are being badly injured.

The Burlington has been a bad sufferer all along its line from here to Creston. At 11 o'clock yesterday morning its large covered bridge over Mosquito creek, three miles south of this city, was washed away.

At Glenwood the water is all over its tracks for a mile to a depth of two feet.

At Malvern the same condition prevails, as it also does at Hastings.

On its Hastings-Carson branch some bad washouts are also reported. But it seems to have suffered the worst at Corning and Prescott.

Hat Salesman—"So you invaded France with your line? How did you make out?" Bicycle salesman—"Very poor. Every time I handed any one my card he thought I wanted to fight a duel."

"Northen."

"Sloop in sight?"

"Right ahead, sir, almost within hail."

"Is Captain Crystal showing himself?"

"I see him in the bows of the sloop waiting for us."

Pope lifted his head, and a minute later the little fabric was alongside, the hull of the sloop putting her out of sight of land. The bundles were handed up; the men sprang aboard after them.

"Lively my hearts!" shouted Pope, "and make sail."

He sprang to the tiller, and Crystal put his weight with the others, upon throat, peak and other halyards. The great sloping sail fluttered languidly then rounded silent as the big jib bore the little vessel's head off. They were under way and the ripple from the stem glanced like a needle into the wake.

The Downs now lay plain, but very distant. But one large blue shadow loomed formidably—the Ramillies—and as Pope looked a puff of white smoke, tiny in the far-off sheen, broke from her starboard broadside; which set Crystal swearing horribly.

"It is her signal," he shouted. "The news has reached her; we are suspected and shall be chased."

"The breeze means to freshen," exclaimed Pope coolly; "see the dark line of it yonder; let me get behind the Sands and I shall be happy. I never designed to go Margate way. We'll hug the South Sand Head clear of the Ramillies, and go straight for the French coast, and then for a shift of helm for Hamburg."

"The Captain's right," said Bobbin.

The whole line of coast was now visible from Sandwich to the South Foreland. The ripples flashed, white water fled in feathers from the weather bow and Pope looked astern at the land well pleased.

"I'll tell you the whole story in a minute, Crystal," said he, and he was proceeding when Crystal interrupted him.

"Look!" said he, in his hoarse notes.

"Look!" said he, in his hoarse note, pointing.

"The Dutch frigate of last night," exclaimed Pope, after turning his head.

She was coming down Channel on a taut bowline, and made a fine figure as she drew clear of the Foreland.

"What's that?" suddenly exclaimed Crystal, and Maddison, who had come on deck, cried out, "They're a-chasing of us!"

Both he and Crystal looked toward Broadstairs, and thither Pope directed his eyes, where, without aid of a glass he might see what should prove a six-oared galley sweeping from the little pier-end. Her oars sparkled swiftly.

"The glass!" he roared.

Maddison grasped the tiller while the Captain looked. There were others in that boat than those who pulled her. She seemed full of men. Pope caught sight of the glint of bayonets. She was coming along as steadily swift as the rapid determined pulse of the long and bending lines of flashing ash could drive her. The brine stood like frost at her bows, and the foam rushed aft as though she had been driven by a propeller.

"A revenue boat," says Pope, with one of his oaths, handing the glass to Crystal, "and she's after us."

Clouds, white and swift with the light of the sun and the life of the wind, were overspreading the western seaboard, and they mingled with many leaning shafts of canvass heading out of the Downs. There was a spirit in the freshening of the wind, and the Oak snored as she drove through it. All along the horizon to port were the Goodwin Sands. They were brilliant now with creaming lines of yeast, and the yellow shoal showed a firm surface upon which you could have played football.

"They're bound to give up; that pace'll break their hearts," exclaimed Crystal, after a few minutes of silence during which he had been watching the chasing boat astern.

"If they don't mind," said Steve, "they'll be foul of that there Dutchman."

"By heavens! Steve's right," cried Pope, flushing up with sudden excitement and wresting the glass out of Crystal's hand. "What does the idiot mean by holding on?"

He applied the glass to his eye. The Dutch frigate, under a full press was sweeping through it grandly. Could it be imagined that the pursuing boat would attempt to pass under those thunderous bows! The naval officer steering the boat might have been insane with resolution not to deviate from the path of pursuit. The rowers had their backs upon the danger; the others were not there to deliver commands; so that all in a second it was too late. The six oars sparkled as they rose in tragic arrest under the bows of the sweeping ship. On board the Oak they saw a number of men running on the frigate's forecastle. Through the glass Pope spied her people struggling for life in the frigate's wake.

"That," he cried, pointing with the telescope to the white water astern of the frigate, "was her reason for bringing up in Margate Roads last night."

"Ay," said Crystal, "hang me if there isn't even a Providence for pirates," and he and Pope laughed with al their might.

The Dutchman measured a score of her own lengths before she backed her topsail and lowered boats. Five men only were picked up, and they were too exhausted to explain the errand they had been upon. In fact, it was doubtful if the Dutchman would have understood them. The frigate remained hove-to, while one of the boats put the English seamen ashore at Broadstairs; by which time the Oak, unnoticed by the seventy-four, had fetched the southern limb of the Goodwin Sands, when, easing off her sheets, she went away for the French coast.

CHAPTER V.

The Crew of the Gypsy.

At Hamburg the three hired men were discharged with their handkerchiefs liberally tasseled; and they left consenting to meet Captain Pope in London on such and such a date at the sign of the Camperdown.

When Pope had settled his affairs in Hamburg, he manned the Oak with four Dutch seamen and sailed to the Thames. I am not able to give further particulars of the Hamburg expedition than these, because I never could get to hear who had taken the plate off Pope's hands; how it had been got ashore without detection; the sum of money it had fetched, and the like. But this part, though it was doubtless full of excitement, is not material to the interest of the story, which may be said to begin with this:

September the 30th, some time before 1820.—It was blowing a fresh breeze of wind in the English channel; dark clouds, spitting rain as they sped, gave a look of flying wildness to the few dim spaces of dusty blue; they produced the effect of flying scud, and all on high seemed to revolve as the weeping shadows poured away into the horizon on the breath of the shouting wind.

In the midst of this scene a little brig was sailing. She was the Gypsy. The captain was Richard Pope, her chief mate was Jonathan Crystal, her second mate and boatswain was Matthew Grindal, and in her forecastle and about her decks were thirty seamen, counting several idlers, such as the gunner, the carpenter, cook, cabin servant, and the like.

She was bound to the Bay of Campeachy to load with logwood, and to trade with the West Indies.

To the Bay of Campeachy! So it was said. So her papers showed. She had sailed down the river armed with four carronades of a side, a long gun on her forecastle, and a stern chaser, a twelve pounder. She was therefore a little formidable with artillery. But the pirate then continued as fixed a condition of the ocean life as the gilded and galleried West Indiaman she plundered. There were other risks, moreover, which made the cannon a necessary feature of a ship's deck.

They had dined in the cabin. Captain Pope had come on deck. It was Crystal's watch, and the two men stumped the planks together. Pope came to a stand at the little skylight to survey the scene of his ship, and Crystal, on wide legs, rocked beside him.

"She lifts with splendid buoyancy," said the commander, "I never could have believed that she possessed these heels. Look how she throws the seas away to leeward! That fine Dutch frigate which saved our lives would not leap in loftier graces.

Certainly the litlte craft just then was a heroic picture for a commander who was also her owner, to contemplate. Her four black dogs of war at a side crouched in the scuppers; and her tarpaulined forecastle gun looked like a dead giant stitched up awaiting burial. The twelve-pounder aft was brass; a sullen glint broke in it when the sun shone. It made a formidable show on that little quarter-deck clear of the wheel, then grasped by two seamen, one a colored man, the other as black as a gypsy with hair like snakes crawling out of his hat down his back. They looked a pair of beauties, but were indeed in perfect keeping with the rest of the crew now visible.

It was they who gave the little flying ship her wild and savage aspect. The most formidable of them for ugliness and bulk was Matthew Grindall the boatswain, who had likewise agreed to serve as second mate. Though an Englishman, he had been a pirate aboard a Frenchman, had also served as able seaman in a scoundrel Spanish piccaroon, and scarce a memory of this man's for year after year but was red and dreadful.

He was overseeing some work a cluster of seamen were upon in the waist, and Captain Pope watched him. Assuredly the Camperdown had been shelled to some purpose. Those of the crew who were at odd jobs about the deck, or who were gathered into groups about the galley and longboat, were as completely piratic in face and garb, in the sound of their desperate laughs, in their ceaseles oaths, in their postures, and motions charged with the brutalest spirit of defiance and recklessness, as the heart of man or boy could yearn to read about, and thirst to attend to the gallows.

"Crossman has done our purpose justice," said Pope with a smile, with his eyes fixed on Grindal. "I expect that most of these men have seen their turn as pirates."

"They're here as privateersmen," exclaimed Crystal.

"They shall be undeceived," said Pope, turning suddenly and beginning to walk the short deck, Crystal beside him. "And what's the difference?"

"The hangman knows," answered Crystal.

"Was never a privateersman hanged?" cried Pope.

"A letter of marque is as good as a pennon," said Crystal. Then seeing irritation in the commander's face, he said, "Has Mr. Staunton any suspicion, d'ye think, of the nature of this voyage?"

"None. Four hundred pounds in cash, and the remainder in bills; that sufficiently appeased the curiosity of a man who had a ship which was rotting her bottom out in the Thames. Crossman acted well; he held as mute as a skull!"

"Crossman is a man you may depend on," exclaimed Crystal. "When do you reckon upon taking the crew into your confidence?"

"This afternoon, Jonathan," said Pope sternly.

Crystal looked away to sea.

There was now too much wind for the royals; they were clewed up to the shrill measures of the bo'sun's pipe; the flying jib was hauled down, and the taut weather shrouds shook as some seamen ran aloft.

"Sail ho!" shouted one of them out of the fore-top.

"Where away?" roared Pope.

DAILY SOURCES OF BETTER METHODS

THE ARCADE INDEX

WHERE OTHERS GIVE UP IS JUST WHERE WE GET OUR SECOND BREATH.

THIS ACCURACY REVIEW DEPARTMENT

is for co-operation in information to reduce mutually expensive mistakes. It is for mechanical, commercial and professional people; the employer, employe and customer; and consists of extracts taken by permission from the copyrighted letters, the lectures, note books and libraries of Dr. Earl M. Pratt. When you secure on any subject an idea personally useful to you, and you wish to give it to him, address him in care of The John Crerar Library, Marshall Field Building, Chicago. He is hunting the whole world over for information of every day use to you, and he regrets his inability, personally to reply to contributors. So far as possible he wishes to have in this space the very ideas you would like to find here. You are at liberty to send him any suggestion you may care to. His Arcade Index libraries were started in 1872 and now contain unpublished information dating back to 1796 with systematic plans extending to 1952. Your short story of some example of forethought deposited in the Arcade Index collection may prove to be your best monument.

Look Over the Map.

How many cities could you mark on the Mercator map of the world at the top of this column? What do you know about the desirable personal forces of the different nationalities? We are more likely to hear of their undesirable tendencies than otherwise in our every day reading. Are you acquainted with any one in the different continents?

After whacking an enemy—before we cool off we may hit a friend. Some wise workers leave their "club" at home—not to use at home—so as to think before using it away from home. Some keep it locked up and never use it if possible to get along without it. Clubbing others dulls our own brain.

Enjoying Your Employment.

In love with your work is one of the sources—daily sources—of profitable originality. Though very few get a living doing just what they want to do, yet many succeed and improve their world of work, leaving their subject in beter shape than they found it. Desire to do something well helps people succeed though working at their second or third choice of employment. A Chicago man with a national reputation told me he had never done the work he always wanted to do. The work he wanted to do may have been some youthful fancy. He is a great success in the work he has done. Interest in your work brightens your eye, sharpens your thought and quickens your ear. We are continually walking over good things—better things—profitable opportunities. While waiting with friends for a belated train I placed a coin on the walk to see how many would walk over it. We got the value of the coin in entertainment, as dozens of people walked over it. Then we got the value of the coin again when we saw the joyful face of the old lady with a basket who found the coin, but did not see us. Greater interest in our work lessens the number of good things walked over—it helps us keep awake and thinking straight. A short-sighted person could see a dime on a high hitching post, yet be blind to a gold eagle on the ground. Greater interest in our work lengthens our sight without injuring its quality. Some of the things I tell you in these letters may help you most though they are the greatest distance from the subject you are interested in. You never know what is going to help you see something new and useful to you in your work. The art of picking up useful ideas in other lines of work and twisting them into usefulness in your work is a splendid art to acquire.

Many confess that they lose their "head," then lose a sale because they do not know how to do otherwise. Of course it is to their interest to do otherwise. Self-control can be raised the same as sweet corn, if you learn how.

A healthy girl can tell by moral intuition the difference between right and wrong actions. A healthy man can tell by business intuition the difference between right and wrong methods. All of us are tempted to disobey our good judgment.

Private Time Possibilities.

Thirty minutes a week for thirty years is sufficient time for any person to develop a useful side-line subject to an altitude requiring international attention.

Private time study requires a great self-control. Generally there is no time for it or too much time spent on it. Zeal for a short time is easier than persistency and good judgment for decades.

One of the most successful lawyers in the United States told me that a night school was of great use to him. He attended a class after he had been admitted to the bar, to overcome one of his deficiencies.

Here are a few items from my letter to young people on ten minutes a day for ten years:

A minute is something like a dime.

It can be used usefully or abused shamefully.

It can be invested in a way to bring good interest in a money-muscle-mind manner.

It is fortunate for young people to voluntarily see this manner.

It is expensive experience to have to learn it involuntarily.

Take a note book costing a dime, more or less, and spend ten minutes with it a day, three hundred days a year.

In ten years that means fifty days of ten hours each.

If, at the end of ten years, you can say the five hundred hours have increased your ability from two to twenty-five per cent you will not regret your efforts.

You can do this, and if you do it you are sure to gain by it.

Every day add a sentence or paragraph you think worth saving.

Watch for something to write or paste in your book; have your eyes, ears and mind ever ready to catch good hints in your work and recreation, your reading and conversation.

Every day re-read some one paragraph or sentence and try to twist it into fresh shape to help you do the best you can to-day, and, if possible, better to-morrow.

Life is worth living when we know how to live and live as well as we know how.

What are you doing to help improve the public schools near you? Helpers gain mentally when they help others to gain mentally. Real mental gain increases ability.

How Foreknowledge Might Help.

When a boy I had a pet Brahma pullet, plump and good looking, of two or three pounds weight. One day I entered the hen park and on coming out could not close the gate. There was a rubbery-spring of a resistance as the gate came within a foot of the post. As I opened the gate to investigate, my pet pullet ran out a yard and dropped dead. She had run in between the gate and the building under the lower hinge. That lesson in accuracy regarding gates and chickens gave my affections a hard pull. If my pet had been alive and my father's hens all dead I would have suffered less. That was expensive experience—I never killed another chicken by that gate—it made me think, look, know more and it increased my accuracy. Why could not I have learned by observation what I learned by expensive experience? I could have done so had I had my observation trained and I have done so many times since that event. An old German friend told me that we stopped growing when we stopped making mistakes, and I must be growing every day because I am making mistakes right along, but there are many kinds of mistakes and I want to grow by making those which do not kill "pet pullets" if possible A Pennsylvania girl told me she did not think it necessary to be poor in order to be happy and I am trying to see if we cannot learn by the valuable experiences of others and lessen the necessity of errors and mistakes on our part. We should become more accurate and grow faster than we do and good reading is one way to do it.

You know the eggs are there and that the hens want to lay them—when you fail to get results you know that there is something wrong in the management of them. Can you reword this to make it apply to your work?

SHOO FLY

The Klemme Juveniles wiped the moisture off the grass with the Garner second nine on Friday. The score was 12 to 3. The Garner high school battery, Baumgartner and Troutman, played with Garner as did also a number of others of the high school nine. Klemme's regular second nine catcher was somewhat under the weather and on this account it was necessary to use as his substitute F. Kluckhohn. Seven straight innings out of the nine the Garner "Jaspers" failed to score. Garner seems unable to conquer Klemin the national game.

SHOT AT OUR VICE CONSUL

President Orders Squadron to Beirut to Enforce Demands on Turkey.

PUNISHMENT IS DEMANDED

Wm. C. Magelssen Is Fired Upon by an Unknown Man at Beirut—Conference at Oyster Bay to Decide on Further Action.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The state department has received a cablegram from Minister Leishman at Constantinople, announcing that William C. Magelssen, United States vice consul at Beyrut, Syria, was assassinated Wednesday while riding in a carriage. The American minister immediately brought the crime to the attention of the government and demanded action by Turkey. Acting Secretary Loomis yesterday cabled Mr. Leishman, requesting him to demand the arrest and immediate punishment of the guilty persons. No demand for money indemnity for the man's family has yet been made, but that probably will follow. Magelssen was appointed from Minnesota.

Admiral Cotton, commanding the European squadron, has been cabled by the navy department to have his vessels in readiness to move to Beirut on the eastern shore of the Mediterranean sea, in case the demands of the United States government on the Turkish government are not complied with.

MAGELSSEN NOT KILLED.

Was Fired at in His Carriage, But Not Touched.

Constantinople, Aug. 29.—It transpires that the report that Vice Consul Magelssen was killed is incorrect. An unknown individual fired at him, and the bullets passed close to the vice consul, but did not touch him.

The vali of Beirut afterwards visited Vice Consul Magelssen, expressed his regrets for the outrage and ordered measures for the arrest of the perpetrator.

The error in stating that Vice Consul Magelssen had been killed arose from a mistake in a cipher telegram.

WILL NOT CHANGE ORDERS.

President Says European Squadron Will Proceed to Beirut.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 29.—President Roosevelt was informed last night by a representative of Associated Press of the incorrectness of the report that Vice Consul William C. Magelssen at Beirut, Syria, had been assassinated.

The president expressed gratification that Consul Magelssen had escaped without injury from the assault of the would-be murderer. He announced, however, that no change at present would be made in the plans of this government and that the European squadron, which he had ordered to proceed immediately to Beirut, would continue to its ordered destination.

It can be said that the president and Secretary of State Hay both regard it advisable in view of the present state of unrest in Turkey to have American war vessels in Turkish waters.

For several hours yesterday President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hay were in conference at Sagamore Hill. They discussed every suggested phase of the situation in Turkey. At the conclusion of the conference, Secretary Hay announced his intention of returning immediately to Washington.

The fact that Secretary Hay considers his presence in Washington necessary at this time indicates the serious view he takes of the Turkish situation. He had not expected to return to Washington for several weeks.

At 11 o'clock last a telegram was received by Secretary Loeb from Acting Secretary of State Loomis at Washington, communicating the text of a cablegram from Minister Leishman at Constantinople, confirming the Associated Press dispatch of the inaccuracy of the report of Consul Magelssen's assassination. It can be said to be the purpose of President Roosevelt to afford American citizens in the disturbed provinces of Turkey all the protection possible. For that reason, and for others which may develop in a short time, the decision is reached that no change will be made at this time in the orders to the European squadron. Admiral Cotton will proceed with his vessels to Turkish waters with the idea of safeguarding Americans and American interests.

Washington, Aug. 31.—Other than the advices from Admiral Cotton announcing his departure with the cruisers Brooklyn and San Francisco for Beirut, there were no developments in the Turkisn situation yesterday so far as Washington is concerned.

ACTS OF BARBARISM.

Repressive Measures in Macedonia Reach Limits of Cruelty.

London, Aug. 27.—According to a Sofia telegram to the Times, the Turkish repressive measures in Macedonia have reached the utmost limits of barbarism, and it is evident that it is the intention to accomplish by degrees the total extirpation of the Bulgarian population. Within the last few days, says the Times' correspondent, 12 more Christian villages have been handed over to fire and sword and the women and the aged have been massacred indiscrimiately. Convoys of prisoners dispatched to Monastir have been murdered by their escorts on the way. A private letter from a foreign resident in Monastir says that even the local Turks are disgusted and meditate assassinating the consul, in order to provoke European intervention. The insurgents are doubtless taking a terrible revenge and are executing the revolutionary programme to the letter. The reported concentration of large Turkish forces in the Adrianople district at Mustafa-Pasha, Kizylagach and other points on the Bulgarian frontier is regarded with much apprehension in Sofia. In the special dispatches from the near east, published this morning, a gloomy view is taken of the crisis in the Balkans. According to reports from Constantinople, a rumor was current that war had already been declared against Bulgaria. It was proved to be unfounded, but the state of popular feeling is said to be such that no other issue is regarded as possible.

SHAMROCK LOST IN HAZE.

In a Contest Declared No Race Reliance Gained Big Victory.

New York, Aug. 28.—With Reliance less than a third of a mile from the finish and Shamrock III. hull down on the horizon, fully two miles astern of the gallant defender, the fourth race of the present series for the America's cup yesterday was declared off because of the expiration of the time limit of five and one-half hours, as happened on Thursday last. Although, officially, it was no race, the defeat administered to the challenger was so ignominious that whatever lingering hope remained in the breasts of the friends of Sir Thomas' boat vanished into thin air. Reliance's victory was in every way more decisive than that of last Saturday. Outsailed, outpointed and outfoooted, it was a procession from start to finish.

POWERS' DEATH SENTENCE.

Jury Finds Him Guilty of Murder of Governor Goebel.

Georgetown, Ky., August 31.—The jury in the case of ex-Secretary of State Caleb Powers, charged with conspiracy to murder Governor William Goebel in 1900, found the defendant guilty and imposed the death sentence.

Powers was sentenced to imprisonment for life in his former trials for complicity in the conspiracy. It was on this motion that he secured the new trials each time. The verdict caused great excitement among the friends of other defendants in these cases.

Six of Danville Rioters Guilty.

Danville, Ill., August 31.—The jury in the case of eight persons charged with complicity in the riots of July 25, when Sheriff Whitlock successfully defended the jail, brought in a verdict finding six of the men guilty. William Redwine and Clay Biddle, the latter a 16-year-old boy, were acquitted. It is thought the sentences of the convicted rioters will be the same as that passed upon their leader, Winfield Baker—namely, an inderterminate sentence of from one to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

WANTS YACHT BUILDER.

Lipton Will Not Challenge for Cup Until England Produces One.

New York, Aug. 29.—Sir Thomas Lipton, aboard the Erin, declared yesterday in an interview that he would never challenge again for the America's cup until a man had been found in England who equalled Nat Herreshoff in yacht building. The baronet admitted his disappointment at his failure and frankly said that he had no hope of winning even a single race. He said:

"American brains and development have us beaten. If the day ever comes when England produces a Herreshoff then I will challenge for the cup again. It will not be until then. It is unpleasant to be compelled to admit it, but the brains in boat building are on this side of the water. Herreshoff is a wizard. His work is wonderful. None can have admired Reliance more than I have. She is the best boat by all odds and has won on strict merit.

"I am a most disappointed man. My hopes were high when I left home, for I surely believed we would carry back the cup. Yesterday's fluke only prolonged the agony for me. I do not want to win on any slips and I regretted Reliance's failure to get over the line as much as any one could."

Sir Thomas was asked why it was that Shamrock III. was not given more sail area. He said that he trusted everything to the best of English talent. He complimented Captain Barr and said that he had no fault to find with the way in which Shamrock had been handled. "I hope," he said, "that we will get a good, twenty-five-knot breeze and a heavy sea tomorrow. Then we shall have all the chances on the calendar to try out Shamrock's qualities."

The baronet praised the hospitality and generosity of Americans and expressed the belief that many of them wanted to see him take the cup. "They would push Shamrock over the line ahead if they could, I believe."

INSURGENTS ARE BUSY.

Three Towns Report an Equally Unsatisfactory State of Affairs.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Aug. 31.—Dispatches received from Constantinople, Salonica, Monastir and Adrianople, reveal an equally unsatisfactory condition in Macedonia. From Salonica come reports of new risings. At Monastir the insurgents are said to be masters of the situation. Telegrams from Adrianople declare that the insurgent bands are continuing their ravages.

At the moment that the porte is asking Belgium to supply officers for the Macedonian gend'armerie the Swedish ambassador at Constantinople has notified the Turkish government that unless they receive their pay immediately the Swedish officers now at Uskub will leave the country.

The Dnevnek says the Servian diplomatic agent has notified the porte that two divisions of the Servian army have been mobolized without any hostile intention as regards Turkey, but they will be sent to the frontier to prevent Albanian incursions into Servia.

A new outbreak is reported to have occurred in the environs of Salonica, and several skirmishes have taken place, both sides losing heavily. In the district of Kastoria and Florina, south of Monastir, the insurgents have destroyed all the fortified residences of the wealthy beys.

According to the Dnevnik, the hodja (teachers attached to a mosque), in the vilayet of Kossavo, are preaching that the time for a holy war has come, and that the people must be ready to kill the Christians in the vilayet. Insurgent bands are said to be in complete control of the districts of Demirhissar and Kitschevo, and the chief mountain passes in the vilayet of Monastir.

Krushevo Is Ruined and Uninhabitable and Turks Refuse Burial of Dead.

Defenseless Women and Children Left Exposed to Weather and to Starvation---Turks Capture and Sack the Town.

Monastir, European Turkey, Aug. 26.—The once beautiful city of Krushevo is a heap of ruins. The women and children are homeless, exposed to the weather and famine. The town is rendered uninhabitable by the odor of corpses which are being gnawed by dogs and pigs, the Turkish authorities refusing to allow them to be removed under the pretext that an inquest will be held.

Krushevo is situated on the summit of a hill, eight hours distant and to the northwest of Monastir. It contained 2,000 houses and 10,000 inhabitants, mostly Vlachs, calling themselves Greeks. There were only 100 poor Bulgarian houses. The Vlachs are prosperous merchants who travel abroad on business, leaving their families in Krushevo.

After making fortunes abroad by their diligence and economy, they return to spend their wealth in Krushevo, where they own fine houses, furniture and jewels. The Turkish inhabitants of the surrounding villages have long envied the prosperity of Krushevo.

The Macedonian committee in concert with Bulgarian bands has been completing arrangements during several months with a view to occupying the town. In July last the authorities of Krushevo, observing the threatening movement, begged the vali of Monastir to send reinforcements, as the garrison of thirty soldiers was insufficient to cope with an insurgent attack. These warnings were ignored. On the night of August 2 a band of three hundred insurgents, headed by Petroff, entered the town, discharging their rifles.

The terrified inhabitants remained indoors. The band first burned the residence of the mudir and massacred the garrison of Turkish soldiers and the officials of the town.

On the following morning the Komitajis established a provisional government and instituted a new police and municipality. They killed ten Christians, who they believed had betrayed the plans of the commission. The notables of the town were compelled to contribute $10,000 to the revolutionary fund.

The Turks informed of the capture of the town, sent from Perlep three squadrons of cavalry, which were attacked en route and compelled to retire with a loss of 100 killed.

On August 13, the Turks concentrated seven battalions and one battery on Krushevo. They made an offer to the Komitajis to allow the women and children to leave the town. This proposal was declined, and the bombardment began. The Komitajis quickly abandoned the town and escaped to the neighboring forest, where pursuit was impossible.

The Turks entered the town and guided by Turkish villagers from the neighborhood, attacked the houses of the Greek notables and ordered the inmates to be searched and stripped. They seized the money and jewels and ravished the women, those who resisted being killed.

RELIANCE AGAIN A VICTOR

American Boat Takes Second Race in the Cup Contest.

New York, Aug. 26.—In a glorious breeze, over a triangular course, ten miles to a leg, the fleet-footed cup defender, Reliance, again yesterday showed her heels to Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, taking the second race of the cup series of 1903 by the narrow margin of one minute and 19 seconds. It was as pretty and as hard a fought contest as has ever been sailed off Sandy Hook and had the wind not fallen during the last 10 minutes, the record for the course, three hours, 12 minutes and 15 seconds, made by Columbia two years ago in her memorable race against Shamrock II, would have been broken. As it was, Reliance sailed the thirty miles within two minutes and 39 seconds of the record, which speaks wonders for her speed in the wind that was blowing. Reliance's victory, narrow as it was, would have been even smaller had not Captain Wringe, the skipper of the British boat, bungled the start, sending his craft over the line 19 seconds after the last gun, and handicapping her to that extent. At every point of sailing the defender's superiority was demonstrated. She gained one minute and 51 seconds in windward work, 40 seconds on the run to the second mark, and 45 seconds on the close reach for home.

Based upon the magnificent showing she has made in the two races already sailed, it is the belief of many experts that the cup is safe and that it will take something better than Fife's latest creation to even budge it.

STORIETTES.

Once at Quarter Sessions, as recorder of Shrewsbury, Sir Arthur Jeef was sentencing a hypocritical prisoner, who, hopeful of softening the judge's heart, shed copious tears, and in reply to his lordship's inquiry, "Have you ever been in prison before?" sobbed, tearfully, "Never, my lord, never!" "Well, don't cry," was the recorder's reply, "I'm going to send you there now."

A colored preacher recently enlightened his congregation in regard to the conditions existing in the infernal regions in the following manner: "Brethren, I has been asked how hot is hell, an' I will say, after givin' de subject considerable reflection, dat if yo' took all de wood in York State an' all de coal in Pennsylvania, an' all de oil in de worl' an' set all on fire, an' den took a man out ob hell an' put him in dat burnin' mess, he would freeze to def befo' he har'ly lit. Dat's how hot is hell."

While journeying through the interior not long ago, a traveler was surprised at the remarkable ignorance of a venerable farmer at whose house he staid over night. He seemed to know little or nothing about current events, so the traveler asked him why he did not take a weekly newspaper, and so keep himself informed. "Wal," answered the farmer, "when pa died he left me a stack o' papers that high (lowering his hand to a position just above his knee), and I ain't got half through th' pile yet, so what's th' use getting more?"

The J. P.'s Agree.

Staunton, Ark., Aug. 31st.—News comes from Duff, Searcy Co., this state, that Mr. T. E. Reeves, a justice of the Peace at that place, has written a letter recommending Dodd's Kidney Pills in which he says:

"I think Dodd's Kidney Pills can't be beat for Kidney Trouble, and I wish them every success."

The local J. P. Mr. E. B. Cox agrees with his brother Justice on this point for he says:

"I had a bad case of Kidney Trouble and was not able to do a day's work without great distress. I bought six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and after I had used three boxes I was all right. I am as well as ever, and I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly.

"I have given the other three boxes to some friends of mine who had found out what it was that had cured me so satisfactorily and quickly and they all speak highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

No one disputes this unanimous verdict.

A cynic, is he? Then take all he says with an ounce of civet and a grain of salt.

Don't you know that Defiance Starch besides being absolutely superior to any other, is put up 16 ounces in package and sells at same price as 12-ounce packages of other kinds?

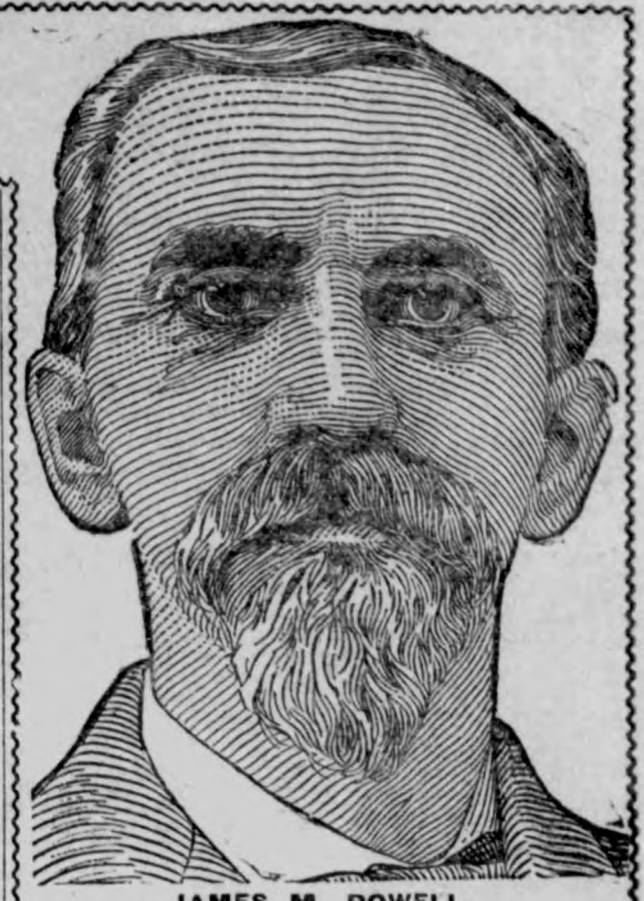
CATARRH DESTROYS THE KIDNEYS

Was I Miserable---Could Not Stand Up or Walk--- Pe-ru-na Cured.

Many Persons Have Catarrh and Don't Know it.



JAMES M. POWELL.

Mr. James M. Powell, 633 Troost street, Kansas City, Mo., Vice Grand of I. O. O. F., of Cherryville, Kans., writes:

"About four years ago I suffered with a severe catarrh of the bladder, which caused continued irritation and pain. I was miserable and could not stand up or walk for any length of time without extreme weariness and pain. I began taking Peruna and it greatly relieved me, and in eleven weeks I was completely cured and felt like a new man."--James M. Powell.

Hundreds of Dollars Spent in Vain.

Mr. Cyrus Hershman, Sheridan, Ind., writes:

"Two years ago I was a sick man. Catarrh had settled in the pelvic organs, making life a burden and giving me little hope of recovery. I spent hundreds of dollars in medicine which did me no good. I was persuaded by a friend to try Peruna. I took it two weeks without much improvement, but I kept on with it and soon began to get well and strong very fast. Within two months I was cured, and have been well ever since. I am a strong advocate of Peruna."—C. Hershman.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys, liver and other pelvic organs, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. No other systemic catarrh remedy has as yet been devised. Insist upon having Peruna. There are no medicines that can be substituted.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Chance for Research.

Five-year-old Georgie had been taking a lively interest in school studies, especially in physiology and anatomy. We were studying an unfortunate porcupine, which had been caught in an apple tree, and we had made good illustrations of certain bones, when one day the girls took an old lounge apart. Having watched the operation for some time, he came running to me, his eyes on fire with excitement, his cheeks flushed and his locks flying behind him: "Come, come," he cried, "if you want to study phiserology, now's your chance. The girls have got the lounge all to pieces."—Little Chronicle.

Had Fun With Sick Friend.

"Nick" Longworth, the Cincinnati millionaire, who will be in the next Congress, was taken down with chicken pox while visiting Washington. During his illness he received by express a Noah's ark, a rattle, some lead soldiers, a jumping jack and a doll. With these toys was this note, signed by half a dozen of his Cincinnati cronies: "Dear Longworth: We heard with great regret that you had been suffering with the chicken pox. Having every reason to suppose that the mumps, measles and whooping cough will follow in their regular order, we send you a few of the things usually provided for the amusement of patients suffering from these disorders."

Why Not Raise Wages?

The world is waiting for a multimillionaire who is willing to lessen his burdensome income by increasing the pay of those who are the instruments of his success. Let him do what he pleases with his surplus accumulations. It would not be in every sense agreeable to see him bestow it as a gratuity on his employes, for such a course would have the appearance of charity. But let him recognize the past and present services of his helpers by such an increase in wages as would be commensurate with the great value of those services and would also serve to decrease the embarrassment of riches.—Kansas City Star.

STORIETTES.

The other day a small boy, aged four, was alternately beating a rug with all his might, and looking up at the sky with rapt attention. "What are doing, Charles?" his mother said. "Oh, I'm just sending up some dust to God, so he can make some new people!" was the reply.

Henry Labouchere was once asked what he called the Prince of Wales—now King Edward—when he dined at Marlborough House. "Well," said Labby, "when the soup comes on I address him as 'Your Royal Highness.' The fish often softens the reserve, and I get a little chummier, and often as not I call him 'Wales,' while during the entrees and joints I get quite familiar, and he becomes 'Eddie,' while he slaps me on the back, and dubs me 'Labby!'"

Once, when the late President Faure was being escorted through the Paris Salon by an artist of note, on the opening day, he caught sight of a picture that struck him as safe to criticise. To his dismay he found that the author of the "machine" which had excited his amusement was his worthy guide. Turning to the mortified painter, he said: "You know how it is; the buyer always runs down the thing which he has set his heart on. The fact is, I want that picture for the Palais de l'Elysee!" And, as good as his word, the president bought the picture next day.

Two Highlanders, being in Glasgow for the first time, were having a walk through the city. Turning a corner, they were much surprised to see a water-cart wetting the street. Not having seen anything of the kind before, Tougal, under a mistaken idea, ran after the cart, and cried to the driver: "Hey man—hey, man, yer losin' a' yer water!" His friend, annoyed at Tougal's want of knowledge, ran after him, caught him by the arm, and said, rather testily: "Tougal, man, Tougal, dinna be showin' yer ignorance. D'yer no see it's to keep the laddies off the back o' the cairt?"

An Old Soldier's Experience.

Dennard, Ark., Sept. 7th. Mr. E. J. Hicks, merchant of this place, has written for publication, an account of a personal experience, which is very interesting.

"I am an old Federal soldier," writes Mr. Hicks, "and shortly after the close of the war I was taken sick. I had aches and pains all over me, fluttering of the heart and stomach trouble. I just simply was never a moment without pain. I could not sleep at night, and I was always tired and fearfully weak.

"I took medicine all the time, but for a long time I was more dead than alive. Altogether I suffered for over twenty years, and I believe I would have been suffering yet, or in my grave, if I had not read of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I got an almanac which told me of this remedy, and I bought some of it. I started with three pills a day, but increased the dose to six pills a day. I had not used many till my pains began to disappear. I kept on and now I can sleep and eat as well as ever I could, and I feel like a new man, with no pains or aches left.

"I will always recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they are a wonderful remedy."

AMERICA'S CUP TO REMAIN HERE

England Must Produce a Genius Equal to Herreshoff to Secure It.

THE FINAL RACE IS SAILED

Lead of Reliance Was So Great It Was Said There Was No Second—Shamrock III Lost Her Bearings and Did Not Cross the Line.

New York, Sept. 4.—Reliance, the America's cup defender, yesterday won the third and final race for that famous trophy, the America's cup. In a dense fog which prevented vision beyond 200 yards she finished the race at 5:30:02. Shamrock III after running for more than an hour in the fog, missed the final line, passed by it and then returned to it from the opposite direction. As Reliance was being towed through the fleet yacht ensigns fluttered from her truck and spreaders in celebration of her victory. Shamrock III did not cross the finish line. As often said of the historic race when the America won the cup, there was no second.

This successful result was achieved only after four futile attempts to sail off the final race after the outcome had been admitted by even Sir Thomas Lipton to be a foregone conclusion. Yesterday's was the eighth attempt to sail a race. After one fluke Reliance won the two following races, one by seven minutes and three seconds and the other by one minute and nineteen seconds. A week ago yesterday the first attempt to sail the third race failed and attempts have been made every day this week. On these occasions Reliance led Shamrock to the finish line by two miles but failed to reach it before the expiration of the time limit of five and a half hours. Yesterday's victory means that the cup is destined to remain in America until England is able to produce a genius equal to Herreshoff in yacht designing.

Rarely if ever has there been a more spectacular finish than Reliance's yesterday. After racing for more than an hour at great speed through a blinding fog, Reliance burst through the wall of mist upon the vision of the spectators' fleet assembled at the finish line, and heeling under a great bellying balloon jib topsail, until her lee rail was awash, flew across the finish line almost before the spectators could determine for a certainty that it was she. Once more the Yankee boat had added to the long string of victories in contests for the honored old silver trophy that carried with it the blue ribbon of the sea.

BALKAN ASPECT ALARMS.

Seriously Occupies the Attention of All the European Capitals.

London, Sept. 5.—The increasing threatening aspect of affairs in the Balkans seriously occupies all the European capitals. What shall be done in Macedonia is anxiously discussed on all sides. The censorship is active in Constantinople, for the only news thus far of the landing of marines emanated from Washington. The subject is not mentioned in any Constantinople dispatches received here.

The Austrian embassy at Constantinople, in the absence of convincing proofs, has not yet taken action. The police in the meantime are arresting Bulgarians in all parts of Constantinople, and wild rumors are afloat there of other projected outrages.

The Vienna bourse is panic stricken because of the fears of war. Most active military preparations by the Turkish government are proceeding, and Turkish officers are talking of their ability to reach Sofia within three weeks from the outbreak of war.

Dispatches from Sofia, via Vienna, assert that the war party in Bulgaria is gaining ground. The semi-official Drovnik is preaching a war, and has revealed the existence of an alleged Russo-Bulgarian treaty of alliance signed by Dr. Danieff and General Paprikoff, late Bulgarian premier and minister of war respectively.

On the other hand, showing the difficulty of arriving at an accurate estimate of the real condition of affairs, the Sofia correspondent of the Daily Telegraph declares that Bulgaria's aversion to war is insuperable on both military and political grounds. He asserts that the Bulgarian government is resolved sedulously to avoid everything calculated to lead to hostilities, first, on account of the Austro-Russian opposition and secondly, because the army is totally unprepared for war. Prince Ferdinand is devoting his efforts to staving off a decision, hoping that the powers, for their own safety, will arrange for Europe a control of Macedonia and the restoration of peace.

"A detailed chapter of events would be more bewildering than instructive," continues the correspondent, "but neither side is fighting with kid gloves and rosewater. The real responsibility for the trouble rests neither with the Turks nor the insurgents, but on the European powers, who awakened the hopes of the Macedonians 25 years ago and then abandoned them to their fate. It should, in justice, be stated, however, that Russia has less cause for self-reproach than the rest of Europe."

POPE TAKES HAND IN THE IMBROGLIO

Urges That Catholic Powers Come to an Agreement as to Macedonia.

CONDITIONS IN THE BALKANS

The Bulgarian Government Announces That It Will Maintain a Neutral Attitude—Will Fight If Attacked.

Rome, Sept. 7.—Pope Pius X has represented to the Austrian emporer the advisability on the part of the Catholic powers, of coming to an agreement as to the best way to stop the massacres in Macedonia.

Several Cardinals have expressed the opinion that the pontiff should publicily denounce the situation in Macedonia to the civilized world, without distinction of religion, calling upon all the powers to take common action on humanitarian grounds.

London, Sept. 7.—Special dispatches from Constantinople published here this morning all concur regarding the gravity of the situation and state that the warlike feeling has been increased by the fact that the sultan last Friday reviewed and presented colors to two new Hussars regiments, recruited from the tribes which produced the ottoman dynasty, this being the first time that the sultan has presided at such a ceremony. The Turkish papers are making patriotic appeals to the loyalty and devotion of the nation.

BULGARIANS TO BE NEUTRAL.

Policy Announced as Result of Council of the Ministers.

Sona, Bulgaria, Sept. 7.—According to reliable reports from Varna, at the recent council of ministers presided over by Prince Ferdinand at the palace of Euxinograd, it was resolved that Bulgaria should maintain an attitude of the strictest neutrality in the Macedonian question, and further, that the most stringent measures should be adopted to prevent anything likely to cause a disturbance in Bulgaria's relations with Turky.

The war minister is reported to have spoken strongly in the council against any thought of Bulgaria declaring war on Turkey; first, on account of the enormous expenditures that such a war would necessitate, and secondly, because the great powers would never permit Bulgaria to reap the advantage if she were victorious. Should Turkey attack Bulgaria, declared the minister, the present army could hold the Turks in check for the first few days, while the entire Bulgarian army could be mobilized within three to twelve days. Bulgaria would never declare war, he added, but if war was declared against her, she would accept the challenge fearlessly.

As an evidence of Bulgaria's peaceful intentions, the council decided that upon the first symptoms of disorder on the frontier, martial law would be proclaimed at Burgas, Kostendil, Philippopolis and Sofia.

The ministers expressed the opinion that the powers would soon reach the conviction that the Macedonian question could not be decided without their intervention.

The Automatie publishes the names of fifty villages burned by the Turks in different districts.

Peary to North Pole.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Commander Robert E. Peary, U. S. N., the well-known arctic explorer, will make another dash for the north pole. Leave of absence for three years has been granted him with the permission of the president by Mr. Darling, acting secretary of the navy, and he has been assured of the hearty sympathy of both these officials in his new venture.

TO GET RID OF NEGROES.

The Southern Orator Would Banish The Race.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—Mr. John Temple Graves of Georgia, delivered an address on "The Problem of the Races," before the forty-eighth convocation of the University of Chicago. He said in part:

"The prejudice of race is a pointing of Providence and the antagonism of peoples is the fixed policy by which God peoples the different portions of the Universe and establishes the individuality of the nations. The act that brought these people together on this continent was a sin of the father, a sin of greed, a sin of trade and the sorrow and suffering of the present is for the sin of the past—a sin against nature and a sin against God. The curse can be lifted only when nature is vindicated and God is obeyed. The problem will be solved only when the negro is restored to the 'bounds of his habitation.'

"It is neither impossible nor impracticable. The elements are willing, and the way is in reach. This is not a day of impossibilities. The hand of the Almighty is steadily opening the way.

"It may be that the islands of the sea were placed by Providence in our keeping to furnish an answer to the problem of the time. The negro is an accident, an unwilling, a blameless, but an unwholesome, unwelcome, helpless, unassimilable element in our civilization. He is not made for our times. He is not framed to share in the duty and destiny which he perplexes and beclouds. Let us put him kindly and humanely out of the way. Let us give him a better chance than he has ever had in history and let us have done with him. Let us solve his problem, frankly, fearlessly, nobly and speedily. Let us put it behind us. Let us purify our politics of the perplexity. Let us liberate the South to vote and to think like free men upon the mighty issues of the times."

TWELVE RIOTERS GUILTY.

Attempt of Accused to Prove They Were "Innocent Bystanders."

Danville, Ill., Sept. 7.—Verdicts of guilty were returned against twelve rioters who assaulted the Danville jail on July 25. The following were found guilty:

Bessie Dodge, Winfield Baker, Jack Alton, Wm. Redwine, Mince Mobaker, John Isam, Isaac Newton Slade, John Robertson, Thomas Bell, Horace Murphy, Adam Merry, D. L. Menifree.

Richard Roberts and John Keese were found not guilty. The charge was "assaulting the Danville jail with intent to commit murder."

The trial of fourteen defendants has been on for several days. Most of the defendants have tried to prove alibis or to prove they were innocent bystanders. Sheriff Whitlock and his deputies, who defended the jail against the assault of the mob by the use of shotguns and revolvers, thus saving a negro prisoner from being lynched, identified all those convicted.

Richard Roberts turned state's evidence and identified five of the defendants as persons whom he saw in the mob. He identified Bessie Dodge and said that she stood on a wagon and urged the mob to lynch Sheriff Whitlock.

There are eight other men under indictment, but they may not be tried, as those found guilty are said to be the ring leaders. The convicted persons are subject to a penitentiary sentence.

American Ships at Beirut.

Washington, Sept. 5.—The disposition of the cruisers Brooklyn and San Francisco of Admiral Cotton's squadron, which arrived at Beirut yesterday, has not yet been finally determined by the administration. No orders regarding the future movements of the vessels have been sent to Admiral Cotton, and much will depend on the character of the report he shall make concerning conditions in and about Beirut, and on the representations which may come from the minister as to the necessity for the presence of American war vessels in Turkish waters to look after the protection of the interests of the citizens of the United States in the sultan's domain

"No, you must have a Jersey license." "Must I?" she replied, in disgust; "well, it's mighty extravagant; but a dog's worth mor'n a lawyer, anyhow; barks louder for you, and don't cost near as much."

WANTED TO MARRY MISS ROOSEVELT

Secret Service Men Arrest a Lunatic Who Sought the President.

HE CALLED AT A LATE HOUR

Henry Weilbronner Persisted He Had Been Invited By the President to Talk Over the Marriage—He Was Armed.

Oyster Bay, L. I., September 3.—A man giving his name as Frank Weilbronner was arrested at Sagamore Hill late Tuesday night while making a persistant demand to see President Roosevelt. The man was armed with a revolver fully loaded. He was taken to the village and placed in the town prison.

Shortly after 10 o'clock Weilbronner drove to Sagamore Hill in a phaeton buggy. He was stopped by the secret service operative on duty. Weilbronner said he had a personal engagement with the president and desired to see him.

As it was long after the hours when visitors are received the officer declined to permit him to go to the house. The man insisted, but the officer turned him away.

Soon afterward Weilbronner returned and again insisted that he be allowed to see the president if only for a minute. This time he was ordered away and warned not to return.

Just before 11 o'clock the man returned a third time and demanded of the officer that he should be permitted to see the president at once. The officer's response was to take the man from his buggy and put him in the stables, where he was placed under the guard of two stable men. A revolver was found in the buggy.

Later Weilbronner was brought to the village and locked up. He is 5 feet 8 inches in height, 28 years of age, has a medium sized dark mustache, black eyes and evidently is of German descent. He resides in Syosset, about five miles inland from Oyster Bay. He was well dressed in a suit of dark material and wore an old-fashioned derby hat.

It is thought by the officers that Weilbronner was accompanied by two other men, as their footprints were found in the mud alongside of the buggy tracks. In view of this fact the officer on duty telephoned to the village for assistance and was soon joined by two other secret service men.

While Weilbronner talked rationally to the officers Tuesday night it seems evident from his conversation yesterday that he is demented. He said that he had received a telegraphic communication from the president directing him to call at Sagamore Hill. His buggy was taken to a local livery barn. When asked what had become of the rig, Weilbronner replied:

"Oh, the president has taken care of it; that's all right."

Weilbronner is regarded by those who have seen him to be a dangerous lunatic.

At Syosset it is learned that the man is the son of a truck farmer and is one of three brothers. He has two sisters. The family is respectable and is held in general esteem.

Weilbronner several years ago had a nervous attack which rendered him mentally helpless for a day or two, but his family supposed that he had been quite restored by medical treatment he received at that time. Since then he had manifested no symptoms of mental aberration.

He had no socialistic or anarchistic tendencies so far as known, never having been interested in any question of this character. He was employed daily on his father's farm.

Weilbronner was arraigned yesterday before Justice Franklin on complaint of the secret service operatives, who placed him under arrest. Weilbronner's brother was present at the examination.

Justice Franklin questioned the prisoner about his movements Tuesday night. His replies were made in a quiet tone of voice, but they indicated apparently beyond a doubt that the man was crazy.

Asked why he went to Sagamore Hill, he replied:

"I went to see the president about his daughter Alice."

"Had you an engagement with the president?"

"Yes."

"How was that engagement made?"

"I talked with the president last night," replied Weilbrenner.

"How did you talk with him?"

"Oh, I just talked."

"A sort of wireless talk, was it?"

"Yes, that is it, a wireless talk."

"Why did you want to see the president about Miss Alice?"

"I wanted to marry her."

"Did you ever see Miss Roosevelt?"

"Yes, I saw her night before last."

"Where did you see her?"

"At my house."

"Did she go over there?"

"Yes, she came in a red automobile."

"Who accompanied her?"

"Her brother, Theodore."

Weilbronner was taken to Mineola, L. I., on an evening train and placed in the custody of the county officers.

GRATEFUL, HAPPY WOMEN

Miss Muriel Armitage.

THANK PE-RU-NA FOR THEIR RECOVERY AFTER YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Miss Muriel Armitage, 36 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in a recent letter, says:

"I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Peruna has done for me.

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the least I could do and procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Peruna cures catarrh of the pelvic organs with the same surety as it cures catarrh of the head. Peruna has become renowned as a positive cure for female ailments simply because the ailments are mostly due to catarrh. Catarrh is the cause of the trouble. Peruna cures the catarrh. The symptoms disappear.

Female Weakness is Pelvic Catarrh.

Always Half Sick are the Women Who Have Pelvic Catarrh.

Catarrh of any organ, if allowed to progress, will affect the whole body. Catarrh without nervousness is very rare, but pelvic catarrh and nervousness go hand in hand.

What is so distressing a sight as a poor half-sick, nervous woman, suffering from the many almost unbearable symptoms of pelvic catarrh? She does not consider herself ill enough to go to bed, but she is far from being able to do her work without the greatest exhaustion. This is a very common sight and is almost always due to pelvic catarrh.

It is worse than foolish for so many women to suffer year after with a disease that can be permanently cured.

Peruna cures catarrh permanently. It cures old chronic cases as well as a slight attack, the only difference being in the length of time that it should take to effect a cure.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna; write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Wed Wednesday.

As per program Herman Hunteman and Elizabeth Garwien were joined in wedlock on Wednesday, September 9, 1903, at the home of the bride's brother, Fred Garwien. At the appointed hour the wedding party marched into the dining room to the strains of a wedding march very nicely rendered by Albert Brinkmann, and took their position in front of the large window on the east, and under a bower of cut flowers and ferns they were made man and wife by Rev. Bowman, pastor of the English Methodist church. The bride and her attendant, Miss Lydia Garwien were elegantly gowned as was also the groom and his best man. Immediately after the ceremony the guests were invited to partake of a sumptuous wedding supper, the like of which it is sel om ones prielege to indulge in.

Both the bride and groom are well known to our people, and have always been counted among our ve.y best citizens. For a number of years the groom was one of our merchants, and by honest dealing made for himself friends by the score. The bride, during the greater share of her life has resided here and her friends and admirers are numberless. She has an amiable disposition, and has always been a favorite among the young people of her acquaintance. This young couple will move onto the groom's farm near Beltrami, Minn., in the near future and will make that place their home. All our people are sorry to lose them, but join with the TIMES in wishing them health, wealth and prosperity.

A series of ball games have been arranged for at Goodell in which Goodell plays Klemme, Olof, Meservey, and, if possible, Garner. The Klemme team went down on Tuesday and was defeated by a score of 9 to 5. Goodell has a strong lot of players together, having in their aggregation a battery from Webster City, two Belmond players, two Thornton boys, Frank Kluckhohn, of Klemme, and the balance of the team reside in Goodell. The Klemme team went into the game in a badly crippled condition. Our catcher, Joe Nissen, having his hand hurt could not play, and this necessitated the changing of men which was a great drawback to the team. Griesmer, however, caught a game that was certainly a credit to him. The Klemme boys are not disappointed on accoant of not having won the game, for in their crippled condition success was well nigh impossible. The managers of the tournament are certainly a fine lot of fellows and do all in their power to make it pleasant for their guests. Their players are gentlemanly, and no wrangling need be indulged in. The "one-armed wonder" who done the twirling for Goodell on Tuesday is certainly a good man. We understand that Goodell has submitted a proposition to Garner to play that town for $50 a side and all the gate receipts, and are patiently waiting for Garner to accept their proposition. Should the two teams meet it would be a game worth seeing.

HAPPENINGS IN HAWKEYEDOM

What Has Been Going on During the Past Week.

JEALOUSY CAUSES HOMICIDE

Frank Earl Charged With Killing John Seepo on Indian Reservation —Girl Saw Murderer Throw Body in the River.

Marshalltown, Sept. 7.—John Seepo, of the Indian police of the Iowa Sac and Fox reservation in Tama, was murdered, and Frank Earl of Winnebago, visiting there, was arrested Saturday charged with the crime. Jealousy on account of Ceim-O-Pa-Ha, an 18-year-old squaw, is the supposed cause. The body was found in the Iowa river, where it had been thrown. There was a bullet hole through the head and the throat was cut. Seepo was missed Friday, and the girl says she saw Earl throw the body in the river. The girl is also in custody, but disclaims any complicity in the affair.

John Seepo, the murdered man, is about 25 years old, and has lived on the reservation for a long time, in fact nearly all his life. He has been one of the Indian police force for several years. Thursday he was missing, and when he failed to show up Friday the authorities began to make inquiries, with the result that the young girl, Ceim-O-Pa-Ha, Friday night went to the police and told a story of having seen an Indian throw the body of a man into the river. She claimed she did not know whether the body was dead when thrown in or not, and but little information could be obtained from her. Deputy Mike Healy, of Cedar Rapids, was telegraphed for and arrived on the first train. An attempt was made to recover the body, but owing to the darkness the search was abandoned until Saturday morning, when it was renewed at the spot indicated by the girl as the place where she had seen the body thrown in, and the body was recovered. That Seepo had been murdered before the body had been thrown in was evident, for a bullet hole through the head showed how the murderer had accomplished his deadly purpose. To make death doubly sure, and to carry out the adage that dead men tell no tales, the murderer drew the keen edge of his knife across the victim's throat, making a ghastly wound.

STRUCK WIFE WITH AN AX.

Jens Paulson, Thought to Be Demented, Commits Brutal Assault.

Boone, Sept. 3.—Jens Paulson, a farmer, committed a brutal assault upon his wife yesterday afternoon, striking her on the head with an ax and nearly killing her. She is now at her home, two miles west of Miners' Ridge, in this county, in a precarious condition, and will probably die.

There is great excitement among the inhabitants of the little mining town of Frazer, which is in that vicinity, and many hard threats of vengeance are heard. The deputy sheriff and police have gone from this city to arrest Paulson, who, it is now believed, is demented and unaccountable for his rash act. He is, however, a desperate man and about a year ago was shot in the leg by a Boone officer, from whom he was trying to escape.

Fire Escape Law Attacked.

Cedar Rapids, Sept. 7.—Twenty-one petitions for damages, aggregating over $300,000 have been filed as a result of the recent Clifton hotel fire in this city. The attorneys for the defense here filed a motion stating that the Iowa fire escape law is unconstitutional and void, for the reason that it was never properly passed.

It was first passed without the enacting clause and then through the senate again by an amendment inserting the enacting clause after the title. A vote was not taken on the law thus amended, and that, it is claimed, makes it worthless.

Gets Bullets With Bride.

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 4.—Earl Marshall, 20 years of age, fired two shots into a party gathered for the wedding of his sister and R. H. Marshall of Dudley, Iowa. Young Marshall was violently opposed to the marriage. One of the bullets passed close to the head of the bridegroom and narrowly missed the minister. The second passed over their heads. Marshall escaped.

Stolen Silk Found.

Ottumwa, Sept. 4.—Chief of Police John W. Cray discovered a package of four hundred yards of silk which was hidden under a pile of lumber. August Neimyer, a stranger, has been arrested, but two other suspects escaped. The silk is supposed to have been stolen from the store of Hill & Company at Bloomfield last Tuesday night and is valued at $300.

Accidentally Shot.

Morning Sun, Sept. 4.—Frank G. Wright, aged 34, accidentally shot himself in the hip while hunting. He crawled under a barb wire fence, drawing the gun after him. The trigger of the gun caught in the strand of wire, discharging the load into his body. He was taken to Burlington hospital and is not expected to live.

FOOD ADULTERATION

Result of Pure Food Experiment by Dr. Weems.

Ames, Sept. 5.—A move toward the suppression of food adulteration and towards securing the passage of pure food laws in Iowa was made some time ago by the state department of agriculture. The action taken was the appointing of a committee to make tests of various articles of food now on the market to determine their purity. The committee appointed included the Hon. S. B. Packard, Dr. J. B. Weems of Ames and Mr. W. J. Wragg.

Prof. Weems, station chemist at Ames, began some chemical tests of vinegars, baking powders, jellies, catsups, mustards, preserves, soups, breakfast foods, and other similar articles now sold on the market. It was considered necessary to the passage of pure food laws that the injurious adulterations, if any existed in such foods, should be shown. Not only the consumer, but the grocery man, also suffers from adulterated food. For example, about 66 per cent of the vinegar of commerce which is sold for pure cider vinegar was found to be impure. The grocers claim to buy it for cider vinegar and clim that in many cases the jobber himself is deceived.

Following are the results of some of the tests. There are three chief kinds of baking powder. Of these all contain soda and filler, the latter being composed of starch and flour. The distinctive characteristics of the three kinds are that cream of tartar powder contains cream of tartar, alum powder contains alum and phosphate powder contains phosphate. The adulteration usually consists in substituting alum or phosphate for the more expensive cream of tartar and selling all as cream of tartar baking powder. Gypouim or starch is also used as the adulteration forming a more injurious food.

Jellies were another food tested. Most articles of commerce of this nature were found to consist of some cheap, poor quality of fruit to which was added corn syrup or glucose, flavoring and coloring matter. Often even the flavoring and coloring is neglected. A half dozen glasses of the same brand labeled as different jellies could have been taken from the same bucket so exact were they in color and taste. The better jellies are highly flavored to imitate the real article. In fact, both jellies and catsups are often colored in excess of the natural product. They have a very pleasing color that the home product does not have. In cooking the color to some extent disappears and accordingly the housewife cannot give to her home made product of the pure unadulterated fruit the highly pleasing color of the commercial article.

Dr. Weems' test next considered will be along the line of breakfast foods.

FOR PETERSON MURDER.

Chief of Police Brackett on the Best Clue Yet.

Des Moines, Sept. 5.—The Peterson murder mystery may yet be solved. Chief of Police Brackett is authority for the statement that he is now working upon the strongest clue that has yet been discovered. He went to Oskaloosa yesterday and it is understood that his mission has to do with the case, although he absolutely declined to divulge any information as to the clue or his investigations.

The Peterson children, Tommy and Lena, were killed more than a year ago, while on their way home from church one Sunday evening. The scene of the crime was north of Highland Park college. Its purpose appeared to be assault on the girl and the boy seemed to have been slain defending his sister's honor.

POSTOFFICE IS ROBBED.

Thieves Dynamite Safe at Plainfield and Secure Over $300.

Plainfield, Sept. 5.—The postoffice in Plainfield was entered by burglars, the safe blown open with dynamite and its contents made off with. The loss in stamps and money was upwards of $300. The cash amounted to about $75 and included about $25 belonging to the Cemetery association and G. A. R. post, of which organization Mr. Roberts was treasurer. The robbery is supposed to have been committed by a couple of strangers who were seen about the town the evening previous, and they are believed to have left on a north bound train.

Trust Ignored by Butchers.

Dubuque, Sept. 4.—The members of the Dubuque Butchers' association, becoming incensed at the action of the Chicago and other outside meat dealesr in taking off the delivery wagons, have decided to rely on themselves hereafter, and will slaughter their own cattle. The old abbatoir is being put in shape for the work. They say they can furnish their own meats cheaper than they can buy them from Armour and others.

Suit to Break Will.

Mason City, Sept. 4.—Mrs. Williams, one of the sisters of the late Henry Day, has brought suit to break his will, he having bequeathed most of his property to Mrs. Harriet Ogden, a sister, of this city. The estate is estimated to be worth $200,000.

Another Electric Line.

Lake City, Sept. 4.—It is proposed to build an electric line between Carroll and Manson, passing through Elderdale and Lake City. The business men of all the towns are taking the matter up and something definite will be done concerning it shortly.

HAS 10,000 RARE BUGS

But Iowa City Professor Worked Hard For Them.

Iowa City, September 3.—Prof. Henry F. Wickham, professor of entomology, at the State University of Iowa, has returned home from a triumphant eleven weeks' tour of the blazing desert at the Great Basin.

Day after day, without food and water, a day at a time, he sought rare beetles and other insects in the salt and soda lakes of that district.

He covered thousands of miles, in all, and again and again pursued his investigations where no entomologist had ever before set foot.

As a result of his sacrifice of peace and comfort, he secured 10,000 specimens, and among them were many absolutely new to the scientific world. The University of Iowa will be the gainer by Prof. Wickham's researches and privations, for the collections will prove of inestimable value to the Iowa museum, but the world of science at large will also profit, inasmuch as the information he toiled and sacrificed for will be duly published—and it will be—in part—entirely new to entomologists in every land.

The investigations and discoveries made by the Iowan have fostered and endorsed the theory which he has strongly advocated, and for which he has labored long—that the distribution of insects in the Great Basin today is largely determined by the geological formations connected with the great ancient lakes, Bonneville and Lahontan.

This theory was sustained the past summer, although Prof. Wickham, to accomplish his purpose, was compelled to walk over an arid desert, across which horses could not travel—and on the burning sands of which a scorpion could be broiled to death in less than 30 seconds—a desert on which the thermometer registered 119 degrees in the shade—if the word "shade" is not a misnomer.

The result of part of his investigations was told, by request, to the San Francisco Entomological club, in a scholarly paper, on his return to civilization.

FALLING WALLS KILL TWO.

Two Story Brick Building at Vinton Collapses Without Warning.

Cedar Rapids, Sept. 5.—A two-story brick building in process of modernizing, collapsed without warning at Vinton yesterday while the streets The dead: William Johnson, lather, building was filled with workmen. The dead: William Johnson, lather; buried in debris, and an unknown man, body not yet recovered. The injured: George Pitts, plumber, leg broken and internal injuries, possibly fatal; W. H. Bowen, plasterer, buried in debris, will recover; Fred Dake and Al. Fisher, painters, thrown from ladders and struck by debris, injuries not dangerous.

The unknown man was a young farmer, who was seen walking along the side of the building an instant before it fell, and has not yet been found. The collapsed portion of the building was 25x80 feet, two stories high, in the lower part of which was Quinn's grocery store. The clerks and customers all escaped with slight injuries. The noise of the falling building was heard all over the town and the cloud of dust was so dense that it was fully fifteen minutes before the work of rescue could be commenced.

The owner of the building is A. C. Parsons, a jeweler. The building represented his savings of a life time. His loss is irreparable and he was so prostrated that he had to be carried to his home.

It was hours before the body of Johnson was reached. It is believed he was instantly killed. He leaves a wife and daughter.

Prisoner is Released.

Chickasha, I. T., Sept. 4.—Another Meade murder clue has gone glimmering and another endeavor to find the slayer of the young man killed in a restaurant in West Liberty, Ia., the morning of May 14, has resulted in nothing. Enoch Schaffer, the lad arrested in this city last Friday and held for complicity in the crime, was released last evening and Marshal Wiley and the editor of the West Liberty Enterprise, who came to this city to get the prisoner, will return home at once.

Held to Grand Jury.

Oskaloosa, Sept. 4.—Chas. Taylor, accused of assaulting his two young daughters at Evans, has been bound over to the grand jury under a bond of $1,000 which he cannot furnish. His wife is said to be taking his part and has sent the two girls away so they cannot appear against him. The people of Evans are highly incensed at her action and the women have called upon Mrs. Taylor and requested her not to make any move in the behalf of the inhuman husband and father.

Was Caught in the Belting.

Glenwood, Sept. 5.—While working at a sawmill William Gargus, who was operating the mill, got caught in the belting, and after being carried some distance was hurled with terrific force against the framework of the mill structure. The bones of the arm and shoulder were crushed and he sustained a number of severe cuts about the head and upper part of the body. It is now believed he will live.

Caught on Shaft and Killed.

Oskaloosa, Sept. 4.—A horrible accident occurred in the feed mill here, resulting in the death of George Stone. Stone's clothing caught in the shafting from which the machinery is powered and he was hurled over against the ceiling, being literally pounded into a jelly. Every stitch of clothing was torn off his body and nearly every bone broken.

Lee how!" came down the answer, ged with the wind, as the man, ling, made for the crosstrees. When the brig soared to the height the white-headed sea, the sail was ible in the glass. Pope looked and three spires rocking solemnly. A -rigged ship was sailing southwest down, and Captain Pope called to wheel:

Let her go off a couple of points. ather braces, Mr. Crystal! we'll e a look at that gentlemen."

ail was trimmed; the brig rushed h each heave, roaring white into green and freckled hollows. She a path as brilliant as sunshine ern, and Crystal, watching the men g upon the braces, marveled to self that Pope should dream of do- business in the English channel.

ut the truth is, Pope had come to ill equipped in his lazarette, by ich I mean he was very meanly plied with stores. Fresh water he taken in in abundance, but not for the cabin or the ecastle. He had therefore resolved t he would fill his larder as he nt along by helping himself from holds of vessels he passed or rhauled. This was quite consist- with the traditions of the pirates, in sober truth Pope could not e determined otherwise, for after had paid Staunton four hundred nds cash and the bills, and ad- ced money to his sailors, purchased wder, rum and so on, the proceeds m the sale of the plate had dwin- d alarmingly, and he was short of ney when he began to think of pro- ions.

The vessel they had altered their rse for held on very stately and , an English East Indiaman, and e of the finest specimens of her ble kind.

t had been imagined by the crew en the brig's course was altered the ship behind the sea that some- ing in the buccaneering way was in- nded. The most eager of all who anced aft, the most expectant in pression, was the boatswain. Hap- ning to come near Captain Pope en sail was again being trimmed ter the brig had been brought to her rse, he said, "Had you meant to ak her, sir? She's a fine vessel. I allow"—here he swore—"that ere's specie enough in her to sink by a stroke."

Pope answered the boatswain Grin- l thus "There may be gold in her sink us by a strake as you say; t our men are undisciplined; they e but thirty, and you may swear e's a full ship, and I have yet to d out that all hands of us will be ling to plunder her."

Grindal turned his evil eyes over e decks and answered, "I think 'll find 'em all willin'. Where's e risk? We've a letter of marque, n't we, sir?"

"Now you shall hear the truth pres- tly," exclaimed Pope sternly, with at strong air of command and power hich rarely failed him when he dealt ith seamen; and he gave Grindal an der which dispatched him forward. Pope took some time to rehearse d make up his mind, and frequently ole a glance at the men. By this ur it was drawing on to four clock; the weather had improved. It ill blew a fine sailing breeze, but the ngy thickness had been blown out the sky.

"Mr. Crystal (he mistered his friend times of duty in the hearing of the en; there could not be two cap ins), "tell the boatswain to pipe the hole ship's company aft."

In a few minutes all hands had assembled upon the main-deck—a formidable crowd, as they swayed in their varied, wild, romantic attire with the heave of the plank.

"I've called you aft, my lads," said Pope with a look round, "to explain the nature of this cruise. I am a gentleman of fortune; my friend, Captain Crystal, who is your chief mate, rows in the same boat, so does every mother's son of you."

At this a colored man's wondering face broke into a grin.

"We're not bound to the Bay of Campeachy to trade thence with the West Indies, but to plunder ships and enrich ourselves, so that we may disperse and settle down and live like gentlemen on our means. In a word," he shouted, flourishing his cigar, "we're a pirate!"

He ceased at this, running his eyes over the people among whom there was a considerable stir, indicative of a variety of sensations and passions.

A seaman shouted, "So much the better."

Another, "Ha' yer guns enough?"

And another, "What was the good of that roasting lie about Campeachy? I'd ha' been right to hear the truth," at which well-turned phrase there arose a murmur that lighted up Captain Pope's face.

"I understood you was a letter of marque, cap'n," said the boatswain Grindal, who stood a little forward of the others. "Not that it matters though."

"We're a pirate; all of you know what that means. I am a man of few words; this is what I stand here to say," said Pope, planting himself firmly on outstretched legs, "the terms are half the plunder for the crew and the brig herself when I've gone ashore and got enough. If we take ten thousand pounds out of a ship, five thousand is divided among you. Is that good enough? But who's going to stop at ten thousand pounds provided you're willing and prove yourselves men."

He paused at this, and a loud hum of assent went up. Captain Crystal, gazing anxiously, saw very easily that the hands were willing. No murmur or curse of resentment was audible as though the fellows had been duped. But in sober truth the majority had shipped with a clear conception that something more was meant by this cruise than Campeachy and the West Indies.

He drank their health.

CHAPTER VI.

The Collision.

The Gypsy was now a pirate, recognized as such by her crew, with a black flag in her color-locker ready for hoisting when occasion required. And when Captain Pope ordered his men to reassemble on the main-deck, it was more with a view to holding a council than to making speeches.

First he told them he had put to sea so ill-stocked with provisions that in a week they must be in want; their immediate business therefore was to plunder a ship for food and drink. He stated that he had a sufficiency of powder and shot; more was always to be obtained by plundering small vessels. Next day, he said, the arms-chests would be brought on deck, and the crew drilled by Mr. Crystal and Matthew Grindal in the exercise of the cutlass and the cannon.

"There's few of us as wants drilling," broke in a harsh voice; "you lay us alongside, we'll know what to do."

Captain Pope received this interruption very affably. He then informed the men that he had obtained private but certain instructions from a friend of his who had been his shipmate in a privateer in 1814, of the dispatch of a rich Spanish ship from Cadiz for the Manillas. He named the date of her sailing, and said that it was his intention to cruise in the path of her course until he fell in with her. At this piece of news the seamen gave another loud cheer. Thus he detained his men while he communicated his intentions, and listened to their opinions, which most frequently took the form of huzzas, till it grew as dark as night, whereupon they lighted lanterns, that the crew might be divided into watches; and while this was doing Pope sung out to his servant to fill a bucket of rum and bring it on deck, and give it to the men that they might make themselves punch in abundance.

It was now the second dog watch; very dark but clear and finely spangled. The light of the lanterns sat like a square of luminous fog in the yawn of the main hatch, toward which Captain Pope advanced. He looked down, then seeing Crystal pass out of the companion-way, he put his log over and descended a flight of steps, from the lowest of which he sprang out to the deck or platform where his sailors were assembled.

The boatswain was at the head of the table, and he was in the middle of a story of some friends of his, sailors, who had been robbed of one hundred and forty pounds by two women and a young man desperately armed, dressed up as a woman, when his eye lighted on the captain, who stood under the main-hatch surveying the scene. The men, seeing their captain, raised a great, half-drunken noise of hurrahs, and Maddison of the squint cried out, "Will you drink with us, your honor?"

"I've come below to do it," says Pope, advancing to the table, and taking a pannikin with a little rum in it, he addressed the men. They were as silent as figure-heads while his words were being delivered. Nothing troubled the stillness but Pope's voice, the creaking of the brig's timbers, and once or twice the squeak of a rat in the hold below. His speech was very encouraging; he said he wanted them to make a home of the brig, and to live happily together. They should not want for leisure; he expected they would be always prompt in obeying orders; their lives would depend upon obedience and dispatch; he would try and provide them with plenty to eat and drink, and, as they sailed under the black flag, the usual sea discipline would be greatly relaxed. What they all wanted was plenty of money, and that they would get if they fought stoutly and feared nothing.

All sorts of roaring cries followed the captain's address. The men were flattered by his presence. He drank their health, then to the success of the cruise, which he promised them should be too brief to enable the British cruisers to give them any trouble.

"Now sing songs and be happy, my hearties," says he; and he went on deck, the men shouting their satisfaction after him and beating the table with their pannikins.

At ten o'clock Captain Pope went below. The cabin was warm though the little skylight was open. In a corner was a little table upon which were a small compass, a quadrant, and one or two other methematical instruments of a primitive sort; close beside it leaned a bag of charts, one of which he extracted, and, carrying it to the table in the cabin, fell to musing over it with a pencil in his hand.

All of a sudden, while he overhung the chart, thoughtfully considering the winds in that part of the sea according to his memory of them, he was startled by a loud and fearful cry on deck, quickly followed by a general uproar of voices, amid which he could hear Grindal roaring like a bull: "Where the devil are yer coming to? Starboard yer hellum."

Pope sprang from the table, rushed to his cabin, seized his sword, and, thrusting a pistol into his pocket, bounded on deck. Scarce was his head clear of the companion-way when he was nearly thrown by a violent concussion. The little brig heeled, trembling to her keelson, with some noise of splintering aloft and the seething patter of fragments of timber, blocks and the like launched from a height into the quiet water. The night was extremely dark; the mist had thickened into something like a fog since two bells.

Shouts were to be heard over the side. A yelling and groaning of voices in an unknown togue. Close aboard with her starboard bow caressing the side of the Gypsy, while her bowsprit carrying its black wing of jib shot over the brig's rail, like a branchless fallen tree, was a vessel somewhat larger than the pirate, apparently a schooner, but it was so dark that no one could have told you the true rig of her. A man holding up a lantern was shouting in some unintelligible language. Some men were hauling at the ropes, yelping in choruses. Others ran about the decks as though panic-stricken; in all there might have been some twelve or thirteen men visible in that ship.

Points on Pasteurization.

By pasteurization we understand the application of heat to such a degree that most of the bacteria are destroyed; the temperature generally made use of ranges between 140 to 185 degrees F., said M. Mortenson at a dairy convention. This should not be confused with sterilization, by which we understand complete destruction of bacteria; this may be accomplished either by application of heat or by the use of chemicals. Every buttermaker at present has become so familiar with pasteurization that he can without difficulty pasteurize milk for starters, but pasteurization of milk and cream for city supply and especially cream for buttermaking, requires more experience and very careful work. The cooked flavor which milk acquires after it has been heated to a temperature of 150 degrees F. must be prevented when milk is to be sold for direct consumption. The consumer generally objects to the cooked flavor; only a few understand that that flavor serves as a guarantee that this milk is a pure, healthy food. The Wisconsin Experiment station recommends that the milk be heated to 140 degrees F. for thirty minutes; that does not produce the cooked flavor and it does not affect the rising of the cream as do higher temperatures. Pasteurization of milk and cream for direct consumption is continually growing in favor. As to the digestibility of pasteurized milk compared with raw milk opinions are divided. Experiments along that line of work have been conducted at the Maryland Experiment station, where they arrived at the conclusion that raw milk is more easily digested when fed to calves than either pasteurized or cooked milk; they also corresponded with physicians in charge of childrens' hospitals and the majority of them favor the use of raw milk for infants, when the milk was known to be in perfect condition, but favored pasteurized milk under ordinary conditions. Dr. Fleischmann together with Dr. August Morgen and other European scientists conducted experiments which lead to the conclusion that the nitrogenous matter in milk which has been submitted to a high temperature is somewhat more digestible than in fresh milk.

New York's Milk.

The milk trade in the vicinity of New York is rapidly taking on a system of its own that seems to be unique in this country. The milk dealers are largely organized under the title of the "People's Pure Milk Company." The producers of milk have a gigantic organization, which they call the "Five States Milk Producers' Association." Not long ago they completed a five years' agreement dating from October, 1903, the producers of milk to deliver to the dealers about 20,000 cans of milk per day, agreeing to sell to them all the milk they produce, except such as is used in their homes. The agreement is on the quart basis, the monthly prices to be as follows: January, 3 4-8 cents; February, 3 3-8 cents; March, 3 1-8 cents; April, 3 cents; May, 2 5-8 cents; June, 2 1-8 cents; July, 2 3-8 cents; August, 2 6-8 cents; September, 3 cents; October, 3 1-8 cents; November, 3 3-8 cents; December, 3 5-8 cents. However these prices are subsequently changed they must never fall below a yearly average of 2⅝ cents per quart in cash. After two years, the annual average is to be increased to 2⅞ cents per quart. The milk selling company sells a part of its stock to the producers, thus making them partakers in the profits of the milk delivery. The milk delivering company furnishes all cans and keeps them clean without expense to the milk producers. One hundred pounds of milk is agreed upon as the equivalent of 48 quarts. The milk producers living near the city are to receive in addition to the above mentioned prices the difference in freight rates over the long hauls for which the prices are made. The milk producers that do not keep their stables in a sanitary condition are to be excluded from the benefits of this agreement, and their milk will be refused.

Renovated Butter Product.

There are in the United States in the neighborhood of 70 factories for the renovating of butter, and their product last year is reported to have been over 59,000,000 pounds. The new revenue law relating to renovated butter went into effect last year and for the first time we have statistics that are something more than guesses. The tax of one-fourth cent a pound does not seem to find many objectors among the renovated butter interests, and the supervision given the factories is something of a guarantee to the people of the production of a wholesome product.

POULTRY

Predatory Animals.

Could a census be taken of the fowls lost by the ravages of animals of prey the results would be truly astonishing. In the newer settled sections of the country forest animals are so persistent in their attempts to get at the poultry that the raising of chickens is frequently discontinued. One would hardly expect to hear of large losses from the ravages of coons, weasels and minks inside of the limits of Cook county, Illinois, yet such losses are frequently reported. The writer knew of a neighbor who lost a big white Leghorn cock. The animal had entered the hen house at night, selected the largest bird obtainable and had carried it off, climbing a post and walking along a board fence eight feet high. Indications pointed to a coon as the mischief doer, but it was not thought probable that a coon was in that vicinity. However, the next day another neighbor shot a coon in the neighborhood and the case was proven.

Another man living in a good-sized Chicago suburb told the writer that some wild animal had destroyed his whole flock. He got through the wires one night and killed a part of the flock. The man the next day made everything secure, as he supposed; but that night the animal dug a burrow under the walls of the house, got in and killed the rest of the flock. A weasel was suspected. This goes to show that a little precaution against these animals will hardly prove effective. The point is that while we are making the poultry house secure we should make it so secure that no loss can be occasioned by these animals.

Incidentally we might criticise the practice of many poultry owners leaving the doors and windows of their houses open during the summer nights, with no protection whatever. This was the case with the man that lost the White Leghorn cock. A door and window made of inch mesh wire would have been entirely effective in keeping out animals, even rats. The writer has used this wire and has found it very strong and durable. It is not expensive and there is no reason why it should not be extensively used.

Where there are young chicks, this wire should be used to keep out rats. Rats become very destructive of chicks after they once get a taste of chicken. On the other hand rats will frequently live on a farm for years and never touch a chick. It is largely a question of forming a habit. When rats once get the taste for spring chicken, a relentless war will have to be waged upon them. At one time the writer had a great deal of trouble in this respect. The rats got so they would attack a chick of almost any size, and it was not unusual to find in the morning a half grown chick killed and partly eaten by the rodents. One day the fowls were making a fuss and the writer hurried to find the cause. A big rat had a half-grown chicken by the leg and was pulling it under a broken board in the floor.

In such cases it will sometimes be found necessary to use poison. Electric paste of some make has always proven the most effective in the experience of the writer. But it is better to so construct the poultry house that no rats or other animals of any size can get in. This can be done in various ways. Cement always makes a good floor and prevents rats getting in from that point. Where a board floor is to be used, it should be so far above the ground that the rats can find nothing to stand on in their attempts to gnaw a hole through the boards. Rats never attempt to cut their way into a building from the outside, and this point may well be left unguarded. The trouble is that most floors are put within a few inches of the ground, or else cross beams and foundation stones are so carelessly placed that the rodents find an abundance of support in their operations.

Brag is a good dog, but seldom worth the value of a license.

NO MORE CROSS-EYED THAN HE.

Anecdote Shows How Hard It Is to See Our Own Defects.

Miss Clara Barton, president of the American Red Cross society, met in St. Petersburg, where she attended the recent international Red Cross convention, the painter, Prince Troubetskoy.

Prince Troubetskoy told her that in Paris he had once done a portrait of an American who was cross-eyed. The painter thought a great deal about the matter and finally made his picture cross-eyed, too, so that it should be a faithful likeness.

When it was done the original looked at it and said:

"It seems to me—it seems—why, hang it, this picture is cross-eyed, isn't it?"

"Why, no more than you are, sir," said Prince Troubetskoy.

"Well, perhaps you're right," murmured the American. "It seems to have a queer look about the eyes, though."—Pittsburg Gazette.

TOO FUNNY FOR J. BULL.

London Paper Comments on Proposed Anti-Kissing Law.

Nothing is stranger than the absolute lack of a sense of humor so often displayed by our transatlantic friends in their conduct of social affairs. Generally speaking, one would describe Americans as droll folk, yet how could a nation which has produced Artemus Ward and the thousands of stories which we so liberally draw upon for our comic journals seriously accept the suggestion that kissing shall be made illegal except between people who possess certificates that they are free from disease of any kind? Imagine the passionate lover, who has just learned that SHE loves him, being repulsed because he cannot produce the necessary passport to osculation! How, one wonders, is it to be made patent to all and sundry that any one is a kissable subject. Are the certified ones to wear a badge, or must they shave off an eyebrow or otherwise distinguish themselves from their hapless uncertified brothers and sisters?—London Lady's Pictorial.

EARLY SESSION IS ABANDONED

President Decides to Call Special Session to Meet November 9.

PLAN MET WITH OPPOSITION

Senators and Representatives Objected to Leaving Home in Campaign, and a Later Date Was Finally Decided Upon.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Sept. 14.—After mature consideration and consultation in person and by mail with members of both the senate and house of representatives, President Roosevelt has abandoned the suggestion that congress be called into extraordinary session in October. The extraordinary session, which he announced many months ago would be held this fall, will be called, according to present plans, to meet on November 9, which was the date tentatively fixed some time ago. It is not expected that the formal call for the session will be issued until after the president shall have returned to Washington.

Notwithstanding the fact that the suggestion of an October session of congress came from prominent senators who warmly advocated its adoption, the proposition was not received with favor by members of congress generally. The idea of a session in October was opposed particularly because it would oblige senators and representatives to leave their states and districts in the midst of a campaign which to many of them and to their party was of vital importance.

No definite agreement yet has been reached as to the character of the financial legislation which may be enacted at the approaching session of congress. Indeed, it is not certain that an agreement can be reached between the two branches of congress whereby any special legislation can be enacted. It may be that a solution of the problem, which is alike complex and perplexing, will be reached before the convening of the extraordinary session, but even that is by no means assured.

WAR CANNOT BE DELAYED.

Conclusion in London as to the Balkan Crisis.

London, Sept. 14.—Rumor from Vienna and elsewhere is very busy this morning regarding the Balkan crisis, and whilst it is impossible to confirm the most sensational statements, there is accumulation of evidence that some violent solution cannot long be delayed.

The Sofia correspondent of the Daily Telegraph sends under Sunday's date another long dispatch warmly defending Bulgaria's patient attitude of loyalty towards the porte and the powers and denouncing Europe's indifference to the wiping out of a large Christian community. He says:

"Bulgaria has displayed unexampled moderation. Her last urgent request to the powers was that they should compel Turkey to suppress the rising by legitimate methods of warfare, but to spare women and children from indignities and massacre.

"But even this Christian Europe has refused, and now Prince Ferdinand's government, having carefully considered the question and aware of the disastrous consequence with which the powers threaten Bulgaria if she intervenes, has decided that it cannot longer neglect its sacred duty to prevent the Christian population being done to death. In a couple of days more the die will be cast and Bulgaria will do her duty.

"An official communication will be made to the powers in the above indicated sense and forthwith the necessary measures will be taken and only countermanded if the powers immediately intervene. This is Bulgaria's last word. The moral responsibility will fall upon Christian Europe, even if the material consequences have to be endured by Bulgaria."

A dispatch from Constantinople to the Standard says large forces are being collected to the north and northwest of Constantinople, where, in the event of war, the first fighting is expected to occur, and though allusion to any plan of campaign is strictly censured, it may be assumed that German advice during recent years has not left Turkey unprepared this time.

From Vienna comes the semi-official statement that Austria has again proposed to the powers to admonish Bulgaria, but that so far nothing has come of the proposition.

RUSSIA ASKS TIME.

Request to Remain Longer in One Province Not Taken Seriously.

Washington, Sept. 14.—Russia has requested permission of China to postpone her evacuation of one of the frontier provinces of Manchuria for several months after October 8, the date for the general evacuation of Manchuria. Minister Conger cables the state department this fact, and the matter has been referred to Secretary Hay at the secretary's summer home in New Hampshire for consideration. The state department apparently is not concerned over Russia's request, as it is pointed out the province is only a small one, and the postponement asked is only for a short time.

CRITICISM BY AN OLD TIMER.

NAMES OF MEN GIVEN OUT.

Machen, Beavers and Erwin Are Charged With Conspiracy.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 12.—United States District Attorney Beach yesterday announced that the six persons named in the seven indictments returned by the grand jury last Tuesday are: George W. Beavers, former chief of the division of salaries and allowances, postoffice department: August W. Machin, former general superintendent of the free delivery system, postoffice department; James W. Erwin, former postoffice inspector, with headquarters in San Francisco; George Huntington and I. McGirhean, both of New York city, owners of the Columbia Supply company of that city, and Eugene D. Scheble of Toledo, Ohio, a dentist, and interested in the firm of Maybury & Ellis of Detroit, Michigan, letter box manufacturers.

Beavers, Machen and Erwin are named jointly in one indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States. Another indictment is against McGirhean, Huntington and Machen for conspiracy to defraud the United States, and still another is against the same three for conspiracy to commit bribery, both under section 5440 revised statutes. Scheble and Machen are indicted jointly for conspiracy against the United States and again for conspiracy to commit bribery. Another indictment is against McGirhean and Huntington for bribery, and the last is against Machen singly for accepting bribes under section 5501 revised statutes.

Neither Mr. Beavers nor his counsel would discuss the nature of the charges, but gave notice that they would on September 25 insist upon the government producing its complete evidence against Beavers.

The complaint made against Beavers was based on the Washington indictment and signed by Confucius I. Wayland, postmaster. The complaint charges that, according to an indictment returned in Washington, August W. Machin, general superintendent of the free delivery system, in company with George W. Beavers and J. W. Erwin, conspired with other persons to defraud the United States by giving to and obtaining for the Postal Device and Improvement company (a corporation organized under the laws of California), in a manner contrary to law and the postal regulations, the exclusive opportunity and business of furnishing to the free delivery service certain articles, supplies and equipments free from all competition, at unreasonable and exorbitant prices for above the ordinary cost of manufacture.

ACCEDES TO DEMANDS.

Turkish Government Removes Iniquitous Vali of Beirut.

Washington, Sept. 12.—The following bulletin was posted at the navy department yesterday:

"Admiral Cotton telegraphs from Beirut, September 10, that the governor of Damascus has been appointed acting governor general at Beirut, and has expressed a desire to settle the case of the American vice consul satisfactory to the United States government. Beirut quiet; business improving; confidence increasing."

The state department has authentic advices that Governor General Nazim Pasha of Damascus, who has been appointed acting governor of Beirut, is a trustworthy and broad-minded man, and Minister Leishman has been instructed to advise the sublime porte that the Washington government is greatly pleased at the immediate granting of its request for the removal of the governor of Beirut and the appointment in his stead of a responsible person and one favorable to foreigners.

A long cablegram reached the state department from Minister Leishman on the general Turkish situation which has not yet been made public. The prestige of Mr. Leishman at Constantinople has greatly increased since the appearance of the European squadron off Beirut and the scope of his representations to the porte have also increased in the last few days.

It is understood our government will push to an early conclusion all its pending claims against Turkey.

Chekib Bey, the Turkish minister, was a caller at the state department yesterday, bringing further reassuring advices that a "condition of absolute peace has been established at Beirut."

World's Record Broken.

Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 14.—Two world's records went by the board Saturday afternoon at the Glenville track. Lou Dillon, 2:00, driven by Millard Sanders, broke the trotting record to high sulky of 2:08¾, established by Maud S. in 1885, negotiating the distance in 2:00. The fractional time was :32¼, 1:04, 1:35, 2:05.

The Monk and Equity also broke the world's wagon record, going the mile in 2:09¾.

MORE ALARM EACH HOUR.

At Sofia it is Thought That the Army Must be Mobilized.

Sofia, Sept. 14.—With the arrival of new and sensational reports of the wholesale massacre of Christians in Macedonia, the situation here is hourly becoming more alarming. If the latest messages, which state that 60,000 Bulgarians have been slaughtered in the districts of Okrida and Leren, shall be confirmed, no doubt exists that the government will be forced to order the mobilization of the army immediately.

According to information brought by a courier to the revolutionary paper Autonomye, a force of Albanians, assisted by Turkish regular forces acting under orders direct from the Yildiz Kiosk massacred the entire Bulgarian Christian population of the Okrida and Leren districts. Fearful descriptions are given of the sights there, the soldiers slaughtering men, women and children in every direction, displaying a barbarism never before witnessed.

The number of killed is not stated in the courier's dispatches, but, according to reports from other sources, the total number of the victims will reach 60,000.

Official circles are so far without information regarding the reported massacre.

A deputation of leading professors and representatives of the professional classes waited upon the ministers and urged the government to order immediate mobilization. Premier Petroff replied to the delegation that the ministry was unable to admit the necessity for such a step at the present time.

The Turkish government is believed at the present moment to have no less than 60,000 soldiers in the vilayet of Adrianople, large bodies of them within ten and fifteen milometers of the Bulgarian frontier. Confronted with such a situation, it is argued that Bulgaria would be amply justified in mobilizing the First and Second army divisions, the headquarters of which are at Sofia and Philippopolis, and which comprise the forces nearest the Turkish frontier.

The government appears to be firmly resolved to avoid giving Turkey the slightest pretext for declaring hostilities and is doing its utmost to restrain the war fever. The situation, however, is rapidly becoming worse, and popular excitement is increasing.

PENSION ROLL INCREASING.

Commissioner Ware Says It Will Never Again Cross Million Mark.

Washington, Sept. 11.—The annual report of Commissioner of Pensions Ware, places the total number of pensioners now on the rolls at 996,545, of which 729,356 are soldiers, and 267,189 are widows and dependents. Mr. Ware announces that it is not probable that the pension roll will again cross the million line, the high water mark having been reached a year ago. Five of the pensioners are on the roll on account of the war of the revolution; 1,116 on account of the war of 1812; 4,734 on account of the Indian wars, and 13,874 on account of the Mexican war. The great bulk of the roll is as follows:

Civil war, invalids, 703,456; widows, 248,390; Spanish war, invalids, 9,200; widows, 3,662; and the regular establishment invalids, 9,170; widows, 2,938. The roll shows a net loss of 2,901 pensioners during the year. Out of a total of 304,809 applications on hand during the year, 130,109 were admitted and 113,794 rejected.

The average annual value of each pension is now $133. The annual value of the Spanish war pension roll has reached $1,765,310.

CONDITIONS IMPOSSIBLE.

United States Cannot Meet Demands of Colombian Government.

Washington, Sept. 14.—The state department has received information of the reported impossible and absurd conditions on which Colombia is willing to ratify the Panama treaty.

Briefly re-summarized, the Colombian government wants $10,000,000 from the Panama company, $20,000,000 from the United States, and to retain absolute and exclusive sovereignty in the important terminal cities of Colon and Panama and to have the sole power of policing the canal. This means that the United States, with greatly curtailed privileges, is to be bottled up between the cities of Panama and Colon, to have some jurisdiction in the middle, and Colombia to be the sovereign at either end. None of these conditions is admissible under the treaty which Secretary Hay and Mr. Herran negotiated and any one of them, if presented to the United States senate, would warrant is immediate rejection.

Mrs. Goodheart—"See here! If I give you some money I don't want you to spend it in that saloon over there." Thirsty Tom—"All right, lady, If you're toutin' for some other joint I'll be glad ter patronize it."

"Doctor," said the sweet young thing, "I've been told that eating cucumber will remove freckles." "So it will, under one condition," replied Dr. Gruff. "And what is that?" "That the freckles are on the cucumbers."

Mahoole—"Aint yez th' wan that towld me niver to dhrink wather without boilin'? Physician—"Yes sir." Mahoole—"Thin Oi hov a moind to murther ye. Oi dhrank boilled wather awn awlmost burned me mouth off."

George Washington was asked why he crossed the Delaware on the ice. "Because," he answered, "If I had crossed the Ohio, history would have mixed me up with Eliza." Here, again, he demonstrated his wonderful foresight.

"I heard to-day that your son was an undertaker. I thought you told me he was a physician." "Not at all." I don't like to contradict, but I'm positive you did say so." "You misunderstood me. I said he followed the medical profession."

An old negro living in Carrollton was taken ill recently, and called in a physician of his race to prescribe for him. But the old man did not seem to be getting any better, and finally a white physician was called. Soon after arriving, Dr. S——felt the darkey's pulse for a moment, and then examined his tongue. "Did your other doctor take your temperature?" he asked. "I don't know, sah," he answered, feebly; "I hain't missed anything but my watch as yit, boss."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contains Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Daring in the Extreme.

"You spoke very admiringly of that man's courage."

"Yes."

"But he never was a soldier or a fireman or a policeman."

"No. But he eats mushrooms that has gathered himself."

Befitting a Waitress.

Polk—She took part in your amateur play, didn't she?

Jolk—Oh, yes, she took the part of a waitress.

Polk—What sort of a costume did she wear?

Jolk—A fetching one, of course.

HIS PRAYER ANSWERED.

Lonely Individual—Ah, but I am lonely. I have lost forever my dear Angela. I would that some good fairy might send me a fair damsel to hold me more on my lap.

"Ah, but this is too much."

Making Game of Him.

A solitary sportsman, his gun under his arm, was wandering down a country lane when he met a small boy walking for school.

"I say, my boy," he remarked, "is there anything to shoot down here?"

The boy looked around for a moment, and then answered, with eagerness:

"Yes, sir. There's the schoolmaster coming over the hill."

Not to be Repeated.

"Yes" the old Indian fighter was saying, "the whole secret of success with the red varmints wuz jest to profit by experience. The Sioux done sumthin' to me once that they could never do again."

"What was that?" inquired the interested youth.

"They scalped me."

Home Violence.

Sam—Ah shud say so. When Ah got home widout eny wages mah wife rapped me wid a broomstick en broke de doah.

The assistant—And I sold it to him. Gray Stories.

STORIETTES.

A friend of Edward MacDowell attended a recital given by a mediocre teacher's pupils, and when he met the American composer, he remarked: "I heard one of the pupils, a little girl of eight, play your 'To a Wild Rose.'" The composer sighed dejectedly. "I suppose," MacDowell remarked, "that she pulled it up by the roots."

During the protracted sessions of the Parnell commission, Justice Day habitually sat with closed eyes. It was commonly supposed that his lordship was sleeping, and the late Sir Frank Lockwood, observing that the learned judge was very much awakened by a little tiff between the president and Sir Charles Russell, exclaimed, quite audibly: "This is the dawn of Day!"

Chauncey M. Depew declares that when King Edward, as Prince of Wales, visited the United States, the old Duke of Newcastle used to scan the accounts of expenditure. At the end of one hotel bill he one day found a charge which he couldn't make out. "What's that charge for?" asked the duke of the hotel proprieter. "For making such a damned fuss," was the immediate reply.

General Nelson A. Miles says that during the civil war there was one conscription fakir who made thousands of dollars before the authorities restrained him. This rascal would send letters broadcast, wherein he said he would communicate for two dollars a sure means of escaping the conscription. Letters, inclosing two-dollar notes, poured in on him, and in reply to each letter he would send a printed slip reading: "Join the nearest volunteer regiment."

A Boy's Victory.

Crossroads, Tenn., Sept. 14th.—Orbra Young, the ten-year-old son of Lester Young of this place, is a bright boy, and one who is very well liked by all who know him.

For some years Orbra has suffered a great deal with a form of Kidney Trouble which was very annoying, and which made him miserable all the time. He had to get up three or four times every night, almost all his life.

His father heard of a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and bought some for the little fellow with the result that he is now completely cured of the old trouble. He says:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills soon gave me great relief, and now I can sleep all night without having to get up. We will always praise Dodd's Kidney Pills."

There are many children suffering from Kidney and Urinary troubles. These disorders should be promptly corrected. Dodd's Kidney Pills is a safe and sure remedy for all such derangements.

Master Orbra Young conquered his troubles and made a well boy of himself by using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and any one may do the same by the same means.

Parents should see to it that their children are given a fair chance in life, and there is nothing that can undermine the health of a growing child as much as Kidney and Urinary derangements.

When some men have to walk home on a very wide street it takes them all night to get there.

It would be easier to tolerate the man who grins and bears it if it were not for the grin.

Mothers, do you know that a perfectly healthy baby never cries. When the little one does cry there's something wrong, and generally it's the stomach. Paregoric, Soothing Syrups, Cordials, Teething Syrups and Pain Killers contain opium and morphine. Don't use them. They are harmful—costly too. Such drugs constipate and derange the digestive organs.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

is pleasant to take, augments and supplies the natural digestive ferment, acts as a gentle laxative, makes and keeps babies in health and good humor. A trial will convince you.

GENTLEMEN: For constipation I would cheerfully recommend Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. States in an Argument.

"South Carolina," observes the Nashville American, "always was an obstreperous and impudent little state. It fired the first gun in a war for which it furnished less than half as many soldiers as Tennessee supplied." To which the Charleston News and Courier replies: "It is largely due to the fact of South Carolina's having been an 'obstreperous and impudent little state' in the early history of the country that Tennessee or any territory beyond it ever became any kind of state. Never forget that." At this stage of the controversy South Carolina is a little ahead.

Senator Pettus' Cheap Seat.

Senator Pettus of Alabama the other day disproved the prevailing theory that all seats in the United States Senate are expensive and that that body is altogether a millionaire's club. He sent to the secretary of state of Alabama the sum of $1 in a postal note to cover the entire expenses for his recent unanimous election. This sum represents the fee of the secretary of state for his services. So far as known this is a record in the minimum price for seats in the Senate.

Aid for Clara Morris.

Plans for the benefit for Miss Clara Morris, the actress, have taken definite shape. The performance will be held in New York city under the auspices of the theatrical profession. Rev. A. F. Underhill, pastor of St. John's Episcopal church, in Yonkers, of which Miss Morris is a member, will act as treasurer of the funds raised. Amelia Bingham, the actress, has agreed to manage the benefit, but the exact date has not been fixed. Among the patrons, many of whom have contributed money, are Bishop Potter, W. C. Whitney, J. P. Morgan, George J. Gould, H. O. Havemeyer, John D. Crimmins and John G. Carlisle.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Two men named Bargleworst and Desota were loading box cars with steel rails at Dyersville when the pile fell on them. It is thought both will die.

A tramp giving the name of Victor Nelson became intoxicated and fell a distance of twenty feet from the Illinois Central bridge just east of Cherokee. Notwithstanding the distance and the fact that he fell on a pile of rocks, it is thought the man will live, although it is impossible to tell the extent of his internal injuries. He is a Dane and will tell nothing as to his home.

Pen Mo-Sa-Ha, a young squaw, was lodged in jail at Toledo a few days ago by United States Marshal Healy. She is the only eye-witness of the killing of John Seepo by Frank Earle on the Indian reservation at Tama. Fearing that she might be prevented from testifying by force or by violence the federal authorities thought it safer to confine her awaiting Earle's trial in the federal court at Council Bluffs.

A threshing machine, two lumber wagons, a straw pile and several hundred bushels of grain were destroyed by fire on the Frank Iddings farm near Red Oak. The threshers were at dinner, the house being quite a distance from the field. During the noon hour, a neighbor telephoned that the straw pile was burning. When they arrived everything had been destroyed. It is not known how the fire originated. The loss will be about $1,500.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon McNeil, known as De Etta, have been indicted by the Webster county grand jury on a charge of manslaughter. They are held to have been responsible for the death of Clara Rasmussen, the young woman who was killed by falling from the top of the court house while attempting to perform the "slide for life" act, July 4. The McNeils managed and owned the Shelby Amusement company, of which Miss Rasmussen was part.

Fire broke out in the feed stable adjoining the boarding stable of Rick Bros. of Ft. Dodge and before it was discovered blocked the entrance, making the removal of twelve horses and a cow impossible, and burning them to a crisp. Five of the horses belonged to Rick Bros., the remainder to citizens of the town whose horses were cared for at the barn. Some harness and a small quantity of hay were also burned. The loss is estimated at $3,000, of which about one-fourth is covered by insurance.

After lying unconscious for hours, with his features distorted and his body heaving in convulsions, an unknown man found at the Wabash depot at Ottumwa by Officers Black and Beaman died. He was running when found, and it was thought at first he was insane. When taken to the police station he fell into a deeper stupor. Dr. A. O. Williams was called, but all efforts to revive him were useless, and shortly afterward the man died. A package of cocaine was found in his pocket, and it was this which caused his death. A book found on his clothing contained the name of J. W. Cashell and Mrs. G. W. Phillips of Hot Springs, Ark. Notice of the death of this man was sent to the parties whose names appeared in the book, but as yet nothing has been heard from them.

After suffering almost indescribable pain from the irritations of a sand burr which had found a lodging place in the windpipe of Roy Johnson, the 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson, of South Muscatine, the young man was given relief when the hard substance with its many stickers was removed. The burr, which was one of the ordinary sand blossom variety, found a place in young Johnson's throat, while he was attending the Columbus Junction fair. He, with a number of companions, had purchased a lunch and were seated beneath some trees preparing to satisfy their appetites. Johnson, resting his hand on the ground, came in contact with four or five burrs. All were pulled out but one and this one clung tenaciously. The boy placed his hand to his mouth and in some manner, of which he is not able to account, the burr was drawn down his windpipe.

David Houser was stabbed to death by Charles Ellsworth near Omaha a few nights ago. Both men reside in Council Bluffs and had been at a road house on the Nebraska side to attend a dance. Houser's death was not instantaneous. He died about an hour after the wound was inflicted in Dr. Hobbs' office. John Fosdick and David Houser attended a dance at Hill's road house together. A woman with whom Houser had been on somewhat intimate terms was also attending the dance, and during the evening had shown some attention to Ellsworth. This Houser resented. He and Ellsworth had some words during the evening at different times. About 11:30 o'clock Houser and Fosdick decided to return home. Fosdick took the buggy and was in company with a woman, Opal LaBlanche, while Houser started to walk on ahead. After they had gone about a mile they were overtaken by Ellsworth and several companions in a buggy and the tragedy followed. Ellsworth escaped to Council Bluffs, but was later arrested by the police there.

Ex-Treasurer McKinney of Harrison county has been indicted by the grand jury for malfeasance in office. His shortage was only $2,776, which was promptly returned to the treasury when the shortage was made known by an expert examiner. The indictment was a great surprise. Other indictments may follow.

The federal grand jury at Cedar Rapids found no bill in the case of the United States vs. George Huffman, who was charged with embezzling postoffice property. It was suspected that Huffman stole the two railway mail sacks from the union station last February, but the grand jury found the evidence insufficient, and he was released.

The house occupied by Rufus Anderson, colored, of Denison, caught fire and was almost destroyed. Later the fire caught again, completing the destruction. During the excitement at the second alarm of fire the strong box of the merry-go-round property was broken into by sneak thieves and nearly three hundred dollars was stolen. There is no clue to the thief.

Thieves cracked the safe of the Iowa Central Railway company in the depot at Newburg, and secured a quantity of tickets and cigars. The greatest damage was to the safe which was completely wrecked. The explosion shattered the windows. The wreck was discovered when Agent P. S. Howard opened up the depot for the day. There are no clues to the identity of the robbers.

Miss Fanny Loufex and Mrs. Fitzsimmons were painfully burned in a mysterious manner while riding in a street car at Cedar Rapids. In some unexplainable way the clothing of the women caught fire. Their screams attracted the attention of other passengers on the car and a panic was narrowly averted. Both of the women were forcibly ejected from the moving car to the pavement and then the flames were extinguished. They are still suffering from the shock.

Joel Rice and George Black, prisoners in the Mahaska county jail, awaiting trial in the federal court for burglary of the Montezuma postoffice, have filed an affidavit of their guilt with Geo. B. Stewart, United States deputy marshal, and asked for a change of venue from the December term at Des Moines to the September term at Council Bluffs. Rice's real name is Ed. Kahn. He is under fifteen years' sentence in Tennessee for burglary, where he escaped from custody pending a motion for appeal, which was not granted.

The Kossuth county board of supervisors have recently decided on a number of new departures that are decidedly a change from the customs of the majority of boards of supervisors in Iowa. First, they will henceforth charge the banks at minimum rate of interest for the money deposited in them by the county treasurer. The county deposits have been easy money for the banks who use it to a good advantage and have not hitherto paid a cent for its use. There is always quite a surplus on hand and this lies in the banks several months. They will also pay the cost of the county treasurer's surety bond, relieving that official of quite an item of expense.

The case of the State of Iowa vs. George Harms and H. B. Vanderpool, on change of venue, was brought before Justice Davison at Independence for the preliminary hearing. The defendants are two college boys from Wisconsin, who were earning a little money during vacation in the photograph business. A charge of conspiracy was brought against them owing to an apparent mis-representation of their work. The prosecution stated that photographs were entrusted to their safe keeping for the purpose of electrographing on glass a copy of the pictures. Instead of so doing, it is alleged the photographs were torn from the cards upon which they were mounted, and were pasted upon glass, and were so badly damaged that their owners caused the arrest of the young men who did the work. Justice Davison, after hearing the evidence, considered the matter worthy the attention of the grand jury, and bound them over to the September term. They now languish in jail, awaiting further hearing.

Luverne Klinefelter, aged four years, was kicked to death by a horse at Waterloo.

George Pattee, the son of W. D. Pattee, of Pocahontas, while shooting cats with a rifle was slightly wounded, a ball passing through his foot.

Robbers broke into the Christenson Implement office at Marne and secured $185 in cash, $300 in notes and other articles. There is no clue to the thieves.

Henry Hall, of Ft. Madison, died from the effects of a dose of laudanum taken with suicidal intent. Ill health and little differences in the family had made life a burden for the aged man and he had often threatened to commit suicide.

The grand jury at Marshalltown has returned an indictment against F. B. Marson, the singing evangelist promoter, who, it is charged, has been swindling Iowa people by obtaining money under false pretenses by means of advertising for agents for the Seminole company.

Fire at Marathon a few nights ago caused by lightning striking the telephone exchange caused the following losses: Wells & Couch's hardware store, the postoffice, Republican printing office, and the telephone exchange. The telephone exchange was located in Wells & Couch's store. The loss on all these properties was total and will aggregate $30,000.

Van Wert was recently visited by a disastrous fire. The loss will amount to $10,000. The fire burned out R. E. Blades, general merchandise; W. T. Buchanan, hardware; R. E. Galloway, restaurant; George Cane, implements and the new postoffice building just completed was burned, the postoffice not having moved to it yet; and also a building belonging to J. W. Mulkey. The town has no fire protection.

The argument of the taxpayers in the case of E. J. Heath and others vs. Charles E. Albrook and Hardin county, has been filed with the clerk of the supreme court. This is the famous Hardin county case involving a contract made secretly by the board of supervisors with an attorney for a fee for collecting taxes turned up by the tax ferrets. The courts have directed that the money paid on the contract shall be turned back to the county.

A fatal accident occurred at the west end of the Chicago Great Western depot at Marshalltown when D. M. Adams, operating a grocery at Dillon, was run down and killed by the northbound passenger No. 8. The engineer failed to see him and the entire train passed over his body, severing both legs between the knees and ankles, also crushing the side of his head to a pulp. His chest was also crushed. The company physician and ambulance were immediately called, but the man died in the ambulance.

Misses Belle and Eva Chapman, residing near Nevada were slightly injured by being accidentally shot by John Bernicker, a duck hunter. The girls were in their father's pasture, driving the cows home. Bernicker was hunting ducks. A duck arose from the pond and circled around near the girls. Bernicker, not noticing the girls, shot. Fourteen shot were taken from one of the girl's arms and six from the body of the other. Only two shot struck them in the face. Owing to the shot being small, the injuries are slight.

Burton Miller, the Fontanelle youth who burglarized the home of Peter Schofield August 20th and secured $1,000, has been sentenced to three years in the penitentiary at Fort Madison at hard labor. Miller after securing the money went to Des Moines, where he lavishly spent the major portion of the cash. His freedom with the money there was his undoing, causing the police to investigate and resulting in his arrest. He pleaded guilty when taken before Judge Applegate, but did not appear to recognize the extent of his crime. The boy's relatives are prominent people and are nearly heart-broken over the lad's disgrace.

The announcement that a new pottery is to be opened in Eldora is taken in manufacturing circles as indicative of a tendency toward the development of one of Iowa's sources of wealth which has hitherto been practically untouched. Iowa is rich in potter's clay. It is a coal producing state and in the vicinity of the coal beds deposits of clay are always found. It is not lack of material which has heretofore held the pottery business of the state in the background. The chief obstacle in the way of establishing potteries seems to have been the difficulty of competing with the output of the Ohio potteries, and also with the galvanized iron utensils, which have been on the market at a price decidedly discouraging to the friends of the potteries. Local brick men state that the best potters' clay which can be secured in the state is found around Des Moines. A pottery was early in operation in Des Moines. It was owned by a man named Weeks, and went out of business two years ago. Later another pottery was started, but this since has gradually turned its attention to manufacuring conduits for the laying of electric cables. So far as can be learned there is no immediate prospect of the development of the city's full resources in this direction. It is stated that the combination which controls the majority of the potteries of the country is also a powerful obstacle to the starting of independent industries along this line. There are a few potteries in Iowa which are doing a thriving business. The largest of these is located at Fort Dodge. Rich deposits of clay are also found in Van Buren, Delaware, Muscatine, Wapello and Henry counties, all of which are worked to some extent.

Pope instantly saw how it was—a common-place troublesome collision; nd he delivered these orders in a oice that rang like the notes of a ugle through the brig:

"Grindal, take some hands and se- ure that fellow by his gibboom. eave play in the seizing for the heave f the swell. Let go the t'gallant hal- ards. Man fore and main clew gar- ets. Starboard fore and mainbraces. weat the yards fore and aft, some ands, out of the road. Where's Mr. rystal?"

"Here, sir," shouted the mate, who ad followed the captain on deck with- n a few moments.

"Mr. Crystal, get an arms-chest up nd serve out cutlasses and firearms. mean to board that fellow. He's een sent to provision us."

The arms-chests had been stowed way very conveniently to hand, as ay be supposed, in a little division n the afterhold called the lazarette, ained by a small hatch in the cabin eck. Thither Crystal and some men ushed; the cabin lamp gave them ght. They came up with armfuls of utlasses and a number of pistols, and he two captains heading about ten rmed men of their crew, sprang from he rail into the stranger's bow, and an with terrifying shouts along her ecks.

"Drive the crew into the fok'sle," ellowed Pope. "Cut down all who re- ist."

The man who held the lantern on he quarter deck, who had shouted nintelligibly, who was incased in lothes which swelled him to the di- ensions of a bull, was undoubtedly he master of the little ship. Another an stood beside him, probably the nate. They remained stock-still, ransfixed, motionless as dead men, hile the piratic crew came storming o the quarterdeck.

"Drive the crew into the fok'sle!"

"Forward with ye," yelled Pope, ourishing his sword about the ears f the fat captain.

"Away with ye," bawled Crystal, triking the mate a thump between he shoulders which set him running. nd amid cries and execrations, and he stamp of feet, and the laughter of hen along the rail of the Gypsy, the hole of the crew, with the immense welled captain among them, were wept forward and tumbled into the recastle through the little scuttle nd battened down.

A few of the men were left on deck. he others followed Captain Pope and aptain Crystal down the companion atch into the stranger's living room. lamp of several tints of glass urned under the little skylight. Un- er the lamp, at a square table, per- ectly visible in the white luster that treamed downward, sat a stout wom- n in a hat with a large feather embling round it, and two immense- y thick lengths of hair pale as hay ing in braids like sennit upon her ack. She held her fat hands clasped pon her lap, and some fine rings ashed upon them. Pope took heed f this. He made her one of his lofty ows and exclaimed, "Good evening, adame, do you speak English?"

She stared at him motionless. He new a few words of French and tried er with that tongue. She continued o stare at him. Pope, though a pi- ate, was not a pickpocket, and find- g the lady mute, stirless and sense- ss with terror, he cast his eyes at he rings upon her fingers, and at a right gold chain round her neck. He ut his hand upon the rings. Instant- y the poor woman sent up an ear- splitting shriek, yet she remained seated, though she fell back in her chair.

"I don't mean to hurt you," said the captain. "But—" and grasping her wrist he dexterously drew the rings off her fingers, pocketed them, and with great agility whipped the gold chain over her hat. These things the captain put into his pocket.

Crystal came out of the afterhold of the main and reported the contents. So far as it was possible to gather by the light of the candle and the bull's eye, he had discovered cheeses, hams, some casks of what he thought might prove Hollands, casks of moist sugar and many cases of tobacco.

The other cabins contained little that was useful or valuable. Pope went on deck. The weather remained very dark and quiet. The locked vessel rolled softly on the long breathing of the sea, with an occasional thump or jerk that was made soft and harmless by fenders.

The ten armed seamen who had followed the two captains into the vessel, came lurching in twos and threes on to the quarterdeck, and hung about the commander and his mate listening. Pope did not order them forward.

"The crew of this ship," said he to Crystal, "likewise the woman, must be kept locked up till the horizon's betwixt us. They'll be boarded and released. I'm for having her stuff aboard us and herself well astern before the horizon opens to the sun, and makes a picture of us two vessels for half a score of craft close by to wonder at."

"You're right, cap'en," shouted one of the seamen.

"Get these yards braced forward, Mr. Crystal," said Pope, "I leave you in charge here."

He went quickly forward into the bows, listened attentively, but no sound proceeded from the imprisoned men below. Then in a leap or two he gained the deck of his own brig.

CHAPTER VII.

The Black Flag.

The pirates worked with a will. By daybreak all the cargo was transshipped. It had been a hard night's task, but the men had toiled with desperate will, so eager were they to get clear of the plundered craft before the light of heaven shone upon the sea.

The fog rolled away before the breaking splendor in the east, and the sea opened fair and blue. The Prussian brig lay lashed alongside, but with fenders between. When the vessels were released the Gypsy slided off to the impulse of the faint air that stirred her jibs and topsails. And when she had floated a distance of ten times her own length they brought her to a stand, a boat was lowered, and Captain Crystal and five pirates went on board the plundered ship to leave her in such trim as would not excite the suspicion of the passing mariner, unless he came very close and hailed her.

Then the five rogues and their mate, Crystal, entered their boat and rowed toward the Gypsy, which lay athwart with her head at south.

There was a single cabin window in the stern of the snow, and when they had got it in view they saw it was open—a heavy glazed frame—and the woman stood in the middle of it like a picture.

Pope was looking through his glass at the woman in the window.

"I did not notice that window in her cabin," said he to Crystal while the men were hoisting the boat. "What does she say?"

"If I was a Prussian I sould tar yer, Pope," answered Crystal.

"Our leaving that ship afloat and the people in her to be rescued and to tell their story proves, Jonathan, that we are new to our trade," says Pope grimly. "The old red-pawed wolf, after sacking her, would have sunk her and all she contained, living and dead. But I am determined to carry out my scheme," says he, with one of his arch looks, "as politely as possible. And you know I've been praying while you've been away that we may have the luck to fall in with one of Duncan's or Peterson's ships."

These had been among those whom he and Crystal had served, and Peterson was the man who had made promises of command to Crystal which he did not keep. Crystal ground his teeth.

All the morning was passed in stowing away the plunder and repairing the trifling damages aloft. Shortly after eight bells (noon) the Prussian brig was on the horizon and a large ship was apparently heading for her. Pope watched them with curiosity; the large ship passed the brig and sailed on, and by two o'clock the plundered vessel was out of sight. The Gypsy was held to her course of west by south and no notice was taken of the ships in sight. Not likely that Pope would plunder in the sight of help. He wanted darkness or a lonely sea girdle.

In the afternoon Pope and the other captain walked the deck together and talked over their plans and hopes. The seamen in various parts of the brig loafed and lounged, and some attended to such trifling jobs as the boatswain put them to, and all of them smoked to a man.

"I should like to know," said Crystal, taking Pope's cigar from his hand to light his pipe afresh with it, "if you've 'got any more fixed and clear ideas as to the division and the securing, every man, to the plunder—his whack; for," he stuttered, "suppose I am to take up a thousand pound."

"A plague on your modesty," interrupted Pope.

"Five thousand pound then," cried Crystal, shouting the words with some momentary emotion of excitement. "How do you propose that I'm to deal with that lump of metal so as to bring it off without being challenged, tried and hanged?"

Pope sat down on the skylight and his square companion seated himself beside him.

"I quite agree with you," says Pope, "that burying schemes ought not to be entertained. I'll not lightly hazard what it will have kept my neck in jeopardy to get. But should not the egg first be laid before we talk of sitting upon it?"

"Ay, but consider this," exclaimed Crystal, glancing at the fellow at the helm, who was trying to overhear them: "you're going to cruise in such degrees for a certain ship. She appears on a sudden." Pope rolled up his eyes with a devotional look. "We board her: we find as much treasure as will satisfy us." Again Pope looked up to heaven, and the man at the wheel, catching the word treasure, strained his neck. "And so you've got your egg," continued Crystal, "in a manner of speaking all in a minute. Should not the hatching of it have been settled? As soon as we've got what we want you and me'll wish to go clear."

"As fast as we can storm through it," answered Pope.

"Then, sir, we ought to have our plans cut and dried now that we are heading for the Spaniard's course." Crystal said, burying a dark-ended stump of forefinger in the bowl of his pipe and going to the side to spit into the sea.

Pope smiled at his square vigorous figure, and on his returning said, "The scheme I'm disposed to fix upon is this: We shall doubtless fall in with a small vessel of handy size, after we have looted the Spaniard. You will take charge, and I will man her with a few of the best of our people. We will sail in company till we come to the place that's agreed upon by all hands; we will then transfer our share of the booty to your vessel, and I shall surrender the brig and the men's share of plunder remaining in her, to them. What d'ye say?" asked Pope, with a twinkle in his eye that was like a raindrop trembling in a breeze.

Crystal's face worked with the chewing of the cud of thought. He said, "When I take charge of the other vessel all the plunder's to be left aboard here?"

"Till we come to an agreed place," answered Pope. "It is a scheme," said he with a shrug, seeing disaffection in the square man's countenance. "I'm for sailing right away for the coast of Cumberland and smuggling my money ashore. We may make another Oak job of it, and the risk's that," he added, tossing his hand to snap his finger.

"And where will this brig go?"

"The crew must settle that."

"Will those you give me for a company like to be separated from their money?"

"They may take it," says Pope.

POULTRY

Raising Turkeys.

From Farmers' Review: It seems to me that our western farmers do not give enough attention to this grand variety of fowls. So many think, I suppose, that they are hard to raise, and that the price which they bring in the market is not commensurate with the bother and work necessary to raise them, but too many of them go at it the wrong way. My way of raising turkeys is as follows, and I have always met with good success:

After a few warm days as spring approaches, the turkey hen will begin to think of nesting, and where early turks are desired make nests near some of the outbuildings, in a desirable place, with barrels having both ends out. With both ends out of the barrel the hen can go on and leave her nest without disturbing her eggs in the least, for if she should by any mistake or accident break an egg she would be very apt to acquire the habit of egg-eating, which is very bad in a chicken, but doubly so in a turkey hen. After she has laid some twelve or fifteen eggs, she will be wanting to sit and if you want large turks and heavy weights in the fall regardless of the numbers, set her. But if you wish more eggs and a larger number of turks, let her choose her own nest; thrown upon her own resources she will sometimes wander quite a distance hunting a suitable place to deposit her eggs.

You should keep watch of her and daily remove the eggs lest they become chilled. Substitute a nest egg of some kind, and nearly every time you get a turkey egg place a hen's egg in the nest. After she has laid a number of eggs and thinks of setting, remove all the nest eggs and break up her nest. Taken by surprise she will soon make herself another nest, not far from the former, and begin laying again. A turkey hen can be made to lay thirty or forty eggs in a season by following up this plan. I allow fifteen eggs, as a general rule, to a turkey hen, although an old one could probably cover more than that number.

After they have hatched I allow them free range, but keep them in a field where the grass is short, as the tall grass on dewy mornings is hard on the young turks. After they are two weeks old I allow them to go wherever they please. When they are able to fly well, I drive them home to roost, keeping this up until they come without it.

As turkeys are of a nomadic disposition, the only true way to raise them is with the turkey hen. She will take them out into the meadows, teach them to eat grass and clover, and that natural food of all fowls, grasshoppers, bugs and other insects, and the sooner they are compelled to subsist principally on them the healthier they will become, and the better it will be for the farmer, as they destroy the insects which some years play such sad havoc with his crops.

Of this great American breed of fowls there are many varieties, the Narraganset, slate, white and mammoth bronze being the most popular. Each of these varieties has its friends, but I believe the mammoth bronze to be the most desirable, as it combines vigor, size (I having had one once that reached the remarkable weight of fifty-two pounds), and beauty above all varieties. It is not an uncommon things for a bronze male to tip the scales at forty pounds. Young birds will weigh, with proper care and feeding, males twenty to twenty-five pounds and females from ten to fifteen pounds by Thanksgiving, and, taking into consideration care, feed, etc., I believe there is nothing the farmer raises that will net him as much clear money as a flock of turkeys.

No domestic fowl is more easily degenerated by inbreeding than the turkey. This is a great mistake, too often made by our farmers and because of this many meet with failure and declare that the turkey is a hard fowl to raise. They should procure a male every year not akin to their turkeys. These can be bought from our best breeders at from $3 to $5 each, according to quality, size, etc., which is very reasonable when you consider the cost of advertising, correspondence, crating, etc. I believe that the time is near at hand when poultry of all kinds will not be considered by our farmers as a secondary matter, but will receive the care and attention it deserves.—J. B. McAllister, Linn County, Iowa.

Points on Guinea Fowls.

Guinea fowls have dark colored flesh, but it is very palatable.

In-breeding results in rendering the birds tender and reduces their size.

The young of birds given their freedom are hardy and will follow their mother as soon almost as they are out of the shell; at least they are good trampers after they are a day old. The young live on bugs and seeds discovered for them by the mothers.

In the early laying season the birds will lay their eggs anywhere, and several will deposit their eggs in the same locality. When about to sit they seek separation and lay a dozen or more eggs in a hidden nest, where they incubate them.

The guineas differ from common fowls in that the males are as anxious about the brood as is the hen, and helps take care of them during the day time, forsaking them at night.

Guinea hens and their broods forage in a body, the old males helping to keep up the laggards of the line. At night each mother collects her own brood.

The young at a very early age learn to roost in the trees, even before they can reach the branches by flying. They half fly and half run up the trunk of the tree.

Guinea eggs are very fertile and a large percentage of the birds hatched live if they are permitted to run wild with their mother.

Like the turkey, the guinea prefers the open tree top to the secure poultry house.

Rosebud Curculio.

We illustrate the Rosebud curculio all parts being enlarged. The insect is about one-fourth of an inch long. At a is shown the adult beetle; b, larva; c, egg; d, sideview of head of beetle; e, bud injured by the beetle; f, mouth parts of the larva; g, mouth parts of the beetle. Reproduced from bulletin of the Montana experimental station.

This insect has been little studied and its hibernating habits are not known. It occurs in many parts of the United States, and seems to find the wild rose its natural ally. The beetle is sometimes found eating ripe raspberries and blackberries, but does no particular damage to the rose bush and foliage. The damage is done to the rose-bud in which it deposits its egg. The grub, on hatching, feeds on the seeds of the rose apple, and attains full size in its birth place. In October it eats its way out and disappears into the ground.

The damage is done to the roses by the holes bored in depositing the eggs, a good many buds so punctured drying up and dropping. Some, however, live and bloom, and in these the larva grows.

The remedy is the hand picking of the rose apples before the grubs emerge. These affected buds can be told by the discolored area on the side of the apple in which the puncture was made when the egg was inserted.

Water Drank by Hogs.

Prof. W. A. Henry says: "We find little recorded on this subject, possibly because the matter is not considered of importance by many. In a feeding trial by the writer at the Wisconsin station a group of ten pigs divided into two lots of five each, one lot getting barley meal and the other corn meal, was fed for a period of eight weeks, with the results given below.

"The five fed on barley averaged 208 pounds at beginning of test, ate 2,832 pounds of grain, gained 601 pounds in weight, consumed 9,056 pounds of water, and required 471 pounds of grain for 100 pounds of gain. For every 100 pounds of food eaten they drank 320 pounds of water.

"The five fed on corn meal averaged 209 pounds in weight at beginning of test, ate 3,100 pounds of grain, gained 713 pounds in weight, drank 6,620 pounds of water and used 435 pounds of food in making 100 pounds of gain. For every 100 pounds of feed eaten they drank 213 pounds of water, or 107 pounds less than those fed on barley.

"The weight of water reported includes that required for soaking the meal and also that drank from a second trough.

"It will be seen that the pigs fed corn meal consumed about two pounds of water, and the barley-fed over three pounds, for each pound of meal eaten. The pigs getting corn meal consumed over 900 pounds of water, and the barley-fed pigs 1,500 pounds, for each 100 pounds of gain in live weight. Pigs fed corn meal appear to require less water than when on other feeds."

TURKISH SULTAN MOST OPTIMISTIC

Grants Audiences to Diplomats and Declares Insurrection Is Drawing to a Close.

THE BANNER OF REVOLUTION

It Is Announced By One of the Revolutionary Chiefs That It Will Be Unfurled in All of the Border Districts.

Constantinople, Sept. 21.—In an audience with M. Zinovieff, the Russian ambassador, Friday, the sultan expressed his regret at the excesses committed by the Turkish troops in the vilayets of Monastir and Adrianople. He said that orders had been sent to the authorities concerned to prevent their repetition, and he gave the Russian ambassador to understand that the guilty parties would be punished.

The German ambassador, Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, also had an audience with the sultan, who showed himself most optimistic. He declared that the insurrection was drawing to a close. In fact, it had already been suppressed in some districts and the porte would, therefore, issue proclamations announcing the resumption of the application of the reform scheme.

After the granting of these audiences an extraordinary council of ministers was held at Yildiz Kiosk, and the deliberations were continued on Saturday. It is understood that the council drew up fresh instructions to the valis in the sense of his majesty's declaration.

Official dispatches from the valis of Salonica, Monastir and Adrianople report numerous encounters which resulted in favor of the Turks.

BANNER OF REVOLUTION.

It Will Be Unfurled in All the Border Districts.

London, Sept. 21.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Sofia telegraphs:

"One of the revolutionary chiefs has informed me that the revolutionists are massing thousands of men at various points on the frontier, and their laboratories are working incessantly to replenish their stock of bombs and explosives. They do not count much on war between Turkey and Bulgaria, but on the day they hear that the meeting between the czar and Emperor Francis Joseph has not had the desired result for Macedonia, the world will witness massacres, burnings and destruction, compared with which the Turkish atrocities will seem child's play. 'The banner of revolution,' my informant says, 'will be unfurled in all the border districts. Every city and village, whether the inhabitants are friends or foes, will be destroyed, and such a state of anarchy will be caused that the Turks will step out voluntarily and leave the country to the Macedonian survivors. We have selected the frontier districts for these final operations, so that Europe may hear the despairing cries of the dying nation which the Turks would stifle.'"

FLEET MIGHT SAVE LIFE

Correspondent Thinks Its Presence Would Have Salutary Effect.

New York, Sept. 21.—A special to the Associated Press from Sofia, dated the 19th, says: I am prevented by the Turks from going to Monastir. Only two correspondents are remaining, and they are not allowed to see anything, the Turks hoping thereby to prevent the press from reporting anything. I have today conclusive evidence that although the Turkish officers abstain from the orgies, the soldiers are looting. They have young boys and girls forcibly brought and retained at their quarters. There is much anxiety about the missionaries in the interior long unheard of. A group of university professors and prominent men have issued an appeal for the pity of the civilized world in behalf of their Macedonian brothers, instancing the village of Bratoutchino, where a hundred women and children, driven by hunger from the forest in despair, sought refuge in the village, where they were massacred. Today is the festival of the Bulgarian union, equivalent to the American Fourth of July. Silence, as if after a funeral, reigns. It is usual to celebrate the anniversary with gaiety, but today the shadow of the Macedonian horror overcast all.

Gloomy foreboding for the future depresses the hearts of the people. Their solemn thanksgiving mass crowded the cathedral. The grave chorus sounded more like a requiem than te deum.

The crowd streamed out of the basilica into the sunny square with its background of the purple Balkans in oppressive silence. I have just received news that the whole valley of Stramma is rising in insurrection. The Turks on the left bank were attacked by the insurgents. The greatest fighting is expected in the district on the left of Stramma. Minister Tzokow, with other prominent Bulgarians, expressed to me their gratitude for the sympathetic helpful attitude of American newspapers in placing the woes of the kinfolk before the world. I am convinced the presence of an American fleet in Turkish waters would have a most salutary effect without firing one gun, and might save the lives of thousands of men women and children.

MARKS INNOVATION IN SHIP BUILDING.

Queer Steamboat Now on Voyage to Brazil.

A dispatch from New Orleans says the most curious sea-going craft that has arrived in port in many a day is the steamboat San Salvador, owned by Robert Wall and commanded by James Chapman. It is from Chicago and bound for Brazil.

The boat is flat-bottomed, with steel hull and draws only four feet of water. It was constructed at a cost of $15,000 and owing to the curious shape no underwriting firm will insure it. They believe the voyage will be perilous to a flat-bottom craft. Mr. Wall owns large interests in Maranham, Brazil, and he had the vessel constructed in Illinois to avoid the heavy import duties on materials in Brazil.

MUST STAND ALONE.

Bulgaria Cannot Expect Assistance From the Powers.

Sofia, Sept. 18.—The German representative here has addressed a note to the Bulgarian government, in accordance with declarations of Russia and Austria, saying that Bulgaria cannot expect assistance from any power in the event of war with Turkey, and that the Austro-Hungarian reform plan will be applied.

The Austrian representative, in insisting on the necessity for Bulgaria remaining calm, declared that if the principality was powerless to prevent the passage of insurgent bands into Macedonia, Austria and Russia would take note of her powerlessness and charge Turkey to exercise her rights, defend her territory against foreign incursions and maintain order in the interior.

Dispatches from Uukub announce that since the calling out of the Turkish reserves the situation in the vilayet has grown worse. The Austrian and Russian consuls are reported to have asked their ambassadors at Constantinople to demand that the porte disband the reserves or maintain discipline among them. Since the reserves were mustered pillaging and murders have been reported daily. The consuls are powerless.

The Autonmye publishes the names of 13 villages in the vilayet of Monastir, which were recently destroyed by regular troops and Bashi-Bazouks and also announces that the monastery of the Holy of Holies, near Okhride, has been destroyed. At the monastery Turkish soldiers killed an entire family, the Bulgarian priest, his children and his grandchildren, 35 persons in all.

The foreign office here has received reliable information that the Turks have destroyed the town of Kastoria, thirty-six miles south of Monastir, and have massacred the population.

The report of a massacre at Kastoria comes from sources admitting of little doubt, though the details are lacking. It was received with the gravest concern by the officials here. The population of Kastoria numbers about 10,000 persons and the massacre of such a number in one place, if the report be true, exceeds anything which has occurred in Macedonia. At the present critical moment, when popular feeling is intense, the effect of the report of such stupendous slaughter may be most serious.

WAR MAY BE AVERTED.

Distinctly Optimistic Tone at Sofia, Bulgaria.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 19.—A distinctly optimistic tone now pervades government and diplomatic circles here, and hopes are again expressed that war may after all be averted.

From London and Constantinople encouraging news has been received. From London it is reported that the British government will send a fleet to Turkish waters, while reports from Constantinople state that Great Britain, France and Italy have intervened to prevent the continuance of massacres in Macedonia. It is said that yesterday the representatives of these powers notified the sultan of their dissatisfaction with the methods of suppressing the outbreak, and declared that the massacres must be stopped. It is stated that they made special reference to the excesses committed by the Turkish troops in the vilayet of Uskub, where the revolutionary outbreak is insignificant, and affords no excuse to the soldiers for pillaging and burning the villages and killing the inhabitants.

The porte is said to have replied that Turkey is simply carrying out the wishes expressed by the powers, which urge the sultan's government to adopt energetic measures to suppress the revolution as speedily as possible. The report that these powers have taken such action has been received with great satisfaction by the Bulgarian ministry.

Further reports from Kastoria say the city is burning, and that the massacre of its population (estimated to have numbered 10,000 persons,) was indescribably terrible. The Turks slaughtered indiscriminately Bulgarians and Greeks, men, women and children.

JOE CHAMBERLAIN LEAVES CABINET

Colonial Secretary Resigns Portfolio and Two Colleagues Follow.

CABINET WON'T LAST LONG

Appeal to Country Cannot Be Long Delayed, and It Is Believed That the Liberal Party Will Be Returned to Power.

London, Sept. 18.—The official announcement of the resignations of Mr. Chamberlain and two other members of the cabinet, which were announced by the Associated Press earlier in the day, was made late last night at Downing street in the following communication:

"The following ministers have tendered their resignations, which have been accepted by the king: Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, secretary for the colonies; Right Hon. C. T. Ritchie, chancellor of the exchequer, and Lord George Hamilton, secretary for India."

The retirement of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, which precipitated the most dramatic crisis and the bitterest party struggle since his secession from Mr. Gladstone's home rule cabinet, was unknown and unsuspected in London until the official announcement was issued late at night.

It is understood that the resignations of some other members of the cabinet are imminent, and that Lord Balfour of Burleigh, secretary for Scotland, has actually resigned, although the fact has not yet been formally given out. Lord Lansdowne, the foreign secretary, left London last night for Balmoral, whither Premier Balfour and his brother are also expected to proceed immediately.

In the conservative clubs last night the manner in which the crisis was projected was almost as great a surprise as in liberal quarters. Curiosity centers on the attitude of the Duke of Devonshire, whose resignation has been fully expected. It was supposed by some that he would take the present opportunity of retiring from politics on the ground of his advanced years. As to the reconstruction of the cabinet no great interest is excited, although the political prophets are already busy appointing Austen Chamberlain chancellor of the exchequer, the Earl of Selborne as secretary for the colonies, etc., because it is recognized as impossible that an appeal to the country can be much longer delayed, and the general opinion is that in the present shattered condition of the unionist party the liberals will be returned to power.

THIRTY-SIX DROWNED.

Hurricane Fatal to Many Brave Sailor Lads.

Norfolk, W. Va., Sept. 18.—The British steamship Roxby, Captain Shields which arrived here yesterday from Port English, has on board Domingo Reyarbery, the only survivor of the crew of twenty-two men on the British steamship Mexicano, which foundered with all on board off the Florida coast on Tuesday night. Reyarbary caught a piece of wreckage and managed to keep up until he was seen by the Roxby and rescued.

Damarisotta, Maine, Sept. 18.—Fifteen men lost their lives in the violent gale which raged off the coast during Wednesday night. The Gloucester mackerel seining schooner George F. Edmunds, in command of Captain Willard G. Poole, the owner, struck on the eastern side of Pemaquid Point and was smashed to pieces. Fourteen of the crew of sixteen perished on the breakers. The schooner Sadie and Lillian, Captain Hardy, of Prospect, bound from Prospect Bay to Boston, struck on the western side of Pemaquid Point and had her bottom knocked out on the rocks. Captain Hardy was drowned, but his crew of two men were rescued.

POPULAR SCIENCE

The Pedocycle.

First we had the tricycle, then the bicycle, now it is the pedocycle. The two first named were propelled by the feet, of course, but the last is intended to be worn on the foot, and has just been invented by a Western man. It looks like an ordinary roller skate at a casual glance, but more careful examination will show that, instead of the skater being compelled to exert considerable muscular effort to propel himself along, he has simply to lift his foot and then replace it on the ground again, with a sufficient portion of his weight to start the machinery which drives him along. With the miles and miles of asphalt pavement to be found in nearly all the large cities there is a field for a cycle of this class, aside from the pleasure it will afford the small boy, and there is no reason why the class of individuals who recently used the bicycle as a means of locomotion should not take up with this new pedocycle. It will be seen that the foot plate is elevated from the skate frame by suspension on sliding pins, with springs to spread the plate apart from the frame as long as no pressure is applied to the former. But as soon as weight is applied the plate begins to sink, actuating the rod connected to the segment gear. This gear is connected with a ratchet wheel, and this wheel to a third mounted on the shaft, which carries the rear wheel of the skate. It is obvious that the pressure of the body's weight on the foot plate will transmit the force through the gears to the rear wheel, acting on the pavement to propel the skater, who has only to alternately lift and depress his feet to go skimming along the street with considerable speed. The ratchet arrangement permits the propulsion being limited to any amount desired, thus regulating the speed, which is further controlled by the braking device as shown.

Downward pressure revolves the wheels.

John D. Schmidt, of Davenport, Ia., is the inventor.

Powerful Dynamos.

The rapid improvement of electric central stations in Germany has resulted in the construction of powerful dynamos. Reporting to the state department, Consul-General Guenther at Frankfort says that the Rhenish-Westphalian electricity works at Essen has ordered from the Brown-Boveri company at Mannheim a steam turbine to furnish power for a dynamo of 5,000 volts and one for 1,600 volts. These two electrical machines will require about 10,000 horse power. The whole apparatus occupies a space less than nine feet in height and width, and about 60 feet in length. The 10,000 horse power turbine has a length of only 21 feet.

English Portable Dark Room.

professional is generally provided with a large room especially fitted up for this portion of the work. To those who are unable to provide themselves with the regulation dark room through lack of space this idea will prove especially interesting. The idea of a portable dark room, where plate holders can be refilled and the exposed negatives packed for shipment, is not entirely new, but the inventor of this outfit goes a step further and adds a developing apparatus which is novel and especially advantageous for the class of work the machine has been designed for. The trouble with developing exposures in a portable dark room has been the difficulty of examining the negative from time to time to stop the developing process at just the proper moment. This is overcome in the apparatus here shown by placing a reflecting mirror beneath the box, which throws light through a colored screen in the bottom of the developing tray, and, the latter being of transparent material, it is easy to watch the process of development and check it at the right time. The apparatus includes, of course, developing and fixing baths, with shelves for storage of chemicals, and provision is also made for a stream of water for rinsing the negatives.

The inventor is Joseph Lambert, of Southport, England.

Tree Fumigating Screen.

Farming a century ago consisted principally of planting the seed, keeping out the weeds and waiting for the harvest, with little or no conception of the chemical processes through which the soil induced the plant growth, and, consequently, no knowledge of how the plant growth could be forced by the addition to the soil of the chemical constituents which were lacking. Likewise, the apples and small fruits were looked upon as a side issue, which must be left largely to chance in producing profitable crops. Gradually, however, a change has come about, until now the farmer performs his labor as a scientist, with the aid of the agricultural college and Government and State experiment station and agricultural institutes. With this knowledge has come the necessity of better appliances for inducing healthy plant growths and guarding against diseases, both in fruits and vegetables. A century ago the idea of smudging a tree to rid it of insects or worms might have been scoffed at, but now the need for an apparatus like the one we illustrate can be easily comprehended. The tent like device is intended to inclose completely trees of considerable size, and is constructed of a series of overlapping section, which can be placed in position while folded, and allowed to fall down all around the tree until the lowest section reaches the ground. With the tree thus inclosed, it is an easy matter to build a fire inside the tent and apply the chemicals which will fumigate the foliage or rid the limbs and trunk of any fungous growths detrimental to its health.

Latest Telephone Cable.

The Anglo-Belgian telephone cable was opened for service on June 8. This cable, says the Electrical Review, forms the submarine portion of the London-Brussels telephone line, the entire length of which is 245 miles. The cable forms 54.2 miles of this, and is the largest submarine telephone cable which has yet been laid. The cable consists of four stranded conductors, each insulated with gutta-percha armored with brass sheathing and steel wire. Although the cable is short, compared with submarine telegraph cables and overhead telephone circuits, it nevertheless marks a noteworthy advance in submarine telephony. No attempts were made to improve the quality of this cable by the use of inductances distributed along it, although the latter would have furnished a much better talking circuit. Tests of the latter construction have been made both in this country and abroad, which have clearly demonstrated the value of this system, and although the difficulties of constructing and laying this type of cable are not slight, they will undoubtedly be overcome as soon as the demand for submarine telephony makes it necessary.

Vast sums of capital are being rapidly drawn from the United States for investment and development of the mining resources of Mexico. Everything seem propitious, says Mining World, for a great revival in mining in all of the mineral states of Mexico.

COMMODORE NICHOLSON OF OUR NAVY

Recommends Pe-ru-na—Other Prominent Men Testify.

Commodore Somerville Nicholson, of the United States Navy, in a letter from 1837 R Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., says:

"Your Peruna has been and is now used by so many of my friends and acquaintances as a sure cure for catarrh that I am convinced of its curative qualities and I unhesitatingly recommend it to all persons suffering from that complaint."—S. Nicholson.

United States Minister to Guatemala Endorses Pe-ru-na.

Dr. W. Godfrey Hunter, U. S. Minister to Guatemala, ex-member of Congress from Kentucky, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes:

"I am fully satisfied that your Peruna is an efficacious remedy for catarrh, as I and many of my friends have been benefitted by its use."—W. G. Hunter, M. D.

Member of Congress From Virginia Writes.

Hon. G. R. Brown, Martinville, Va., ex-member of Congress Fifth District, 50th Congress, writes:

"I cheerfully give my endorsement to your Peruna as a cure for catarrh. Its beneficial results have been so fully demonstrated that its use is essential to all persons suffering from that disease."—Hon. G. R. Brown.

The day was when men of prominence hesitated to give their testimonials to proprietary medicines for publication. This remains true to-day of most proprietary medicines. But Peruna has become so justly famous, its merits are known to so many people of high and low stations, that no one hesitates to see his name in print recommending Peruna.

The highest men in our nation have given Peruna a strong endorsement. Men representing all classes and stations are equally represented.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

S. E. Laws, a Milwaukee brakeman living at Perry, accidentally wounded his wife while tampering with his revolver. He had been repairing the gun, which he was going to carry to defend himself against tramps. His wife was preparing supper and as he arose the gun was accidentally discharged, the bullet striking her in the breast. Her condition is critical, the fact that she is about to become a mother making it more serious.

Dubuque butchers have become alarmed over the report that the big packing companies of Chicago may start a number of shops in Dubuque and cut prices. Some time ago the packing companies discontinued their delivery wagons in Dubuque and since then local butchers have been compelled to send after their supplies. A few days ago several of the leading butchers of Dubuque held a meeting and decided to do their own killing hereafter and refuse to patronize the Chicago packers.

F. C. Caine of Grinnell, owner of the race horse, Young Pat, and "Dutch" Sullivan, were held up and robbed in the Rock Island yards at Iowa City about midnight. They had just completed loading the race horse in a box car when three men appeared, two of them covering the pair with revolvers while the third searched them. Mr. Caine in the darkness dropped a roll of $100 into the hay. The thieves secured $4 in cash, one stop watch and a gold watch. The police arrested two hoboes whom they believe are guilty.

Henry Harnack, aged 62, committed suicide at Northwood by hanging himself in his cell in the county jail with a towel. Harnack has been residing on the farm of Carl J. Peterson near Northwood. He has been behind with his rent the last two years and the prospects this season were not very favorable. He and Mr. Peterson had some trouble regarding a settlement and Harnack threatened Peterson, with the result that he was placed in jail. The ordeal was evidently too much for him. He is survived by a wife and five children.

Benny Sampson, a 14-year-old boy living at Davenport, had the thrilling experience of being swept for nearly 100 yards through a sewer, passing into the Mississippi river from its outlet, and yet lives to tell the tale. A creek near his house runs through a culvert under Front street and the levee, and a heavy rain storm turned the drain into a raging torrent. Benny fell into it, and before the horrified onlookers could interfere, had disappeared into the sewer. People who saw him vanish ran to the river bank, and when his body shot to the surface of the river above the outlet of the sewer, he was rescued with the aid of a skiff, and resuscitated.

Fred Herman, of Mason City, has a residence the lightning has evidently picked out as a shining mark. During a recent storm it was struck twice in succession and a short time previous it was a little shaken up. That day it came down in a streak when it first struck and played around on the electrolier. It did no damage outside of furnishing a superfluity of light. But a few minutes later it made its second visitation and this time came down in balls and struck the carpet and did a little burning. No one was hurt outside of a good scare. The Herman residence is one of the finest in the city and just why lightning vents itself on that residence is more than the inmates have been able to figure out.

A fifty-six grain pearl, perfect in every respect and shimmering with the prismatic rays of the rainbow, was found a few days ago by a fisherman in a slough near Muscatine. The firm which purchased the gem refused to disclose the man's identity and also the price paid for it. It appears that while fishing near the mouth of the slough, the finder made his lucky strike. The pearl is clear white and balloon shaped. This is something unusual, the finding of pearls in still water. Several other pearls were found near New Boston and purchased by Frank Koeckeritz, of Muscatine. The largest one weighs thirty-six grains and is valued at probably $200 or $300. Another beauty was found recently near Beatty's light, which though comparatively small, is of the highest quality. Muscatine is making a reputation for itself as the center of one of the most prolific pearl fields on the river.

A sensation was created at Clinton when the police arrested Michael Conroy, a saloon keeper, on the charge of being an accessory in the Grossman fur robbery in that city sixteen months ago. The robbery was one of the most sensational in the history of the city. It took place on the afternoon of Decoration day, but the theft was not learned until the next morning. The goods stolen were valued at $7,500. A fur dealer in Des Moines was arrested for the crime, but proved his innocence. Several months ago it was learned a man named Hall of Chicago was implicated in the robbery. However, he was also wanted for crime in Illinois and was sentenced to the penitentiary for the Illinois offense and is now in prison. However, his wife is in Clinton to testify before the grand ury and also at the preliminary hearing.

The home of G. W. Dixon at Muscatine was entered during the absence of the family and $33 in cash taken from a trunk. Every room in the house was pillaged and a number of other valuable articles taken. There is no clue to the identity of the thieves.

Franklin county has one of the cleanest criminal records in Iowa. The county jail is empty and Judge Whitaker has just completed the fall session of court which lasted but three days, the entire court calendar being cleaned up in that brief space of time. When the grand jury met, there was absolutely nothing for them to do and the petit jury was dismissed without sitting on a single case. Judge Whitaker claims that he never heard of such an instance before.

According to the Waterloo Times-Tribune Mrs. M. J. Harvey, residing near Clarksville, while digging in the garden unearthed an old wash boiler which contained about $100,000 in gold coins. Mrs. Harvey is a widow, about 61 years old, and it is claimed says the report is true that she found a sum of money but refuses to divulge the exact amount. The farm where she resides was formerly the home of an eccentric old bachelor who is said to have buried his money instead of placing it in banks.

A most daring robbery (er)s accomplished a few nights ago at Marshalltown, thieves entering the store of H. Singer, on East Main street, taking approximately over $2,000 worth of furs. They forced their way through the rear door, taking almost the entire stock of sealskin, otter, fox, marten and sable coats, jackets and unmade furs. This is a dark, quiet corner, and the police believe that more than one person is concerned, and that a team was stationed somewhere near the store to receive the plunder.

It has been given out officially at the war department that the Des Moines army post buildings will be in readiness to receive the first consignment of troops the latter part of November. It has also been determined to send one squadron of the Fifteenth cavalry, in command of Col. Wallace, now in the Philippines, to the Des Moines post. The companies are not named. The Fifteenth cavalry will be back from the Philippines the latter part of November and will go immediately to the post. As the post will be regimental, the commanding officer will be colonel, falling to Col. Wallace. At the quartermaster's department it is officially announced that all buildings of the post will be completed before the beginning of another year, so that it will be possible to send a full regiment of troops to Des Moines early next summer.

Saloon keepers must have the consent of property owners within fifty feet of the room within which they are doing business, and not for fifty feet from the building, according to the decision handed down by Judge Howe in the district court of Polk county a few days ago in the test case of T. E. S. White vs. Lorenz Ill. This was an injunction proceeding commenced against Ill to force him to close his place of business on the ground that he was running it illegally, because he had not the consent of property owners within fifty feet of the building. The decision affected hundreds of saloon keepers, for had the ruling been adverse, it might have closed them. The law was in peculiar shape. The old law read "premises," and the supreme court interpreted that word to mean room. But since the ruling the code commission revised the law and changed the word "premises" to "building," though they stated in their report they had not altered the meaning of the section.

William Henry, a white man, was killed by James Lobbins, colored, near Buxton, by being hit on the head with a scantling. Lobbins escaped. The affair took place in front of the barn belonging to Lobbins' father, and, as near as can be ascertained, little effort was made to apprehend Lobbins till the next morning, when the sheriff at Oskaloosa was notified. Lobbins was a young man about 30 years old, while Henry was an old man of about 60 years. As Henry was walking past the barn he took a drink from a bottle and Lobbins requested a drink. Upon being refused an altercation followed in which he hit Henry over the head with a 2x4 scantling. The old gentleman lived ten hours. Lobbins has the name of being a bad negro and accustomed to the drink habit, though is not known to have been implicated in any serious crimes heretofore. After the fight he walked away and made his escape. Henry is a recent comer to the place and little is known of him. The fight took place at a little mining camp two miles from Buxton. Buxton has no saloons but the mining camp is said to be full of joints. Every effort is being made to apprehend Lobbins.

Polk County Bar Investigating Committee Urges Drastic Prosecutions.

TAMPERED WITH A TRIAL JURY

It Is Claimed Prominent Men Tried to Fix Jurors and That Officers Violated the Law—All Enter Strenuous Denial.

Des Moines, Sept. 21.—A committee composed of eleven members of the local bar on Saturday preferred charges against five business men and two county officers and recommended their prosecution criminally for offenses alleged to have been committed in violation of the law relative to drawing and influencing jurors.

The men accused by the committee were: E. H. Hunter, M. Drady, W. L. White, J. O. Wells, B. F. Coffin, Fred Cope and F. A. Marvin. It is charged by the committee that Hunter, Wells, White, Drady and Marvin attempted to influence jurors in cases on trial in the district court; and it is charged that County Auditor Fred Cope and County Clerk Frank Coffin illegally selected jurors, although it is not charged by the committee that this was done corruptly.

The cases in which it is charged that the five business men tried to influence jurors were those of Elias Lewis against Jesse O. Wells and Raymond R. Pflantz by his next friend, Clara S. Pflanz, against the Iowa Telephone company. It is declared by the committee that the irregular practice with respect to drawing jurors of which complaint is made has long been in vogue. The cases in which it is alleged that efforts were made to tamper with the trial jury were damage suits growing out of personal injuries.

Mr. Hunter, who was formerly postmaster, is one of the most successful business men in Des Moines, and has been in the banking business here for several years. He is president of the New York Wall Paper company, and for several years has represented corporations in business matters in Des Moines. He was instrumental in settling the Iowa Telephone company's strike. Mr. White is the shoe merchant. Mr. Drady lives on Sixth avenue, and was formerly alderman for a dozen years. Mr. Marvin is an express messenger for the United States Express company. Mr. Wells is the liveryman. Mr. Cope is serving his third term as county auditor and is a member of the Polk county bar. Mr. Coffin is serving his first term as county clerk.

In brief, it is charged by the bar investigating committee that Mr. Hunter sought to influence M. V. Kennedy, a juryman in the Pflanz case, through Mr. Drady. It is charged that Mr. Wells, Mr. Marvin and Mr. White attempted to influence jurors in the Lewis case against Wells. It is charged that instead of selecting jurors by lot, the auditor and clerk selected names from among those drawn from the jury box.

The committee specifically states that no jurors were influenced. Messrs Hunter and Drady absolutely deny that they attempted to influence Mr. Kennedy. Messrs. Wells and White also deny the charges. Messrs. Cope and Coffin say that in the method they adopted they had the sanction of the former judge, and that they followed the practice complained of to avoid getting on the jury dead men and notoriously incompetent men who would have to be excused.

The bar committee recommends specific prosecution, under criminal statutes, against all seven men. The report was read to the four judges in open court yesterday morning by Mr. W. H. Baily. It was then filed with Clerk Coffin, who gave it to the press. The comittee and court now say that it is up to the grand jury. The jury cannot be instructed by the court to return an indictment.

Frank Hines, a Grundy Center blacksmith, mysteriously disappeared on the 13th while visiting in Chicago and his friends are greatly worried about his whereabouts. Search is being made for him, as it is feared that he met with foul play.

Paris green and phosphorus were the instruments of death used by unknown parties in an attempt to poison W. A. Durfee, a prominent coal operator of What Cheer, and his entire family. Paris green was poured in large quantities down the well on Mr. Durfee's premises and equally as much phosphorus was poured into cans of milk which it was supposed the family would use. The discovery of the attempt at poisoning has created much excitement in the little town and officers assisted by nearly every citizen are exerting every effort to find the guilty party. So far, however, no clues have been discovered. During the night Mr. Durfee heard strange noises outside but he paid no attention to them at the time. In the morning one of the members of the family discovered a green substance about the well and this led to a search of the premises. It is believed that some party who had an imaginary grievance against Durfee committed the act.

"Right, if you sink the vessel," interjected crystal.

So the order was given for the guns to be loaded, and the small arms served out. They loaded the carronades, and ran them out. The two long guns were also loaded; the boats were seen to, all was made clear for action.

"Hoist the ensign," said Pope. "Haul up your courses, and back the fore-topsail. Down hellum."

The little vessel was hove-to right athwart the course of the approaching craft, which might now be some two or three miles off. The sails of the stranger were remarkably white.

"A gent's pleasure boat," said Grindal. "A proper craft for our flag, I guess."

"I've been thinking that," says Crystal, looking at Pope, who made no answer.

The stranger came rippling along toward the brig with pathetic unsuspiciousness. And she was now within half a mile, perhaps within reach of a trumpet, when all of a sudden, as though the Gypsy's true character had been discovered, her length of broadside with its high sheer of bow, like a smack's of these days, drew out, and she was off!

"Fill on your fore-topsail, Mr. Crystal," roared Pope. "Grindal, jump forward and send a shot from the Long Tom after her, as the brig brings her to bear. Fire wide."

The boatswain rushed forward. This sort of orders made his blood run fast. They swung the fore-topsail yard, and the brig, close hauled, stood in chase.

Pope, examining the schooner carefully, now clearly made her out to be a pleasure vessel. She was steered by a tiller, and abreast of that long arm of brass-ended timber, stood a

The boatswain had leveled the long piece fair at the stranger, when Pope saw that she had put her helm down and was slowly rounding, with a faint tremor of canvas, as though fear shook her, into the wind's eye. Instantly the captain began to roar out orders. A boat was lowered, twelve men armed with cutlasses and pistols tumbled into her. Pope took charge with a sword at his side and a pistol in his bosom; and Crystal with folded arms and a stern black face, stood at the quarter-deck railing looking on.

The boat swept alongside. Pope and eleven men sprang aboard with fluorished cutlasses, but so far from meeting with any resistance they found a clear deck. One figure alone remained. He was the tall man in the cloak and black soft hat.

He was a noble-looking old gentleman, perhaps seventy years of age, wonderfully erect, a martial figure. He threw his head back when Pope approached and exclaimed in a calm deep voice:

"Why have you boarded me, sir?"

Pope answered, "We are gentlemen of fortune. We are sailing the high seas in search of an estate and you'll help us in that quest."

He could not but be deferential to the fine old fellow. He was a gentleman by birth, an Irishman, the son of a clergyman, and no fierce and bloody pirate as yet.

Pope's men, breathing short, looking restless and wild, bloodshot, hairy and rugged, every man with a cutlass in his hand, stood about the companion-way waiting, while the following conversation took place between Pope and the tall, lofty and commanding old gentleman.

"I am Earl Fitzgibbon," said the tall old gentleman, "and am proceeding from the Azores to England. I beg that you suffer me to depart. You will discover nothing in this vessel worth your attention. Examine the cabin by all means. You will find everything plain, and such money as I have in the ship you are welcome to, about ninety guineas."

"Thanks, my lord. It is our custom to make ourselves welcome without invitation," says Pope. "We cannot let you depart for ninety or nine hundred guineas. We must transfer you and your crew to that brig."

"But why, sir? But why?" cried his loruship, suddenly exhibiting signs of agitation. "What would you do with me? What would you do with my vessel and the men? Name the price of a ransom, sir?" He stretched forth his hand, which trembled exceedingly. "Any sum in reason you shall have, if you will suffer me to proceed."

Pope cocked his ear at the word ransom; it gave his an idea wholly new to him. He reflected, staring into the eager gaze of my lord kept fastened upon him. Then his face lengthened, he glanced at his men who stood near, and said to the nobleman:

"We're not brigands, we can't talk of ransoms. You and your crew must go aboard my ship, my lord. Gypsy ahoy!" roared Captain Pope, giving no heed to his lordship, who, with alarmed, yet commanding gestures of his arm, was endeavoring to make himself heard.

"Hallo!" answered Captain Crystal.

"Send a boat for the crew of this schooner!" sung out Pope. "Get the longboat over. Come aboard, Mr. Crystal."

The square man flourished his hand.

"In God's name, sir," exclaimed his lordship, "suffer us to proceed on our way. Name a sum that will satisfy you and you shall have my draft."

Pope smiled.

'On my word as a British nobleman," continued the fine old man, all tremor and dignity, "that draft shall be Bank of England money to you, and not a question asked."

"I would trust you but not your crew," said Pope. "My lads." cried he, turning upon his men, "this schooner would be making Portsmouth in a few days—"

"On my honor, sir!" vehemently interrupted Lord Fitzgibbon.

Pope shook his head. The nobleman flushed, started and stared a little wildly at him. But now the crew of dastards were coming up out of the forecastle; they were eleven men and one was a clean valet with a white cloth, and another was a cook in a white cap. As they came to the gangway guarded by the pirates with their naked cutlasses, the boat steered by Crystal dashed along side, and that captain came aboard, others of the crew following him, and in a few minutes later the longboat arrived. There was still plenty af daylight left in the air, and in it the crew of the schooner including the cook and the valet, made a mean and melancholy procession as they came to the gangway. They entered the boat, all with very white faces and terrified looks.

"Now, my lord," says Pope, with an imperious wave of his sword toward the gangway.

"Is it possible," cried the Earl, not offering to move, "that I cannot prevail upon you to accept my draft for a considerable sum of money in lieu of my persons and this vessel? Of what use will this schooner be to you? She is without cargo. There is less than a hundred pounds in money on board."

Crystal, who stood hard by while some of the first gang of pirates hung about the companion-way, says without reverence to Pope. "What does the old chap offer?"

"Two thousand pounds," cried the Earl.

Pope flourished his sword toward the gangway.

Crystal sent a swift look over the little ship, and said, "Who's going to take up the money? Besides as a vessel she's worth more than two thousand pounds, not to mention the value of the old gentleman's liberty."

"Do you suppose," cried Pope in a rage, uttering one or two oaths, "that for all my lord here could sign his name to, I should be for letting him sail away in a swift keel to report our doings? What do you think I value my neck at?"

"Isn't his draft worth considering?" says Crystal. "Two thousand! By thunder, though I value my neck as highly as yours, I'm willing to take my chances of presenting that man's draft when we return home."

"No," answered Pope, in a low but hot tone of determination, and without another word he went into the cabin, followed by half a score of his men.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Best Kind of Proof.

"Here!" exclaimed the irate customer to the trunk dealer, "I thought you said that chest I bought of you was mothproof.?"

"Well," said the dealer, "wasn't it?"

"No! When I opened it my things were full of moths!"

"Great Scott, man! What better proof of 'em do you want?"

An Exception.

Mrs. Casey—Yis, an' I think it's a good husband he'll make her, too. Ye can always tell what's in a man from the look uv his eye.

Mrs. Kelly—Maybe, Ellen, maybe. But many's the time I've seen the tears rise in Denny's when it wasn't salt water he'd been drinkin'.

Attractive.

"Then you've been to Niagara?"

"Yes. I was quietly married last Tuesday week, and the next day reached Niagara. Soon as we got there I started out to see the Falls with my wife."

"Magnificent, eh?"

"You bet. You should have seen all the other men turning around to look at her as we passed."

And Not Over Here.

"I think you must be mistaken, sir," the old man chipped in.

"What about?" demanded his neighbor in the crowd.

"Didn't I just hear you remark you were glad the war in Bulgaria was over?"

"Not exactly. I said I was glad it was over in Bulgaria."

Summer Thought.

"This heat is enough to drive a man to suicide."

"If he's a fool."

"I'm not so sure."

"Well, a good man won't kill himself anyway, and a man who isn't good certainly would be foolish to kill himself to escape the heat."—Detroit Free Press.

Cheerfully Contributed.

"Say," whispered the stranger in church, "what's this collection for?"

"This offering," replied the man with the collection plate, "is for foreign missions."

"That's all right, then," said the stranger, producing a dollar; "I was goin' to say if it's fur the choir it ain't worth it."

A Seaside Problem.

"Ought I to Wait?"

The Summer Resort Band.

"That band leader is very obliging and considerate."

"Hadn't observed it," answered the crusty citizen.

"Why, he plays everything that anybody requests."

"Yes. And if you ask him not to play something he takes encores on it."

The Chinese are smart in many ways, but in fighting fire they are about as useless as an army of antelopes. When the Board of Rites Building, in Pekin, recently burst into flame, a fire company hurriedly dashed to the scene, to try their skill at extinguishing it. Their chief equipment for this work consisted of banners and gongs.

An easy way of taking castor oil without reducing any nauseating effects is for the patient to wash out his mouth with water as hot as can be borne, and then swallow the oil, and following this by rinsing out the mouth well with hot water. The first swallow of the water cleanses the mouth, makes the membranes warm, so that the oil does not stick and consequentlyy slips down easily.

Two coats of hot oil applied after a thorough cleaning are said to be an improvement over any process now in use for preventing rust of structural iron and steel. The oil would fill crevices, cracks, and holes, where paint cannot enter. I would cover rough places often imperfectly coated in ordinary painting, and would be a fine preparation for subsequent painting or covering with cement coating.

Texas Finds a Remedy.

Fate, Tex., Sept. 21st.—Texas has seldom, if ever, had such a profound sensation, as that caused by the introduction recently of a new remedy for Kidney diseases. This remedy has already been tried in thousands of cases, and in almost every case the results have been wonderful..

Henry Vaughan, of Rural Route, No. 3, Fate, says of it:

"I suffered with Kidney Trouble for over 18 months. I was very bad and could get nothing to help me till I heard of the new remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills. I began to use these pills, and very soon found myself improving. I kept on and now I can say I am absolutely cured and free from any symptom of my old trouble.

"I am very glad I heard of this wonderful remedy and I would strongly advise anyone suffering with Kidney trouble to try it, for I know it will cure."

CONCERT OF POWERS NEEDED

Premier Balfour Replies to Archbishop Davidson on Balkan Imbroglio.

HE ANALYZES THE SITUATION

Best Hope of Dealing With It Lies in Russo-Austrian Agreement, He Believes—Reforms Must Be Made Operative.

London, Sept. 26.—Premier Balfour, in a lengthy letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, discusses the Macedonian situation. The letter is a reply to the archbishop's action in drawing attention to the growing uneasiness among church men at the apparent apathy of the powers, "while unspeakable artocities are perpetrated in Macedonia."

Mr. Balfour says he is in entire sympathy with the feelings of horror and indignation and fully understands the desire to give expression in public meetings to the sentiment of reprobation which recent events justified. Mr Balfour then says:

"We have not to deal with a simple question of misgovernment or oppression by Turkish officials, but with a problem complicated by the facts that the Christian population of Macedonia is rent in fragments by differences of race aggravation to the ills inflicted by a corrupt and incapable administration and by an ill paid and undisciplined soldiery and by a detestable system of taxation, we have to reckon with all the ills which in a population not imbued with western ideas of humanity, rival nationalities and sects do not scruple to inflict on one another."

Mr. Balfour adds:

"The instrument whereby the situation may be dealt with is the concert, of Europe. But this, even were they all in harmony, is necessarily slow and may easily be ineffective is the problem is complex.

"It was a matter of congratulation when Russia and Austria, acting with the authority of Europe proposed to press the scheme of reforms which, while lacking in the theoretical perfection, came within the circuit of practical policies, and would, if more earnestly pressed by the porte and more frankly accepted by the Macedonian population, have spared the world the horrors it has since witnessed. Neither of these conditions was fulfilled. The porte, as usual, was dilatory and failed to see that a policy of humanity was a policy of wisdom. The revolutionists have deliberately done their best to drive the Turk to excesses and furnish him with an excuse for deferring the execution of reforms meeting horrors with horrors and brutality with brutality, for the deliberate purpose of driving the Turk to crimes against the innocent and thus play upon the sympathies of the world.

"Such methods as these are no more tolerable than the misgovernment which is their excuse."

Coming to the question of the attitude of Great Britain, Mr. Balfour points out that Russia, Austria and Turkey cannot be indifferent to a territorial redistribution in the peninsula, while Greece, Bulgaria, Servia and Roumania are all interested in the fate of the province whose Christian population is made up from all their nationalities. These external complications are doubled by internal ones, because of religious differences, the Mohammedans fearing Christian rule, while the exarchists and Christians persecute the patriarchs; the Greeks who are patriarchists, would sooner find protection under the rule of the sultan than be left to fight the matter out with the Bulgarians who are exarchists.

"It is with a problem such as this that one has to deal," said Mr. Balfour, "and I cannot but believe that the best hope of dealing with it lies in the cooperation of Russia and Austria, strengthened with the support and aided by the advice of the other signatories of the treaty of Berlin."

These countries possess, Mr. Balfour asserts, incomparable influence over the antagonistic forces of the peninsula. In fact, no other nation or group of nations could do it at all if Russia and Austria were hostile. Great Britain is not precluded by the policy outlined from offering suggestions, which had already been done and she will continue to do so. But it would be folly to forget that there are occasions when two powers are stronger than three, and that in addition to the numbers carries a diminution of efficiency.

These principles, concludes Mr. Balfour, direct the policy of the British government in the near east, and he has no doubt that they are in accordance with British interests, and in obedience to them lies the best hope of improving the condition of the Macedonians and the security of European peace.

Jett Receives Sentence of Death.

Cynthiana, Ky., Sept. 24.—After a trial lasting eight days, the jury in the case of Custiss Jett, charged with the murder of Town Marshal Cockrell at Jackson, Ky., July 21, 1902, rendered a verdict of guilty and fixed the punishment at death.

TURKISH TROOPS TO BE MOBILIZED

Orders Issued For Concentration of Sixty-four Battalions at Salonica.

Salonica, European Turkey, Sept. 28.—The immediate mobilization of the Adana, Angora, Kastamania and Kasairies divisions of the army, totalling sixty-four battalions, are expected to arrive here within a week, and the rest will go to Adrianople.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 28.—The communication made by the British diplomatic agent to the Bulgarian government stated that neither Turkey nor Bulgaria could count on Great Britain's support in the event of their openly or secretly opposing the realization of the Austro-Russian project of reform in Macedonia, and added that Great Britain was pressing Turkey far more effectively for application of the reforms. The communication further stated that Great Britain was consulting with other powers as to the possibility of introducing more suitable remedial measures.

London, Sept. 28.—Whilst there is little fresh news this morning from the Balkans, it appears from the dispatches received here that both Turkey and Bulgaria are actively preparing for the possibility of war. The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Monastir comments on the skillful disposition of the Turkish troops for delivering a quick blow against either Servia or Bulgaria. There are 10,000 soldiers in the vilayet of Kossovo, 70,000 men with 300 guns in Adrianople vilayet, 50,000 in Monastir vilayet, and 170,000 in Salonica, the last mentioned force forming a huge reserve.

A dispatch from Sofia to the Times says that a document, purloined from Hilmi Pasha's archeves, and which has fallen into the hands of one of the consuls, gives confirmation of the wholesale extermination carried out in Macedonia. It records that ninety-three villages have been destroyed in the vilayet of Monastir alone, and that the total number destroyed reaches 111. Reports from other reliable quarters represent that a much larger number of villages have been destroyed.

The correspondent continues that the attention of the humane and charitable should be directed to the starving population.

Philippopoli's, Bulgaria, Sept. 28.—A visit to the base camps of this division of the Bulgarian amry at Tirnovo and Seimen, today, showed that the sappers and miners are rapidly preparing for war. Work on the bridge across the Maritza river and the roads and forts in the vicinity is in active progress.

COLE YOUNGER IN JAIL.

Charged With Embezzling $6,000 From Show.

Nevado, Mo., Sept. 24—Cole Younger, of the Cole Younger and Frank James Wild West show, Younger's nephew, H. W. Hall, treasurer of the show, and F. G. Linenfelder, have been arrested here, charged with embezzlement of $6,000 by the manager of the show, H. E. Allott. The arrests are said to be retalitory for suits recently begun against Allot and his financial backer by Younger for $25,000 and by Frank James for $4,800. Younger and James claim damages for the failure of Allot and Hoffman to equip the show as agreed and to drive away the grafters.

A pig is usually kept in every stable in Persia, as it is thought the presence of the porker is beneficial to the health of the horses.

WAR SOLE SOLUTION.

All Hope of Good Results From Turkish Promises Disappear.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Sept. 25.—Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, perfect tranquility, almost approaching apathy, prevails throughout Bulgaria. There is not the slightest outward evidence that country is on the verge of war. Even in military circles there is no excitement, though unceasing preparation is going on. The reports emanating from Turkish quarters that the government is in danger of being carried away by popular excitement, and that Bulgaria is likely to take the first hostile steps, may be regarded as ridiculous inventions. It is, however, a fact that all hope of good results from the Turkish promises of reform has long disappeared, and the feeling is growing that war is the sole solution to the Macedonian problem, the only question being whether it will come this autumn or be postponed until spring. The preparations for mobilization of the Bulgarian army have been carried out with singular completeness as to detail, and a declaration of war will find the Bulgarians sufficiently prepared.

The details of atrocities by the Turkish troops in Monastir daily reaching the Bulgarian government, equal and even exceed those already published.

The insurgent general staff in the Monaster vilayet has compiled an elaborate report of events in the district of Kastoria, between August 2 and September 12. It comprises a list of twenty-four villages which were plundered. A great number of houses were burned and 512 villagers were killed. The report gives the names, ages and manner of death of the victims. According to information received from other competent sources, the report is not exaggerated and fairly represents the situation.

According to a telegram received here from Kostendit, forty-three miles from Sofia, 600 Turks were killed in a fight at Kochani, September 18. The Turkish force numbered 7,000. After the fight the troops pillaged and burned a number of buildings.

SHERIFF GETS LYNCHERS.

Desperate Battle Occurs in a Tennessee Jail.

Lynchburg, Tenn., Sept. 26.—Sheriff Davidson, in attempting to save the life of a young negro yesterday, fired into a mob which was storming the jail, wounding a man whose name is unknown. The sheriff summoned assistance, but he and his aides were overpowered, the jail was entered and the much-wanted negro, Hallen Small, shot to death in the corridor. The mob was composed of about twenty-five persons. Sheriff Davidson was alone at the time. He refused to give up the keys and opened fire from a window.

The sheriff then called for the police. Two officers and several citizens rushed to the jail, but despite their presence the mob battered down the wooden door at the foot of the stairs leading to the corridor. The sheriff and posse made a determined resistance, but were unable to prevent the mob from breaking in the iron door at the head of the stairs and entering the cell occupied by the negro, about whose neck they placed a rope.

As soon as the men emerged from the cell it became apparent that the negro could not be taken from the jail and hanged, for fear of being fired on, and he was shot to death.

The mob then made an effort to escape, but the sheriff and his guard captured three of them. One of them, it is said, has made a confession, implicating thirteen men. Small was under arrest on the charge of criminally assaulting Mrs. Eliza Eggleston and at the preliminary hearing the warrant was amended so as to charge a simple case of assault. The negro had waived examination and was awaiting the action of the grand jury.

TRIED BY TIME.

Eugene E. Lario, of 751 Twentieth Avenue, ticket seller in the Union Station, Denver, Col., says: 'You are at liberty to repeat what I first stated through our Denver papers about Doan's Kidney Pills in the summer of 1899, for I have had no reason in the interim to change my opinion of the remedy. I said when first interviewed that if I had a friend and acquaintance suffering from backache or kidney trouble I would unhesitatingly advise them to take Doan's Kidney Pills. I was subject to severe attacks of backache, always aggravated if I sat long at a desk. It struck me that if Doan's Kidney Pills performed half what they promised they might at least help. This induced me to try the remedy. It absolutely stopped the backache. I have never had a pain or a twinge since."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Lario will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists. Price 50 cents per box.

Ponds for Geese.

From Farmers' Review: Not knowing just what is meant by the term ponds, I will treat the subject on the more general term, all waters for geese, whether ponds, running streams or pools of water. We have raised geese for twenty or more years on a farm where geese have access to all of these retreats. We must not forget that the goose is a water fowl, and water seems to be her chief source of pleasure. As to the benefits to be derived from a running stream, its chief benefit is in the early spring, when ponds and pools are frozen. They seek these retreats, and in their sportive exercise, frolicing and bathing, they are led to cohabit early in the year, so that our early eggs are just as fertile as the later ones. During the long and inactive winter these occasional outings produce a healthy and vigorous body, this being conducive to the fertility of their eggs. Of course these benefits accrue also from the pond after the season opens. Were I asked whether I considered the pond of much value in goose culture, I would say emphatically, yes. Our geese (true to goose nature) seek out these ponds and pool retreats, and have many times remained in and around them for several days at a time, when the season is warm and wet, and have remained several days without returning home, and then only to lay, and off again for these summer resorts of the goose family. Aside from the healthy exercise they obtain much nourishment in a variety of forms. While our geese are out thus foraging, some of our neighbors' geese, which are less fortunate, lounge around on the meadow or rest a considerable part of the time. I have also noticed that some of our neighbor's geese apparently wait until a shower furnishes a pool in order to make it convenient for them to cohabit. It is certainly true that a pond conduces much to the fertility of eggs, in stimulating their sexual organisms. We breed only the two buff varieties, and in keeping a careful record of eggs set, I find that from 50 to 100 per cent of eggs in setting have hatched. Of course not grain stuffed until abnormally fat. Had I no water, I would certainly have at least a large tub planted level with the ground always filled with water during the early spring and during the mating season. I have said nothing of benefits derived in growing geese, but for them from the point of rapid growth I think the pond very valuable after the gosling has grown its wing feathers, and even very young geese we have allowed to run to these places and they seemed to grow with that mushroom speed so peculiar to geese. If ponds are infested with turtles, no goslings will long survive if allowed to enter the pond.—J. H. Leatherman, Medina county, Ohio.

Protect Fowls From Lice.

From Farmers' Review: The protection of fowls from lice is one of the essential points in raising poultry, especially in getting show birds. I find by close observation during my recent years of experience along this line that there are two different families of these troublesome pests. The small mites that are found about and on the roosts and the large lice that breed on the fowls. The last mentioned are not very hard to get rid of if each fowl is dusted liberally with some good insect powder occasionally. A convenient time to apply this is after they have gone to roost. The first mentioned are the ones that take persistent effort to keep down. The following rules strictly adhered to are as good as I have been able to find: First, clean your house thoroughly of droppings, litter and cobwebs, etc., and burn plenty of brimstone in it. Then whitewash it, using plenty of carbolic acid in the mixture. Then, after scalding roosts with hot water, paint them with lice paint, and you have a clean house. Keep dropping boards clean every day and have roosts painted over every two or three weeks, and the victory is almost if not entirely won. If one uses an incubator he need not be bothered with lice on young chickens, but with hens the battle is on. These are my plans, which I find are very successful: Dust the hen when set thoroughly with insect powder, then again the third week and then again when done hatching, also all the little fellows, and put in a coop that you feel sure is free of lice. Cleanliness, first, last and all the time, is the prevention which is worth several pounds of cure.—P. B. Harshman, McDonough county, Illinois.

Great excitement prevailed in Atlanta during a baseball game between nines composed entirely of colored men. Observing that the catcher had missed a pitched ball, a player tried to steal from the first to the second base. Before he reached it he was shot dead by a partisan of the opposing nine. But this tragedy only temporarily delayed the game. Two innings later the umpire was fatally shot because he rendered a decision that was considered unjust.

A tender-hearted judge dwells in Vienna, in the person of Wilhelm Stultz. A prisoner was lately brought before him against whom there were over four hundred charges of theft. He was convicted of all of them, and if he had been sentenced for the full term of punishment, he would be doomed to two thousand five hundred years' imprisonment; but the judge's heart melted, and in passing sentence he took off one thousand years in consideration of the man's youth.

A tardy but rapturous wooer in Centerview, Mo., corresponded with a girl in Minneapolis for three years, but delayed his marriage proposal too long. A short time ago he received a letter and a picture from her. The letter almost petrified him; it announced that she had been married two years, and the picture was of her baby. "My husband and I have enjoyed your letters very much," she wrote, "but I guess you'd better stop writing now, as I have to spend all my time caring for the baby."

"I Found It So."

McCormick, Ill., Sept. 28.—Miss Ethel Bradshaw of this place has written a letter, which is remarkable for the character of the statements it contains. As her letter will be read with interest, and probably with profit by many women, it has been thought advisable to publish it in part. Among other things Miss Bradshaw says:—

"I had Kidney Trouble with the various unpleasant symptoms which always come with that disease, and I have found a cure. I would strongly advise all who may be suffering with any form of Kidney Complaint to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which I have found to be entirely satisfactory.

"This remedy is within the reach of all, and it is all that it is recommended to be. I found it so, and therefore feel it my duty to tell others about it."

Dr. Dunaway of Benton, Ill., uses Dodd's Kidney Pills in his regular practice, and says they are the best medicine for Kidney Troubles. He claims they will cure Diabetes in the last stages.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.
by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

WORN OUT, DRAGGED OUT,

Are Most Women in Summer. —Pe-ru-na is a Tonic of Efficiency.

JOSEPHINE MORRIS, 236 Carroll St., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:
"Peruna is a fine medicine to take any time of the year, but I have found it especially helpful to withstand the wear and tear of the hot weather. I have taken it now for two summers and feel that it has kept my system free from malaria, and also kept me from having that worn-out, dragged out look which so many women have.
"I therefore have no hesitancy in saying that I think it is the finest tonic in the world."—Josephine Morris.
Peruna is frequently used as a mitigation of the effects of hot weather. What a bath is to the skin, Peruna is to the mucous membranes. Bathing keeps the skin healthy, Peruna makes the mucous membranes clean and healthy. With the skin and mucous membranes in good working order, hot weather can be withstood with very little suffering.
Frequent bathing with an occasional use of Peruna is sure to mitigate the horrors of hot weather. Many ladies have discovered that the depression of hot weather and the rigors they have been in the habit of attributing to malaria, quickly disappear when they use Peruna. This is why Peruna is so popular with them. Peruna provides clean mucous membranes, and the clean mucous membranes do the rest.
If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.
Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio

Mrs. Tressie Nelson, 422 Broad St., Nashville, Tenn., writes:
"As Peruna has done me a world of good, I feel in duty bound to tell of it, in hopes that it may meet the eye of some woman who has suffered as I have.
"For five years I really did not know what a perfectly well day was, and if I did not have headache, I had backache or a pain somewhere and really life was not worth the effort I made to keep going.
"A good friend advised me to use Peruna and I was glad to try anything, and I am very pleased to say that six bottles made a new woman of me and I have no more pains and life looks bright again."—Mrs. Tressie Nelson.

BOCK--WILLE

On Friday of last week occurred the marriage of John Bock to Miss Naska Wille.

At the appointed hour the invited guests gathered at the German Reform church to witness the ceremony which was indeed a pretty service. Rev. Muehlmeier pronounced the words which united this worthy young couple. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Caroline Wille. while a like service for the groom was performed by his brother. Prelipp. Immediately after the ceremony the guests betook themselves to the Wille home where a sumptuous wedding supper was served In the evening at 7:00 o'clock the older people gave way to younger people who gathered in and made merry 'til the "wee small" hours.

This couple are very worthy young people, and are from the families of two of our most prosperous and influential farmers.

The groom is the son of Fred Bock and is a steady, industrious young man of good habits. His bride is the daughter of Henry Wille, and is universally respected. Her many ladylike traits make her a favorite.

This young couple who have grown to manhood and womanhood among us we are glad to say will continue to reside here, and will go to housekeeping on the John Bock farm east of town. Upon this place are an entire new set of buildings, and it will make a splendid home for them. At the wedding supper everything that one could wish for in the way of edibles was spread before the guests.

Many costly and useful presents were received,

We join with their many friends in congratulations. and may all the happiness that comes to those who love, honor and obey be theirs.

Mrs. A. Dorris, of Emmetsburg, arrived in Klemme Saturday last, and spent Sunday at the home of the TIMES family She returned home, Monday.

L. E Thompson and wife, of Estherville, who have been visiting at the home of Joe Schuldt returned to to their home Monday. Mrs. Thompson is a daughter of Mr. Schuldt.

John Savogue and Mr. Hubbard, of Goodell, were here on Wednesday. The first named gentleman desires to get a suitable room in which to put a pool table and a bowling alley.

Foot ball is all the go in Klemme now-a-days. On Wednesday quite a number of our citizens lined up using Main street for a gridiron. We were assigned the position of full back. and was so fortunate? as to get the ball from the kick-off twice, and while endeavoring to make a touch-down for our side, was tackled, flopped, had the exquisit pleasure of holding up about a ton of human flesh, got kicked in the mouth once, and received one smash on the nose. I forthwith got my hair cut, and decided to cut out foot ball. The boys are getting quite worked-up over the game, at least we thought so, and a team that will be a world-beater will undoubtedly be organized.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

W. A. Durfee of What Cheer has offered a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the persons who attempted to poison himself and family by placing a quantity of paris green in the well and in the milk at his home a few days ago.

John Ballard, the 12-year-old son of William Ballard, was badly injured as a result of a fall from a tree near Angus, where he was gathering nuts. A limb broke, allowing him to fall about fifteen feet, breaking both arms between the wrist and elbow.

The home of G. W. Dixon at Muscatine was entered during the absence of the family and $33 in cash taken from a trunk. Every room in the house was pillaged and a number of other valuable articles taken. There is no clue to the identity of the thieves.

Two 5-year-old boys, sons of A. G. Johnson and Alex. England, of Marathon, were burned to death in a barn belonging to Mr. Johnson. It is supposed that the boys were playing in a hay mow with matches and set fire to the hay. Two horses were also consumed.

The big Armour packing plant at Sioux City which was destroyed by fire last winter, is to be rebuilt at once. It is expected that the plant will be ready for killing before spring. The rebuilding of the plant means much to Sioux City and her tributary territory, insuring a good market for livestock. The plant will employ over two thousand men.

A Milwaukee freight train was ditched at Cuba, Iowa county. Fifteen cars, including four tanks of gasoline, were burned. The gasoline exploded with a terrific report and the flames shot up for hundreds of feet into the air. The blaze was plainly visible more than thirty miles away. The cause of the wreck is unknown. No one was injured.

The community is aroused over the peculiar death of Len McGlothen, of Monteith. He had been in poor health for several months and had a sinking spell. A physician was called and pronounced him dead. The funeral arrangements were begun when he suddenly showed signs of life. He lived several days. Even now some doubt his death and think that he may be in a trance, but a number of physicians examined him and declared that life was extinct. He was employed on the Rock Island railway for a number of years.

Fire at Churdan a few days ago proved very disastrous. The total loss will be about $15,000. There is but little question that the Churdan hotel was set afire by an incendiary. The progress of the flames could not be arrested until the First National bank, a brick building, was reached. The hotel was owned by the Farmers' and Merchants' bank, controlled by M. Head of Jefferson. It was occupied by Landlord Davis, with fixtures worth $2,000, by the Farmers' and Merchants' bank, by S. S. Barker with a stock of dry goods and the Greene county telephone exchange. Nothing was saved in the building.

David Jacobson, about 14 years of age, son of Carl Jacobson, living about three miles west of Lanyon, died from injuries received in an accident. While hauling hay the load on which he and his older brother were riding was upset and David fell on a fork, the tines of which penetrated his abdomen. The horses were frightened and started to run. The father, who walked up from the field, at first assisted in getting the team stopped. By this time David had got up and started towards them, but had only gone a short distance when he fell to the ground unconscious. He lived until sometime in the night.

Fred Herman, of Mason City, has a residence the lightning has evidently picked out as a shining mark. During a recent storm it was struck twice in succession and a short time previous it was a little shaken up. That day it came down in a streak when it first struck and played around on the electrolier. It did no damage outside of furnishing a superfluity of light. But a few minutes later it made its second visitation and this time came down in balls and struck the carpet and did a little burning. No one was hurt outside of a good scare. The Herman residence is one of the finest in the city and just why lightning vents itself on that residence is more than the inmates have been able to figure out.

In the district court of Polk county Judge Given gave special instructions to the grand jury in the matter of alleged bribery and called the attention of the jury to the report of the bar committee on the jury corruption matters and irregularities in drawing juries. Judge Given indicated that the county officers in drawing jurors have no discretion whatever, but must follow the mandates of the statute. In regard to improperly influencing jurors instructions were given in regard to the Wells damage case and the telephone case and the jury was instructed to make full investigation in regard thereto. All of the persons mentioned in the bar report were referred to in the instructions, but the testimony taken before the committee was not turned over. It will go to the county attorney only for reference and the grand jury will make original investigation.

Confined in jail at Sioux City and accused of driving his wife to insanity by his cruelty, Walter Crickett committed suicide in his cell by cutting his throat with a razor.

C. P. White, of Ottumwa, has begun action against L. R. Garrison for $2,000 damages, alleging that the latter slandered him by reporting that he was a thief and had stolen goods from the defendant.

A mysterious death is reported from the country seven miles south of Emerson. An unknown man was found in a water tank on the farm of E. Cole. His throat was cut and his arms were badly lacerated. When found the man was unconscious but lived for about three hours. A bloody knife was found near the tank.

The suit of Blanche E. Sexton against James Sexton, Jr., of Ida Grove for $10,000 damages for alienation of her husband's affections, was concluded by the jury bringing in a verdict for $6,000. Sexton is a wealthy farmer of Ida county. He objected to his son's marriage in 1899. In 1901 the younger Sexton left his wife and went to live with his father on his farm.

The LeMars-Sioux City Interurban line is no longer a matter of doubt. Arrangements have practically been completed for the construction of the road, and the greater part of the capital has been raised. An innovation that will probably be tested on the line will be the use of gasoline for power instead of electricity. Individual gasoline engines will be attached to each car, and the grades will be eliminated as much as possible. Franchise elections of the road will be held in LeMars, Merrill and Sioux City within a short time.

With divorce proceedings instituted by wife No. 1 still pending in the court at Mason City, Philip H. Nugent, formerly of Des Moines, appeared in the clerk's office in quest of a marriage license. He also brought the candidate for Mrs. Nugent, No. 2, Miss Lillian Sage, with him, and would have succeeded in getting the desired instrument had not the clerk remembered the divorce case. When asked about it, Nugent endeavored to deny his identity, but it was proven against him. The license was refused and the couple left the office much disgruntled.

The city of Sioux City has been stirred with a spicy bit of scandal that has caused a big commotion. Police Matron Thurston alleges to have discovered that the owners of the steamer Lora, which plys up and down the Missouri, to the pleasure parties, is the cause of the ruin of half a dozen prominent young women of the city during the last summer. The matter was brought to a focus by the search for a fifteen-year-old school girl who disappeared from her home. When found she was just recovering from a debauch of two days. She claimed that she was taken aboard the Lora, and there made drunk, and later taken to a hotel. The owners of the steamer may be prosecuted.

James J. Reed, a mechanical engineer at the Union Pacific shops in Omaha, shot and fatally wounded his sweetheart, Glenna Hynes, at her apartments, in Council Bluffs. Reed then attempted to kill himself, but the quick arrival of the police prevented his suicide. The wounded girl was taken to the Clarkson hospital where at last reports she was reported to be near death. Three bullet wounds in her body. Reed admits having committed the deed through mad jealousy. He several times urged the Hynes woman to marry him, but she steadfastly refused until recently. After a betrothal, Reed then became insanely jealous of the attentions paid the Hynes woman by other men.

The commercial bank of Mason City would like to know the whereabouts of Alexander Horn, who for the past few years has been one of the most extensive cattle raisers in the county. Recently he shipped ninety head of fancy bred stock. The bank which loaned him money heard of the transaction and stopped payment on the cattle and then prosecuted the cases in court. It is alleged that the owes Mrs. I. R. Kirk and C. A. Harker, whose farms he rented, a considerable sum, and the trial revealed the fact that Horn's friends have spirited away all the personal property of the big farmer since his disappearance. Confronted, however, by an action in court, they have returned everything the landlord's agents have been able to find.

By engineering a measure through the Sioux City council in one night, the Northwestern railroad has secured a coup by which it will be extremely difficult and expensive for the Great Western road to get into Sioux City. The situation in Sioux City is similar to the one at Omaha and will result in a fierce fight between the roads. The Northwestern secured from the council a free grant of stub streets across the right of way of the Northwestern which effectually shuts out the entrance of the Great Western road along the Floyd valley and through the stock yards district. This was the route approved by President Stickney and in fact the only feasible one. Now the Great Western will have to come in through the Perry creek valley or bore through the hills. Both plans involve great expense.

HUBBELL ESTATE PLACED IN TRUST

Will Convey $5,000,000 of Property to Himself and Sons as Trustees.

IT MAY BE FOR EIGHTY YEARS

Will Tie Up Estate Twenty-one Years After Death of Present Heirs—May Found a University If Heirs to Estate Die.

Des Moines, Sept. 28.—Frederick M. Hubbell, one of the wealthiest citizens of the state of Iowa, his wife, Frances E. Hubbell, joining, has conveyed property to the value of about $5,000,000 to himself and his sons, Frederick C. Hubbell, and Grover C. Hubbell, of Des Moines, "trustees of the said Frederick M. Hubbell estate," and to their successors in trust for the trustors and their lineal descendants with a "limitation over," as the lawyers term it, to the state of Iowa to be used in founding a college of learning in the city of Des Moines.

The "trust period" defined commences with the date of the declaration and continues to the limit of time allowed by the law—viz., for a life or lives in being and twenty-one years thereafter. The lives mentioned are those of the trustors, Frederick M. Hubbell and Frances E. Hubbell; their three children, Frederick C. Hubbell and Grover C. Hubbell, of Des Moines, and Beulah C., the wife of Count Axel Wachtmeister, of Paris, France, and two grandchildren, sons of F. C. Hubbell, aged 12 and 7 years respectively, and the life of the survivor of these seven persons.

Estimating the duration of these lives at from sixty to seventy years, and adding the twenty-one years mentioned, the trust will in all probability last from eighty to ninety years and will by the natural increase in value be a magnificent estate.

The property conveyed is divided into three classes. "Schedule A, real property, not to be sold," many parcels of Des Moines real estate, the total present value of which is estimated at from $2,500,000 to $4,000,000. "Schedule B, real property, which may be sold," consisting of lots and acreage in the suburbs of the city valued at from $200,000 to $400,000. "Schedule C, personal property," valued at $25,000.

During the life of Mr. Hubbell, Sr., he is to have the net income of the trust property; after his death, Mrs. Hubbell receives $18,000 a year as long as she lives, and, subject to this annuity, the net income of the property is to be divided equally among the three children and their descendants.

In case of failure of any of these three lines, the lapsed third reverts to the trust estate. In case of failure of all three lines, the whole estate goes to the state of Iowa for the founding of a university in Des Moines.

Article 10 embodies what is known as a "spendthrift trust" and a "clause against anticipations," disinheriting spendthrifts and drunkards. The validity of these provisions, it is said, has not yet been fully determined by the courts of Iowa, but they are drawn with great care.

GAVE JURORS BEER.

Storm Lake Man Punished for Alleged Attempt to Influence Jurors.

Storm Lake, Sept. 28.—Quite a sensation developed here in the district court in the case of Snyder vs. Runchie. It appeared, Saturday, that the plaintiff had gone with one of the jurors to the room of the latter, and there, with one or two other men, drank beer with the juror who was serving on the case, the beer being furnished by the plaintiff.

In the morning the attorney for the defense learned of the occurence during the night and at once filed a motion for a continuance, alleging improper relations between the plaintiff and the juror. Considerable evidence was taken before the court in support of the motion and against it. The court found that the plaintiff had been guilty of attempting to influence the juror, and granted the defendant's motion and taxed all the costs of the case to the plaintiff, with an attorney's fee of $50 for defendant's attorneys and a fine of $10. The entire cost to the plaintiff will amount to nearly $250.

Little Cecil Andrews, 5 years old, of Shenandoah, met sudden death. When the hired man came in from the field with a load of corn she ran out to climb on for a ride. The horses started and her head was caught between the wheels and box. An artery was ruptured in the neck and she died in her mother's arms in fifteen minutes after the accident. She was the daughter of J. A. Andrews, five miles south of that place.

A novel method of preventing fruit from being seriously damaged by early frosts has been utilized by Fred Bostwick, a nurseryman near Iowa City. Bostwick concluded that moisture in the atmosphere would prevent frost, and so he built an artificial lake, covering a couple of acres, in the middle of his nursery. It has proved to be what he expected, and he claims to save hundreds of dolars every season by preventing his fruit being nipped by early cold snaps.

..."We must wait upon the chances of ...e sea, my lord," replied Pope in his ...easantest manner. "Your person is ...ife."

...The Earl made a stiff motion with ...is head.

..."We're ill-used gentlemen," says ...rystal, breaking in with a hiccough. ...Would have us starve ashore when ...here are plenty of rich pearly oys-...rs washing along at sea waiting for ...ur cutlasses to open them?"

..."You do not spare your fellow-coun-...rymen?" says the Earl.

"We have none," answered Pope, grimly. "Poverty has no country. This is excellent champagne; let me fill your lordship's glass."

"Where are you bound to, gentlemen?" said the Earl.

"To the devil, I fear!" answered Pope. "Clear that stuff up," continued he, addressing the cabin man, "and put fiddles upon the table."

The supper was ended. Crystal, with a bottle of champagne in his head, withdrew to his narrow couch. Pope said:

"I little thought this humble cabin would have been honored by the presence of so great a nobleman. You are doubtless fatigued after the events of the day; would your lordship like to withdraw?"

"Where am I to sleep?" says the Earl, with a start, revolving his great nose slowly in a survey of the plain interior.

"There," answered Pope, pointing, "is a comfortable little berth—your lordship is an old soldier—a bolster and a blanket——"

Lord Fitzgibbon waved his hand, upon which Pope, strangely enough for the first time, took notice of a very handsome ring.

"My lord," says the captain with a change of face, "I must trouble you to give me that ring."

It seemed for a moment as though the Earl would expostulate, then with such a countenance as one might conceive on a judge who by some scurvy transition of fortune is convicted by the felon he should have sentenced, he drew off the splendid ruby, and Captain Pope with a bow put it in his pocket.

"See to his lordship's wants," said Pope to the cabin servant; "that's his berth," and he went on deck.

"Where are the schooner's people?" he asked.

"Some are below in the 'tween-decks," was the answer.

Some, including the lord's valet, were forward. The captain of the schooner had been knocked about.

"On an empty stomach, as I reckon, the bloomed cuss had taken in half a pint of gin, forced to it by the good nature of our men. This set him abusin' of our callin' and I hope his left eye ain't been quenched."

"Did he make a good stand?"

"As good as a man can make agin five too many, himself mucked up with liquor."

"He shall join us if he is a fighter," said Pope, "and we'll send John adrift. I want more men."

Crystal had been in charge from midnight till four. He was now turned in again, bravely snoring to the melody of the tiller ropes, and the ugly devil Grindal walked the deck. When the dawn broke he turned his gaze astern, and the first sight he beheld was a large ship full-robed to the very height of her main-royal.

"Good thunder! A Yankee," says the boatswain; he had the most interpreting eye for a ship that ever villain winked. She was coming up hand over fist, a noble sight as her stirless sails, sweetly shadowed, soft as penciling at their leeches, by the growing light in the east, swelled like yearning breasts one above another, bowing stately to each white leap of water which blew in mist from the thrust of the stem, blackening the canvas forward. Many besides the boatswain were now watching her meteoric passage; among them was the Earl, who looked as if he had not slept, and Captain Pope.

"Captain Pope!" exclaimed the Earl, with majestic fervor, "would it not be possible for you to transfer me and my people to yonder vessel? She would receive me for the consideration I would offer."

"We will keep you for that consideration," answered Pope. "We are now your friends, and you know we are gentlemen in need of what yonder fellow has doubtless plenty of. Dollars, my lord, dollars! It shall not be long before you are sent home, and you are a man of great honor."

Lord Fitzgibbon stared at him like an eagle. He read some further intent in the tall and handsome pirate's face and his brows gathered into a bush over his great nose.

They could not walk that staggering, bounding deck, and a little before breakfast Captain Pope, grasping the Earl by the arm to steady him, conducted him into the cabin. Here they were joined by Crystal.

"You took a ring from me yesterday," said the Earl, at which saying Crystal glared. "It is an heirloom and I treasure it. Will you suffer me to purchase it from you? I will write an order upon my bankers for a hundred guineas."

"For two hundred it shall be yours," said Captain Pope.

The Earl bowed. Piracy was on stilts this windy morning.

"What ring are ye talking of?" says Crystal jealously.

Pope pulled it out of his waistcoat pocket, and said: "Give it to his lordship when you have examined it."

"This is worth three hundred guineas," says Crystal, with greed in his eyes, while his strong jaws chewed like a bull's. Pope said nothing, and my lord, receiving the ring from Crystal, pocketed it.

"Who are your bankers, my lord?" said Pope, after a short silence.

The Earl, faintly smiling, answered "Child's."

"I will at once," continued Pope, in his most affable manner, "explain Captain Crystal's and my intentions toward your lordship and your people. Such of your crew as will not join us will be transferred to the first vessel that will take them; but it is our intention to keep you with us for the present, and to part with you only on condition that you give us a draft for two thousand guineas for your liberty."

"You shall have my draft," cried the poor old gentleman, suddenly losing his self-control; "but I implore you, for God's sake, not to detain me long in this miserable and terrifying situation."

"You shall be sent home," said Pope "and we two captains will trust the eloquent Earl Fitzgibbon up to the very hilt as a man of the strictest honor."

The old nobleman bowed his white head with a gesture of dignity mingled with indignation and grief. This extraordinary conversation then terminated.

When Captain Pope went on deck he found the breeze moderating, and after searching the sea with his eye he ordered the boatswain to make sail.

Then, standing at the main rigging and looking at the people in the fore part, Pope spied the skipper of the schooner. The man's left eye was black, his face showed signs of his having been savagely knuckled, and one arm was slung in a piece of rope round his neck. Pope roared out: "Send the captain and crew of the schooner aft."

They arrived presently, and made a group close abaft the mainmast. After a cool and critical survey, during which he molded a cigar with both hands, Pope sung out:

"You look a likely lot; do you know our character?"

The schooner's men made no answer, save that one broke into a low satiric grunt of laughter.

"Ours is a jolly roving life," continued Pope, while at this moment the Earl came out of the cabin and stood, holding on by the companion, looking and listening. "You were late captain of the schooner," he continued taking no notice of the injuries the man had received; "will you join us—you shall hear the terms——"

"No, by h—!" roared the skipper.

Pope looked in silence with a red face at the livid-eyed master, turned his head with a gesture of withering contempt, and, catching sight of the Earl, called out, "He runs too fast to make a pirate, my lord."

"He has a wife and children," answered the Earl, swaying to his clutch of the companion.

"There's a man that should join us," said Pope, pointing with an ironical forefinger to the valet, who stood among the little crowd, limp, yellow and shuddering.

"I am not used to fight, sir," cried the poor wretch. "I am his lordship's servant, and cannot desert him."

Pope gave a short laugh, which was echoed among his men, and turning to the Earl exclaimed, "He'll not desert you, my lord." The contempt in his tone was perhaps reflected in his lordship's silence and gaze. But not a man of the schooner's crew would join the pirates, and when this was made clear, Pope swung on his heel and walked aft to Lord Fitzgibbon.

"You shall be sent home," said Pope.

RICHARDS IS NOW ON TRIAL

Frank Baird Tells His Story of the Robbery at Hamilton.

BASIS OF THE STATE'S CASE

Defense Will Undertake to Show That Baird Is Seeking Revenge—Baird Says Richards Went Back on Promises to Him.

Indianola, Sept. 24.—Startling accusation of the most heinous character were hurled at ex-Deputy United States Marshal William A. Richards on trial for the sensational hold-up of the Sullivan family at Hamilton, Jan. 2, yesterday by Convict Frank Baird, who consumed more than an hour in detailing the alleged particulars of the hold-up and naming the defendant as the man who not only conceived the plot, but who helped to carry it into execution.

Baird was the first witness on the stand, the state thus springing a surprise as it was thought he would not testify until later in the week. He told his story in rather a straightforward manner, though frequently interrupted by the attorneys for the defense who endeavored to prevent the submission of certain damaging facts. Baird's testimony was full of surprises. For the first time since the sensational robbery at Hamilton when it was believed a third party had a hand, the name of a third party has been made known. Baird says it was Charles Redrup, a crook, who formerly lived with him in Plattsmouth, Neb., that entered the house, held a pistol to the head of Peter Sullivan, tortured Mrs. Sullivan by holding a burning lamp to her feet and later took the money from an envelope and escaped through the door.

So quiet was it in the court room when Convict Baird took the witness stand that the sound of a pin dropping to the floor could have been plainly heard. Baird has been guarded closely in a cell at the county jail so that it has been impossible for anyone to get at him. He looked neither to the right nor to the left as he slowly and painfully—for he is but a mere shadow, made his way to the witness stand assisted by Sheriff Hodson. After preliminary questioning by the court the convict witness told his story of the hold-up and the defendant's alleged connection.

"I know Bill Richards very well. Have known him for a number of years. I had never been in Hamilton until the night of the robbery. I saw Richards the night before at Creston. He was at the foot of a pair of stairs leading up to a gambling room. We met by agreement in the gambling room two hours later and in the course of a conversation Richards wanted to know if I wanted to make some easy money. I told him 'sure,' that I was always open to such engagements.

"'Bill' then told me he knew of a party that had some money from a bank and had it in the house. He said he was well acquainted with the parties and knew where the money was kept. Said he was boarding there and knew all about it. Some one came into the gambling room at the time and I suggested we go over to his office. He kicked on this and we went to my house. I got there half an hour before he came.

"We went into the kitchen at my home and there in the presence of my wife and mother and children Richards unfolded the scheme to rob the Sullivan family at Hamilton. 'Bill' had a piece of paper and pencil and noted just how and when I was to get to Hamilton provided everything was all right. He, in the meantime, was to go to Hamilton and see if the coast was clear.

"Two telegrams were agreed upon there in the kitchen, in case everything was all right and I was to go to Hamilton Richards was to send me the following telegram: 'Thomas Ford—your man is gone.—Ed.'

"Ford is a crook and also boarded with me at Plattsmouth, Neb. We decided here at my house to take Charlie Redrup in partners with me. Redrup suggested that we had better go pretty well armed and Richards turned to him and said: 'We will not need a gun. Old man Sullivan will be so scared he will faint when the thing is done. Richards told us that there was $1,450 in the house and that Sullivan had $300 of it in his pocket.

"After we had got our plans perfected Richards left for Hamilton. The next day the expected message came and we got on the train at Creston at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. We arrived at Albia and remained there for supper after which we went on to Hamilton.

"Richards was at the train to meet us. He did not speak but was there to see if we came. When he saw we were on the train he left and went into a dark part of the city. We followed and Richards called to Redrup and told him what should be done.

"We walked past the house to see if everything was all right. Redrup and I then went down to the Burlington depot, Richards came later, there in the closet we completed the plans for stealing the swag from the Sullivan house. Richards was to stand guard outside and Redrup and I were to go into the house and get the boodle.

"Richards said he would go down to Sullivan's and get he boy out of the way. Redrup suggested that he also take the old man, but 'Bill' said the old man had $200 on his person and we might as well get that also."

At this juncture the false whiskers which Baird wore on the night of the robbery and which he said were furnished by Richards were identified by the witness. Baird also identified a billy that he had taken with him from Creston at the suggestion, he says, of Richards. A pistol and an ice pick, the latter of which was used to open the drawer of a bureau in which the money was concealed, were also identified by the witness.

"After conferring in the closet at the depot, Redrup and I went to the house and Richards came along a little later. He wore a white cap, but after the shooting he appeared on the scene with a Scotch cap. We started into the house and Richards remained on the opposite of the street.

"Redrup went in first and ordered the Sullivans to hold up their hands. We lined them up against the wall and demanded that they show us where the money was. They seemed to think it was a joke, but after feeling the muzzle of the pistol the woman got scared.

"Mrs. Sullivan said the money was on the machine or on top of the bureau. We looked and there was only a pocket book. We demanded a second time that they produce the money and Mrs. Sullivan's sister wanted her to tell. She wouldn't and we threatened them. This did no good and Redrup then got a lamp and took off Mrs. Sullivan's shoe. I held a revolver to her head and forced her to put her feet over the blaze. In a few minutes she told where the money was secreted. Redrup pried the drawer open with an ice pick and took the money out.

"When we came out Richards was still standing guard. We had told the Sullivans to remain inside the house for thirty minutes after we had left. We had not gone beyond the gate when Sullivan appeared in the door. I turned around and told him not to follow, when the shot was fired.

"I next saw Richards in the billiard hall where they took me to dress the wounds. He came running in and said he was an officer and would take care of me. The crowd then fell back and Richards took me into an inside room. He made some remark about it being a bad job.

"I told him if he would send $1,000 of the swag to my wife in Creston I would not give him away. He not only promised to do that, but told me she should have all of it.

"Richards remained with me in the billiard hall for some time. I was hardly conscious so badly did the wound hurt. It seemed to me that the whole side of my head was shot off. Richards went away after a while and said he would come back with a physician. The next morning Richards came in with a quilt and covered me up.

"That was the last time I saw 'Bill' Richards until I saw him at Fort Madison. He came down there to talk about the case. I had been taking quinine and was hard of hearing. I do not know whether the warden ever heard our conversation or not."

In the cross examination, conducted by Judge Henderson, the defense first centered its attention on exposing Baird's past career. He was a former penitentiary convict, his prosecution having been pushed by Richards, then deputy United States marshal, on the charge of counterfeiting. He has for years been a gambler. His record is anything but strengthening to his evidence. In all essential points the defense was unable to tangle him.

The testimony of Mrs. Baird closely corroborated that of her husband. She further stated that she had seen Richards at the depot in Creston the Sunday after the robbery, and that Redrup was with him. Later he visited her at her home and said that she need not worry, he would take care of her, and had friends who could get Frank out of prison. The state then called Bessie Fuller, Mrs. Baird's daughter by her first husband. Her testimony also corroborated that of her father and mother in essential details.

One of the strongest witnesses introduced by the state was Tom Murphy, living about a mile north of Hamilton. He had come from Albia on the same train which brought Baird and Redrup to Hamilton and had seen Richards meet them there and walk away from the depot with them.

Indianola, Sept. 25.—The Richards trial continued yesterday with the taking of testimony for the prosecution. The case looks very black for Richards at present, but the defense succeeded in getting more satisfaction on cross-examination that Wednesday. The principal witnesses of the day were Sarah Sullivan and her divorced husband, E. P. Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan told the story of events at the Sullivan house during the days leading up to and including the robbery and the day after. Although the state had abandoned the theory that Richards took part in the actual looting of the house, Sullivan still maintains that he saw defendant in the house that night. The telegram sent to "Ford" at Creston, which was the signal to Baird to come to Hamilton to commit the robbery, was produced, with others, signed by Richards, in order to show similarity of writing. The operator who received the dispatch sent to Baird could not positively identify Richards as the man who filed the message. Other witnesses were introduced to show that Richards knew of the presence of the money in the house and knew that it would remain there that night.

DRAMATIC RACE FOR LIFE.

A very dramatic incident took place recently during a run of the Carmarthenshire hounds, when the master had a very narrow escape from death, says the London Tattler. The fox, hard pressed by the hounds entered a railway tunnel, and before they could be stopped the whole pack dashed in after him. Mr. Harries, the master, realized their danger and without a moment's hesitation galloped into the tunnel to try and whip them off. He had got some little distance into the tunnel when suddenly he heard the dread roar of an approaching train, which was thundering along at terrific speed. The headlights of the engine glared at him.

It now became a veritable race for life. Mr. Harries clapped the spurs to his horse. On and on they rode at breakneck speed through the black tunnel, with the train thundering behind in the hot pursuit and gradually diminishing the distance between them. Luckily the engine driver caught a view of the flying horse and its rider against the sky line at the mouth of the tunnel and he slackened speed. Mr. Harries and his horse were saved. The fox and hounds also escaped unhurt.

Male Teachers Decreasing.

The number of men employed as teachers in the public schools of this country, according to United States Commissioner of Education Harris is slowly but steadily decreasing. In 1870 41 per cent of the teachers were males, and in 1900 the percentage had fallen to 29. The reason for the abandonment of school teaching by men is that it does not pay well enough.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

Rev. E. Allen Enders, the pastor of the Presbyterian church of Rolfe has resigned his charge. He has been assigned by the Presbyterian board of foreign missions to foreign work in the Furrukhabad mission, India. Rev. Mr. Enders has been an Iowa pastor for ten years, and is well known in southwestern Iowa. His last charge was at Creston. With his family he leaves for India November 1.

Leland, the 19-months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Statszell, of Leon fell from an upper story window, striking on his head upon the washboard in a tub of water, where his mother was washing clothes. The child escaped with a few bruises, but completely demolished the washboard, which doubtless saved his life, as his head would have struck on the side of the tub if the washboard had not been there. The little one was soon playing again with his toys.

Two freight trains on the Rock Island collided head-on six miles east of Centerville. Ten people were injured, three fatally. John Goodman died from injuries, and James Hollerman and James Krambeck, all of Eldon, fatally injured. Blame is laid on the dispatcher in not giving the proper orders. The trains were going each thirty miles an hour, and the engines and fourteen cars were completely demolished. It is the second head-on collision in a week at the same place.

W. H. Fish, express messenger on the Milwaukee between Des Moines and Spirit Lake, became temporarily deranged a few nights ago while on a trip south. At several of the stations he refused to receive express and at others refused to deliver. Between stations he amused himself by shooting in the car. Word was sent to Des Moines, and, upon the arrival of the train at the Union station, Officer Riley of the Des Moines Union special force was waiting to take charge of the demented man. After a severe struggle, in which Fish flourished and snapped a revolver at several people, he was subdued and turned over to the agents of the express company, who finally got him quieted. Later he went to the home of a daughter in Perry. The cause of his trouble is supposed to be excessive religious zeal. For some time it has been known to the agents of the express company that Fish was something of a fanatic, but it was not thought that he was dangerous. Had his gun been loaded there would undoubtedly have been one or more fatalities. Not only did Fish aim directly at the breast of one man, but aimed several times into the crowd which had gathered about his car.

At Iowa City a few days ago after a three hours' struggle in which the freshmen class failed to lower a huge nursing bottle which had been hung as an object of derision by the sophomore class and labeled "'07," President George E. McLean of the State University took a step which may put an end to the traditional class fights at the university. While the struggle was at its height and Central walk looked like a huge football field, President McLean clambered to the center of the fracas and after finally securing attention, warned the gallants that unless they desisted the law would be permitted to take its course and they would all be charged with unlawful assembly. He then ordered the sophomore class to take down their standard, which they did, and order was restored. President McLean's action came as the result of the accident which occurred at the fight last year, in which one of the participants received a broken leg. The bottle erected by the sophomores was of oak, bolted through and through and hung by passing a steel cable through it and fastening it to trees on either side. Both sides were guarded securely by sophomores. Between two and three hundred engaged in the fight.

Abraham Slimmer, the Waverly philanthropist, will shortly vacate his fine mansion in that city, which will be converted into a Sister of Charity hospital, while he will content himself with a building nearby which has been used as a woodshop, for his own abode. Some two years ago he offered the home to the Sisters of Charity for hospital purposes, but they were not ready to accept it at that time. A few days ago he was informed of their willingness to accept it, and promptly renewed the offer. He is now having the building formerly used as the woodshed remodeled, and will reside therein. The "woodshed" will be partitioned so as to afford two rooms. He will live alone. The home which he turns over to the Sisters of Charity for hospital purposes is one of the finest in northeastern Iowa. It is large, well lighted and modern. He has a force of men remodeling it slightly, so that it will better serve the new purpose. Mr. Slimmer is said to be one of the wealthiest men in northeastern Iowa. Had he devoted his entire energies to making money, he could undoubtedly have been a multi-millionaire. However, he has accumulated a competence and is now using the money for the benefit of mankind. He has made all his money in Iowa, starting in as a stock buyer in early days.

Carl Loofburro, an unmarried man about 21 years of age, who lived on a farm about two miles from Stockport, was found dead in his room, having committed suicide by drinking a quantity of carbolic acid. Upon her refusal to return the watch he began shooting at her three of the bullets taking effect.

W. L. The blade of the knife missed the aorta by only a quarter of an inch and entered the flesh nearly a half an inch.

Some six years ago a young lad in New Orleans, the 15-year-old son of Mrs. G. H. Saunderson, became tired of the irksome home duties, the never-ending school days, and started out to find for himself the alluring life he had been reading of in his pocket companion, the yellow backed dime novels. The life of the typical bum was the life for him. From that time on the loving mother heard not a word from her wandering boy, and though many years passed by, the mother love never lessened until years of search were rewarded in finding the boy in the Iowa state penitentiary in Fort Madison. The blow was almost too much for the frail woman, but with a courage worthy of a better cause she hastened to the north and to the governor of our state. She had no political axe to grind, no vote to cast, but succeded in presenting her son's case in such a manner that the chief executive's heart was touched, and a parole granted, which allowed the mother to take the boy to New Orleans. Young Saunderson had three years to serve, having been caught shoplifting in Des Moines.

CONVICTION WAS RICHARDS' FATE

Former United States Marshal Found Guilty of Hamilton Robbery.

JURY TOOK FORTY MINUTES

Richards Immediately Left in a Buggy for Des Moines for the Purpose of Securing a Bond on Appeal.

Indianola, Sept. 30.—It took the jury in the Richards case just forty minutes to convict the former deputy federal marshal of the Hamilton robbery on New Year's night.

Indianola, Sept. 30.—Retaining his wonderful nerve to the time when Judge Applegate pronounced judgment upon him, when the tears welled unrestrained into his eyes and down his cheeks, William A. Richards, was yesterday sentenced to eighteen years' imprisonment in the penitentiary at Fort Madison.

At the age of 49, with twenty-two years' honorable and successful service as an officer of the law, Richards is ordered sent to the state prison, where he himself sent and led scores of men, more than any other police officer in the state of Iowa.

When asked by Judge Applegate if he had anything to say, Richards spoke as follows:

"Your honor, I wish to say first of all that I am innocent of this crime. As sure as there is a God in heaven I had no complicity in that ill-fated affair at Hamilton. I realize, however, that there was a strong chain of evidence around me which I was unable to overcome. It is not worth while for me to attempt to explain here why I am innocent, as the court has heard the evidence and can be his own judge. I wish to thank you, your honor, for the kind consideration you have given me in this most trying of trials. I believe you have been fair throughout and I wish you to feel that I appreciate it. I believe I have nothing more to say."

Judge Applegate then spoke as follows:

"I know your people and I know you. In the period of twenty years covering my acquaintance with you and your people, I have always sustained the friendliest relations. It is needless to say that I deprecate the situation. Had it not been for duty, I should never have occupied this seat in a trial of this case. Were it not now for duty, I would say, go and sin no more. I cannot do that, as you well know, and as the situation is one of cold, plain duty, we must forget sentiment and friendship.

"I cannot lessen the judgment, because as the one who planned this terrible crime, I believe you are more guilty than the man who is serving time in the penitentiary and who testified against you on this stand. The evidence is clear that you knew the situation; knew, or thought it would be an easy matter to get the money and get safely away. You did not go into the house, but stood guard on the outside, permitting others to brave the dangers, if there were any. Because of all these existing circumstances as brought out by the evidence submitted in this case, I say you deserve a greater punishment than has been given the convict Baird.

"It will therefore be the order and judgment of this court that you be confined in the penitentiary at Fort Madison at hard labor for a period of eighteen years and that you pay the cost of this prosecution."

The court set the appeal bonds of Mr. Richards at $5,000. Richards is now in the custody of the sheriff, awaiting the securing of bonds.

RICHARDS LOSING NERVE.

Prospect of Penitentiary Causes Him To Partially Break Down.

Indianola, Oct. 3.—Wm. A. Richards, ex-deputy United States marshal, remains in jail, the efforts of his friends to secure bondsmen to the amount of $5,000, the amount of the appeal bonds set by the court, having been thus far only partially successful. Mr. Richards' father assumed $2,500 of the risk yesterday. It is thought that this will give assurance to others who have been reluctant to assume the responsibility for Richards' appearance in case the supreme court refuses to grant a new trial. For a couple of days the rumor has been current that Mr. Richards' brother, from Farmington, Ill., would come to his relief.

Until yesterday Mr. Richards has been cheerful, and has accepted the situation without apparent misgivings as to the outcome; but last night he became despondent, and apparently fearful that he would be able to procure bondsmen. He remarked to a friend yesterday that, although he did not expect to have to spend any time in prison, yet he would rather serve eighteen years of his sentence than to be a fugitive from justice. The experience of ten weeks, during which he was in hiding after the Sullivan robbery, he said, were enough to convince him that the life of the convict was preferable to that of the hunted fugitive.

It is working the bellows that makes the organ bellow.

CHAPTER X.

The Pleasure Crew Are Transferred.

Nothing log-worthy in a narrative of incident and excitement happened this day. The weather was moderate and the brig rolled with foaming cutwater toward that spot of ocean where Captain Pope hoped to fall in with the Spanish ship from Cadiz, the Madre de Dios.

At sunrise a seaman on the forecard reported a sail almost right ahead about a point on the starboard bow. Crystal was working away with the glass when Pope came on deck.

"Anything good for us there, d'ye think, Crystal?" says Pope, in a voice of sudden elation.

"She's the Madre," answered Crystal. "I'll tell you her story, Pope: The crew from the start knew that an English pirate was on her track, and they mutinied, butchered the officers and made off with your fifteen thousand pounds."

"Ha, ha, ha!" laughed Pope, again directing his glass to bear upon the vessel ahead. Indeed Crystal was surely humorous.

In about three-quarters of an hour the Gypsy was within easy sight of the forlorn green craft.

"What is that ship, gentlemen?" said Lord Fitzgibbon, stepping out of the companion-way.

"She seems to be an abandoned ship," answered Pope, giving the earl one of his politest bows. He then said to Crystal: "Arm yourselves and go on board of her, sir, with eight men. Thoroughly overhaul her and report all that may be good for us."

Crystal struck the ship at her mizzen channel plates, and all but one, left to tend the boat as she rode to the scope of painter, scrambled over the tall green side. They were armed, they kept their cutlasses sheathed, for their first glance as seamen now they were aboard warrantless abandoned. They paused a moment to listen, and heard nothing but the groans of the aching heart of a broken ship, and the sympathetic lapse of water.

"Lift the mainhatch covers," says Crystal, "and find out what she's got in her hold."

He turned to the door of the deckhouse; four men accompanied him.

That surprising object was that, Crystal, having instantly taken Crystal's eye, had brought him to a halt, and others imitating him, one or two made an unconscious clutch at their cutlass hilts?

On a couch or sofa was spread a flag of Portugal, and upon it reposed the dead body of a child of five or six years old; a large crucifix with the figure of the Redeemer in silver rested upon the child's breast, secured to it by two strands of silken cord.

Crystal and his men stood by its side and gazed. Did ever pirates' eyes encounter so holy a sight?

"It's a child," said Crystal, casting an uneasy look round the berths as though he had expected the mother to appear forth.

"What that woman's gone and left it?" cried a pirate; he was Maddison of Clyde Point.

"It's a girl," said Crystal.

"What's she got on her breast?" asks man.

"Take it in yer 'and," exclaimed

"By thunder!" roared Crystal. "No one here disturbs it. That's the comforter the little un's steering its road by. If it were all gold and precious stones it should be left there."

There was an outbreak of sentiment, respectability and emotion which somewhat astonished the men, who witnessed, on a sudden in this scarred disfigured seaman, the expression of an honest, sturdy British merchant captain. It was a quickly-fading ghost, and the looks of the privateersman reappeared in Crystal, as he rounded from the body.

"Search the cabins," he shouted, "and bear a hand."

In the course of about half an hour Crystal put off from the abandoned ship, and arrived on board the brig. He went up to Pope and his report was to this effect: Her manifest and papers were in Portuguese, and he could make nothing of them.

"She'll be from the West Indies," said Pope, looking toward her. "From Demerara, I believe."

"From Demerara going for London. Dismasted in a heavy squall. Abandoned by all hands, who left behind them a little dead child with a silver crucifix upon its breast. That's how I read her story," says Crystal.

"Did you bring that crucifix off?" says Pope, looking at the square man's buttoned up bosom.

"No," answered Crystal, with a sarcastic glare at Pope, while he threw open his coat, exposing a long red waistcoat. "Neither would you."

"Oh, damn it," cried Pope, with one of his arch laughs, "is it a dead child that's going to put ye off the scent, John? I'll go aboard."

During the greater part of the day the pirates were employed in bringing off the more valuable and useful of the commodities in the Portuguese ship. At two bells, five o'clock, the brig's mainhatch was closed and the boats belonging to her hoisted, but the brig's topsail was still kept aback. The pirates went to supper in the 'tween-decks, and Pope and Crystal watched the topsail schooner that had now dwindled into the size of a child's toy.

He took the crucifix.

"The devils don't like these transferring jobs," said Crystal. "Strange that we should have fallen in with nothing in the shape of cash aboard her."

"Her people took it away with them," answered Pope. "I would not be locked up alone in her through the run of a middle watch with that child. It seemed to smile as I looked. It has not decayed."

"Suppose it had been alive?" says Crystal. "You'd have brought her off and made a daughter of her."

"I would not have a child for that old man's wealth," said Pope, with an inclination of his head toward the Earl in the stern. "Is it a boy? He drags your name through the kennels, and the parish buries the representative of my honored family. He sinks into the mould a scarecrow of rags and sores. Is it a girl?——"

He was proceeding; Crystal was grinning as though he was in a fury, then observing that his looks had checked Pope, who still continued to regard the melting sail, the square man said: "I hope they left the crucifix on the child's breast."

"By this hand," answered Pope, "it has been added to the other stock of plunder in my cabin."

"A curse upon your want of heart, then!" says Crystal behind his teeth.

After a short, fierce laugh at Crystal's face, which was as hard as a curse, Pope roared out, "Grindal, send the Earl's crew aft."

The Earl's crew came aft quickly, and, with their skipper, ranged themselves a little abaft the mainmast.

Pope wheeled his face toward the bows and said in a hard, sharp, steady voice, "Any of you men changed your minds? Who among you will join my flag?"

"Not one," says Pope, after a pause, running his gaze over them with a cold, faint smile. Again he paused. "Grindal," he shouted, "turn all these men into the Portuguese boats. Off with ye," he roared. "You'll find good accommodation in that hulk."

He pulled out a cigar and lighted it with his ingenious machine of springing flame. While he puffed the Earl stepped up to him.

"I beg that you will let me accompany my crew, sir," he said.

"No, my lord!"

"But why, sir—but why?" cried the old man. "Why should I not be suffered to share the fate of my men, whatever it may prove?"

"Bring the boats to the gangway. Tumble 'em in, Grindal. Crystal, see them safely over the side."

And with as lofty a carriage as my lord's, Captain Pope, puffing at his cigar, walked right aft, leaving Earl Fitzgibbon's entreaty unanswered.

The Earl stood fixed to the deck; his consternation was heart-shaking. Father of mercy, the pirates were proceeding on their voyage! They were bearing him away alone ? Whatever was to be his fate at their hands? He saw the boat reach the Portugueseman's side. He turned to Pope, who stood coolly smoking at a little distance likewise observing the wreck, and exclaimed:

"Will those unhappy beings find fresh water, sir?"

"Plenty, my lord. It must by this time have been remarked by you that we do not thirst for human life," answered Pope, very courteously.

"I wish, sir," says my lord, "you would relieve my mind by stating your intentions as regards my disposal."

"You shall be sent home," answered Pope. "Have not I said that? But before we part—and the opportunity will sooner or later arrive—a strict understanding such as you, who are doubtless a believer in God, will honorably hold by, must be entered into. There is time. We will discuss this matter to-morrow."

CHAPTER XI.

The Earl Is Released.

Next morning, when breakfast was ended and the table cleared, Crystal was for going on deck.

"Stop, Jonathan!" shouted Pope. "My lord, keep your seat;" and saying this he went into his cabin, and in a minute or two returned, holding the crucifix he had taken from the dead child's breast, a sheet of paper, a pot of ink, and a quill pen.

"Now, my lord," says he, putting the sheet of paper and the pen and ink before the Earl, "here are the materials with which you are to make out an order upon Child's for two thousand two hundred guineas."

"What is that crucifix for?" said the Earl, whose agitation on a sudden was so extreme that he seemed incapable of following what was said.

"To swear you on," says Pope.

The Earl started, shot a helpless look of wrath at Pope, turned a slow and hopeless gaze upon Crystal, then understanding how absolutely he was at the mercy of these men, and reflecting that to him his life and liberty were quite worth the money asked for, he wrote. The Earl looked for a little while on the draft as though considering the wording of it; he then handed it to Captain Pope, saying, "Sir, I have done my part. This money will be paid to you on demand if I am suffered to reach England that I may acquaint my bankers with my wishes. I do not need that."

He seemed to understand on a sudden, and passed his hand with a gesture of dignity toward the crucifix.

Pope stood smiling. This speech touched the chords of his melodramatic nature. He would have been pleased to respond with a light dramatic flourish, but could not instantly find ideas

"Now, my lord," says Pope, after quietly pocketing the draft, then picking up the crucifix, "you'll be pleased to take this in your hand."

"Why, sir?" answered the Earl folding his arms and erecting himself

"I have no Bible or Prayer Book and I mean to swear you. Take hold of this."

The Earl saw the temper of resolution strong in the man's face. He was a helpless old gentleman among pirates, and he was wise to do their bidding. He took the crucifix.

I should consider myself as profane as Pope, if I recited the oath he dictated to the Earl. Enough, if 'tis said that he made his lordship swear in tremendous terms that when he was transferred to another vessel he would never reveal to her people, nor to others, afloat or ashore, the character of the brig he had left. He also made the unhappy old gentleman swear likewise in tremendous language that the draft when presented would be honored, that no question would be asked, that the man who received the money would be suffered to depart without molestation, unwatched, and that in all respects the matter would be carried through as though based and conducted on the strictest lines of honest business.

POULTRY

A Pigeon House.

The pigeon house should be built on a well-drained site. The following suggestions as to construction are made by a government bulletin: No house should be built for more than 250 pairs, nor should more than 50 pairs be kept in each section. In our first illustration we show a house that is very serviceable. This shows a gen-

rear, with the yard (called the "fly"). The house is 40 feet long, 12 feet wide and 9 feet high to peak of roof. Along the north side a passageway three feet wide runs the full length. This is shown in our second illustration. The rest of the space is divided by four partitions into five pens of equal size. The pens are separated from the passageway by wire netting reaching from the floor to the roof, with a door into each pen. If the pigeon raiser has but one house he should either use one of these compartments as a room for storing feed and other supplies, picking squabs, etc., or add ten feet to the length of the building for such purposes.

Each gable near the peak has a four-light window. Each section of the poultryhouse has a six-light window on the south side. All the windows slide and are covered with wire netting on the outside.

The partitions between the sections are made of inch boards running to the roof. All inside doors are of wire netting and are hung with spring hinges, so as to be self-closing to prevent the possible escape of the birds. Each pen has one of these doors, and likewise each end of the building. Both inside and outside doors should be kept securely locked.

Side Shows at Fairs.

Within a few years the most objectionable features of the side shows at state and county fairs have been eliminated. It was not so long ago that some of these shows were so indecent as to draw upon the fair managers strong condemnation and energetic protests. From year to year we have noted a steady improvement, till in most cases the really objectionable features have disappeared The principal criticism now made is that these shows are mostly worthless. They neither instruct nor entertain. The crowd is assured that inside the tent it will hear the "real Georgia minstrels." The crowd enters, expecting to hear some good singing. The whole thing proves to be a farce, as any one among the audience could sing as well as the people on the platform. So it is with the Indian war dance. One aborigine pounds a drum, while another limps around singing "How, how, how!" But people don't object; they expect that sort of thing at the fair. As the side show cannot be eliminated it should be improved. It can be made both entertaining and instructive.

Oleo in Denmark.

Danish farmers and dairymen consume large quantities of oleo margarine, selling the butter it displaces. Reports show that the consumption of this article last year was about 45,000,000 pounds, most of which was made in Denmark. In fact only about 6,000,000 pounds was imported. None of the product is exported, the Danes being very careful that none goes abroad to hurt the reputation of their butter.

Sheep Matters in Indiana.

From Farmers' Review: The cattle feeders are in the valley of depression. Large numbers have turned to sheep feeding and 1904 may record some disappointments in this line. The American farmers resemble sheep in this particular. When one jumps the fence they all go "like a flock of sheep." No business is characterized by such a range of vicissitudes as the sheep business. If we could only learn to "stick to the bush," like the boy picking berries, it would be better all around. In the writer's experience of many years with sheep, and never without them, there has never been a time when sheep were not handled with profit. Sometimes meager, to be sure, but nevertheless a profit. Prices were rather bearish on wool until the entire clip was out of the farmers' hands—then up she went like a liberated "teeter-board." The Indiana Wool Growers' Association proposes to look into this matter to some extent and see if there be any remedy. There are numerous flocks of sheep in this territory; but much of the land that is of most value for sheep raising is still without any of these woolly inhabitants. "I would go a mile to kick a sheep" was the expression of a man who confessed that he never learned to care for sheep and they always lost him money. I would recommend that he handle mules—more nearly akin to him. The kicking might go the other way.

Flocks are looking well. The average farmer of Indiana is learning a thing or two about sheep and the flocks have made a corresponding improvement in the last few years. There is considerable inquiry for small flocks, and sheep business will be likely to show marked increase.—Howard H. Keim, Secretary Indiana Wool Growers' Association.

Lumpy Jaw.

A communication from the Indiana station says: This disease more often affects cattle than other animals. It is due to a fungus sometimes called the ray fungus or actinomycosis. The fungus occurs upon grass and other vegetation and it is only when it becomes introduced into the tissues that it causes trouble. The disease comes from eating and outside sources and is not contagious in the usual sense of the word. Several animals may become affected while on the same pasture, but this is due to all being exposed alike. Some years the number of cases is greater than others, owing to the greater development of this fungus. The disease affects the jaw more often than other parts, due to the fact that the tissues are sometimes broken in the act of chewing and thus permitting infection. Any part of the body may be attacked.

The disease is comparatively easy to treat. A drachm of iodide of potash is given twice a day, for two weeks to twenty days. For cattle weighing twelve hundred pounds or more the dose is somewhat increased and lessened for calves. If pus be present in the lump it should be let out by incision. In a few refractory cases a second period of treatment may be required after resting for ten days. About eighty per cent of recoveries may be expected. Affected animals should be kept away from the healthy and off the pasture field. In the case of milch cows the milk should not be used. This state does not pay for such animals when it is found necessary to destroy them.—A. W. Bitting, Veterinarian.

Pure-Bred Angoras.

The body should be long, and the rounder the better; the back straight, with shoulders and hips equally high from the ground; shoulders and quarters heavy and fleshy; chest broad, indicating good constitution; the legs should be short and strong; the head is in shape like that of a common goat, but less coarse and cleaner cut; the horns are heavy, with an upward twist, inclining backward and to the outside. Except just the face and legs, from the hocks and knees down, the entire animal should be densely covered with mohair, and neither the belly nor the throat nor even the lower part of the jaws should be bare, but should have a good cover of fine, silky mohair, and with the finest specimens the mohair tuft on the forehead should be well developed. The mohair should hang in long, curly ringlets. However, not every Angora goat which shows these perfectly curly ringlets of the mohair must necessarily be considered a thoroughbred; whilst, on the other hand, there are quite a number of really handsome and valuable thoroughbreds whose hair has not that much-desired shape, owing entirely to climatic and nutrimental influences, as well as to advancing age.—O. A. Hoerle.

Fifty Years a Teacher.

Charles J. Capen, senior master of the Boston Latin school, has been a teacher in that institution for fifty years. Last week his friends presented the school with a handsome portrait in oil of the veteran instructor. While Mr. Capen's record is remarkable, that of Miss Harriet Caryl of the same school is more so. Miss Caryl entered the high school as a pupil in 1852, the year the institution was founded, and three years later became a teacher. She has remained in that position continuously ever since.

Felt Need of Aid.

Dean Crane of Cornell, who represented President Schurman at the Cornell dinner at the Waldorf, began his address by saying he was like the youth who tried the Cornell entrance examination in English. The candidate had to give examples of the indicative, conditional, potential and exclamatory moods, and this is what he wrote: "I am trying an English examination. If I answer ten questions I will pass. If I answer seven questions may pass. God help me!"—New York Times.

First of Rhodes' Scholarships.

The Table announces that the first two scholarships at Oxford granted under the terms of Mr. Rhodes' will have just been awarded by the government of Rhodesia. Both of the new scholars are Roman Catholics and students of the Jesuit college at Buluwayo. In a letter announcing the nominations Lord Grey pays a high tribute to the importance of the work which the Jesuit fathers have done in Rhodesia among both whites and blacks.

Bets on Coming Elections.

Frederick H. Brooks of New York handled over $1,000,000 betting money in the presidential campaign of 1896 and nearly as much in 1900. He now announces that certain influential men are ready to bet $100,000 on the Tammany candidate for mayor, no matter who he may be, as against Mayor Low. The election for mayor of New York will be held next November. Mr. Brooks also says that should Judge Parker be nominated for president by the Democrats he (Brooks) will be ready to bet $50,000 that the candidate named will carry New York state.

Original Claim for a Pension.

Perhaps the most remarkable pension application ever presented in Congress is that embodied in a bill introduced by Congressman Pearre of Maryland. It recites with great gravity and a wealth of circumstantial detail that the applicant, when a child in arms in 1861, was so frightened by Yankee invaders in Maryland that he became paralyzed and has never been able to do any work. There is talk of awarding Congressman Pearre some kind of championship in view of the originality of his bill.

PLAYED WITH A GREAT MAN.

Carnegie Regarded Tom Morris as Among the World's Heroes.

As is well known, Andrew Carnegie is a devotee of the ancient Scottish game of golf and never misses an opportunity to try his skill with stick and ball. When he was made a burgess of St. Andrew's, along with Lords Elgin and Balfour of Burleigh, he made a point of visiting the show places of the ancient city—the cathedral, the castle and the golf course. Among other clubmakers' places that of old Tom Morris faces the home hole. There Mr. Carnegie was met and welcomed by the Nestor of golf, old Tom, cap in hand. Mr. Carnegie hailed Tom as "the greatest man in the world," naming great soldiers, creators, musicians, principals and professors, none of whom could compare with Tom Morris, the greatest golfer. Pulling out his card, Mr. Carnegie wrote on the back of it, "To T. Morris, king of golfdom, from his loyal subject A. C.," which old Tom accepted with his old-world courtesy. Mr. Carnegie bargained with him for sets of clubs and for a match that he might be able to say: "I have played golf with old Tom Morris."

ST. CHARLES, MINN., IS HIT

Seven People Were Killed and a Large Number Seriously Injured—Entire Main Street Literally Wiped Wiped Out.

St. Paul, Minn., Oct. 5.—The little town of St. Charles, in Winona county, was almost wiped out by a tornado which struck it at 2:30 Saturday afternoon. Seven people were killed and twenty-eight were injured, many of them seriously.

The entire main street of the town was literally wiped out, hardly a business place being left standing. Forty-two residences were also destroyed, and the total property damage is estimated at $100,000.

Among the buildings demolished were the Central school building, the Chicago Great Western depot, the Catholic church and Parrott's wagon works.

The day had been abnormally sultry for this season of the year, and during the morning there had been showers of rain, accompanied by fitful gusts of wind. Towards noon, the sky became heavily overcast, but indications of a tornado were entirely lacking.

This being Saturday, the country people from the surrounding farms had gathered in large numbers in the main street to do their customary shopping. At 2:30 the storm cloud was seen approaching from the southwest, and there was an immediate scramble for places of safety. The tornado struck the town from the southwest quarter and made a clean sweep through it, following almost entirely the line of the main street, and devastating the buildings on either side. Then the residences further back from the business center were struck, and many of them blown completely away.

It seems almost miraculous that there was not a greater loss of life. Four of those killed were in John Ebens' saloon when it collapsed, and they were buried beneath the wreckage. Two others were in a dry goods store, which was blown away, and they were killed by the falling walls. Ed Peters, of Dover, was killed in the wreck of the hotel. The telephone exchange was demolished and two of the girls were seriously injured.

Mr. Blankenberg was the proprietor of a large grain elevator, and he was caught in the wreck when this was destroyed, and quite seriously injured.

HOGG TO THE FARMERS.

Former Texas Governor Urges Them to Organize for Protection.

Dallas, Texas, Oct. 3.—Former Governor James S. Hogg delivered a speech here to a gathering of farmers. He advised the farmers to organize, to hold meetings of their lodges, to listen to lecturers and to hold community rallies where the records of the public servants could be discussed. He told them that they must keep posted as to the acts of the men they set up in office to attend to their business; that they must let it be understood that any public official who rode on a free pass was not considered worthy of his place.

To sum up the speech: The farmers should organize secret political societies, their whole aim and endeavor to be to have the Hogg constitutional amendments enacted and enforced fairly and without discrimination between the individual and the corporate offender, the big fellow and the little one.

JAPAN TAKES A SIGNIFICANT STEP

Sending of Troops to Korea Is Likely to Accentuate Possibilities of War.

Paris, Oct. 2.—According to reliable information received here, Japan has decided to send two regiments of infantry to Korea. This is regarded in authoritative quarters as being a most important step as affecting Russo-Japanese relations and as likely to accentuate the possibilities of a war crisis.

Japan's decision is considered to be directly related to Russia's proposition to evacuate Manchuria, Oct. 8. It is now accepted in the highest quarters that this evacuation is impossible of accomplishment as China has not signed the terms on which Russia conditioned her evacuation.

The advices received show that China inclines to continue the present Russian status in Manchuria rather than commit herself to finally signing the proposed agreement. In view of these conditions Japan's decision to send troops to Korea is regarded as being a most significant step. The advices further show that the war spirit in Japan has been materially augmented during the last fortnight.

Paris, Oct. 3.—Information received here through official sources at St. Petersburg shows that the explanation given of Japan's moving troops to Corea is calculated to remove suspicion concerning her intention. The number of troops moved is estimated between 8,000 and 10,000.

Japan explains that the movement is part of a plan of experimental mobilization for the purpose of showing her ability to mobilize a considerable force in connection with the friction between Japan and China, but that it has no connection with differences between Japan and any other power. The officials refuse to comment upon the explanation.

London, Oct. 3.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister here, has no news of the movements of Japanese troops in Corea, announced from Paris. In an interview, the minister said:

"From published accounts, I am certain that any movement of troops is only the routine relief of the Japanese forces guarding the telegraph lines from Fusan to Zeoul and Chemulpe. To send a small body of troops to Corea would be no menace to Russia and would have no effect upon her plans. A mobilization of the Japanese forces on a large scale is not contemplated for a moment and Corea's consent would have been obtained for any such step."

The minister added that he still believed Russia intended to keep her promise to evacuate Manchuria. Until that promise was broken, Japan was not likely to make any move. The Japanese troops guarding the telegraph lines in Corea were stationed with the assent of Russia as well as Corea.

W. P. Morgan, consul general of Corea in London, also has no information on the subject. He suggests, however, that the time is coming when the powers should agree to Corea being declared an independent neutral state, like Belgium.

The way of the transgressor is slippery.

BROTHERS ELECTROCUTED.

Three Van Wormer Boys Pay Penalty For Murder.

Dannemora, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Without one unforseen incident to mar the perfect and dignified execution of the death penalty imposed by the trial court of appeals, and not interfered with by Governor Odell, Willis, Frederick M. and Burton Van Wormer were put to death in fifteen and one-half minutes at Clinton prison yesterday for the murder of their uncle, Peter A. Hallenbeck, at Greendale, on Christmas eve, 1901. The men walked from the doors of their cells in the care of their priest and flanked on either side by prison deputies with calm demeanor, but extreme pallor.

Father Belanger, a picturesque white-haired figure, not in the robes of his office, but in the every day black frock coat of clerical cut, with a little purple stole about the shoulders, walked along with each of the condemned men in turn, saying words of consolation.

Warden Deyo had decided upon the order in which the men will go to the chair as follows:

First, Willis, the oldest and most impressionable of the three; second, Frederick, the youngest, who has seemed to be the most hardened; third, Burton, the second in point of age.

At 9:30 o'clock it was reported by the warden that the men were in the best possible condition, both in mind and body, and well nerved for their ordeal.

Willis Van Wormer entered the death chamber at 11:43:30, the current was turned into his body one minute later, and at 11:37 he was declared dead.

At 11:41:30 Frederick entered the death chamber, 11:42 the current was turned on and he was declared dead at 11:42:30.

Burton Van Wormer entered the death chamber at 11-47-30, and he was declared dead at 11:48:30. The entire proceeding from the start of the first man from his cell to the doctor's declaration of the death of the last consumed but fifteen and one-half minutes, and no untoward incident marred the execution of the law.

Richard Olney Is Named.

Boston, Oct. 3.—In a most harmonious state convention and with an enthusiasm greater than has been displayed in a gathering of the party in Massachusetts in many years, the democrats of this city nominated their leaders for the campaign of 1903.

The sentiment of the convention, sounded both in the address of the permanent chairman and in the platform adopted, seemed to be a general condemnation of the policy of the opposite party, both with reference to national and state administrations. Colonel W. A. Gaston was nominated for governor and Richard Olney for lieutenant governor.

Hundreds of Cattle Vaccinated.

Beatrice, Neb., Oct. 2.—Within the past few days Dr. Gilbert Robertson, a veterinary surgeon of this city, has vaccinated 500 head of cattle on the Kilpatrick ranch as a preventive against the disease known as blackleg, which prevails among cattle in this section.

Dr. Robertson began the work of vaccinating 300 more head a few miles north of the Kilpatrick farm yesterday.

Miss Ruth Bryan Quietly Wedded.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct. 5.—The marriage of Miss Ruth Bryan and William Homer Leavitt was solemnized at 8 o'clock Saturday night at Fairview, the country home of William Jennings Bryan. The chancellor of the Nebraska Wesleyan university, an old time friend of the bride and her parents, was the officiating clergyman.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

A Strong and Realistic Story
The* SHERRODS
By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON
Author of "GRAUSTARK," "CASTLE CRANEYCROW," etc.
In an entirely different vein from his former works.
The scene is in Clay County, Indiana. The tale begins with the idyllic love of a young farmer and a girl teacher, which culminates in a marriage that brings perfect bliss in spite of poverty and hard work. The development of an intricate plot, worked out in a masterly manner, keeps the interest of the reader at the highest tension, as one follows the awakening of ambition in the young man, his life in Chicago where he rises rapidly in his profession, his first downward step, the frightful entanglement into which his weakness leads him up to the tragical end which brings into high relief the characters of two noble women.
"A first-rate American Story, full of Action and Interest."
"Like others of the successful books which have had enormous sales, it has that indefinable something about it which few stories possess, and which forces a book into universal popularity."

IT'S A MISTAKE.

To Attribute Coffee Ills to Poor Grades of Coffee.

Many people lay all the blame for the diseases caused by coffee upon the poorer grades of coffee but this is an error as the following proves: "I have used every kind of the best grade of tea and coffee that can be got from a first class grocer but never found one that would not upset my nervous system and it was not until I began to drink Postum Food Coffee in place of coffee and tea that I had relief from the terrific attacks of nervous sick headache from which I had suffered for 30 years.

"I had tried all kinds of medicines but none helped me.

"Soon after I stopped drinking coffee and began to drink Postum the headaches grew less and it was not long until I was entirely cured and I have never had a return of this distressing trouble for nowadays I never drink coffee but stick to Postum.

"As soon as my wife saw what Postum had done for me she gave up coffee, which she had drank all her life. This was six weeks ago and she is a changed woman, for her nervousness has all disappeared and her face has become smooth and her cheeks have a good rosy red color. She sleeps well, too, something she could never do while she drank coffee. We consider Postum a household necessity in my house and have induced many friends to try this wonderful food drink in place of coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

ALL BUT TEN SLAUGHTERED

Christian Population of Town of Mehomia Reported to Have Been Killed.

MANY INSURGENTS ARE SLAIN

Claimed the Turks Are Gaining the Upper Hand in All Dissatisfied Districts—Occupy All Important Points Near Frontier.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 3.—The Macedonian revolutionary headquarters assert that they have positive information that the whole Christian population of the town of Mehomia (Razlog) province of Seres, was massacred September 28, with the exception of ten men who escaped with the news. Mehomia is an important town and the seat of the local government. The population was about equally divided between Turks and Bulgarians. The latter numbered 312 persons.

According to the fugitives, when the general rising was declared in the district on Sunday, the Turkish troops in the Pirin mountains hurried to Mehomia and surrounded the town, rendering the escape of the Christians impossible. The Bulgarian population were prepared to join in the rising, several insurgent agents being in the Bulgarian quarters of the town at the time. Desperate fighhting occurred in the streets, bombs and dynamite being freely used. After fighting for five or six hours, the Turks gained the upper hand and proceeded to massacre every Bulgarian they encountered.

It is said the Turkish troops are gaining the upperhand everywhere, several insurgent leaders having been killed or sustaining heavy losses and are seeking refuge in large numbers, and the Turks are occupying every important point along the routes of retreat to the frontier. Fights are reported to have taken place throughout the districts of Razlog, Melnik, Demirhissar and Nevrokop.

Five engagements are reported to have taken place in the vicinity of Kratovo, where 5,000 Turks were attacked by revolutionary bands and though many Turks were killed, the insurgents were completely routed. One of the leaders of the latter committed suicide in order to avoid capture.

Advices from the insurgent headquarters assert that 6,000 Turks were routed by 2,000 insurgents in the Pirin mountains after four days' fighting. The Turkish losses in this affair are said to have been the heaviest during the whole outbreak.

SURPRISE IN BULGARIA.

Bulgarian War Ministry Has Ordered Out Troops.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 2.—The war ministry has ordered out the military contingency of recruits for October 14 instead of at the beginning of the year, as usual. This step, though quite constitutional, has occasioned some surprise considering the reported improvement in the general situation.

While the conditions are undoubtedly more hopeful, there is a strong belief in many well informed quarters that the Macedonian question is still very threatening, and can only be settled by war. The Bulgarian government, therefore, continues preparation for eventualities.

In the meantime the Turkish diplomatic agent is conferring with the ministers here, and the new Bulgarian diplomatic agent at Constantinople, M. Natchevics, goes to that city today.

May Avert War Until Spring.

Paris, Oct. 2.—Official advices from the Balkans show two distinct signs that war will be averted at least until spring. First, the Bulgarian revolutionary committee has made overtures to the Bulgarian government, and unless hostilities are actually undertaken within the next fortnight, all preparations will be suspended until spring. The purpose of this, it is understood here, will be to permit the decemiating of the Turkish forces through the winter and the completion of the preparation for a decisive move early in the spring.

Second, M. Natchvichs, Bulgaria's envoy at Constantinople, has agreed to take up negotiations. He at first refused to act on the ground that Turkey gave no assurances of a desire for an adjustment. His present decision is considered to indicate that Turkey has given adequate assurances.

A Bible was effectively used to banish the devils supposed to occupy the body of a sick man in Hawaii. At first an educated physician was called; but as he failed to give relief, a native medico, or Kuhuna, was brought to the invalid. He whacked the sufferer over the head with a Bible, to thus drive out the devils, and his treatment was so persistent and vigorous that the sick man died.

STORIETTES.

While in England, Henry Ward Beecher was entertained by a gentleman who believed in spiritualism and was himself a medium. One day he asked if Beecher would like to talk with the spirit of his father, Dr. Lyman Beecher. Mr. Beecher replied that it would please him immensely. After the seance was over, he was asked how it had impressed him, at which, with a twinkle in his eye, Beecher responded: "All I have to say is that if I deteriorate as fast for the first ten years after I am dead as my father has, I shall be a stark-naked fool.

This journal will henceforth flow in the universe as the rivers flow and the oceans surge."

When a boy inSmyrna, Justice David J. Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, once paused to speak to Adjib, a scribe of Smyrna, on the highway. Adjib's robe was as white as snow, but there was a hole in it. "There is a hole in your robe, Ajib," Justice Brewer said. "I know it," Adjib replied. "If you know it why don't you darn it?" Brewer asked: "For the sake of appearances," Ajib answered; "a hole may be an accident of the most recent happening. A hole will pass upon a king, a noble, or the most rich and powerful person. But a darn is the sign of poverty. There is no getting around it, no misunderstanding it. I can not afford to wear a darned robe."

Easy to Get.

Pierpont, O., Oct. 5th.—Remarkable indeed is the experience of Mr. A. S. Turner, a man now over seventy-one years of age, and whose home is here.

For many years this old gentleman had suffered with a very unpleasant form of Kidney Trouble, a kind that very often bothers aged people. He would have to get up four or five times every night, and this very tiresome disease was fast wearing him out.

At last after having almost made up his mind that he would never be able to get relief, he stumbled over a medicine which relieved him almost immediately, and has cured him permanently. It is so very easy to get and so simple that Mr. Turner thinks everyone should know of it. Every dealer in the country has it, and all you have to do is to ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Turner says:—

"I can heartily and honestly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for they cured me. Several others in the family have used them too, and always with the best results. I think they have no equal."

HANNA AND HIS HASH.

Solicitude of a Serving Man Lest He Indulge in It Too Freely.

As is generally known, Senator Hanna is inordinately fond of corn beef hash, and whenever he takes lunch at the capitol restaurant he orders that dish, which he has taught the cook to prepare in a manner peculiarly his own. As a result he has had many imitators and "corned beef a la Hanna" is a favorite luncheon dish with many senators. When Shaw, the head waiter of the senate restaurant, wants it prepared with unusual care he orders it this way:

"One corned beef hash for Senator Hanna."

The restaurant was doing a great business one day and everybody seemed to want corned beef hash. Fourteen times the order for "corned beef hash for Senator Hannah" was shouted to the chef. When the fifteenth order went down there was a rumbling noise in the kitchen and the chef shouted:

"That's fifteen orders for Senator Hanna. He better watch out or he'll founder hisself."

FOUND THEM HARD TO RAISE.

Slight Mistake Made by a Lover of Lobsters.

A great gormand, who had a passion for shellfish, inherited a fine estate and a large sum of money. He had been extravagant, and his friends were greatly rejoiced at his legacy. Mr. H. Barry, in "Ivan at Home," tells to what use the money was devoted:

I went to town one day and soon learned that the prince was in his usual impecunious condition.

"Where has your legacy gone?" I asked.

"Why," he replied, "you know that I am very fond of lobsters, and having a river on my estate, I thought I would try to acclimatize them there; but unfortunately I have spent all the legacy in the attempt without succeeding. The quite forgot the water is not salt."—Youth's Companion.

Male Teachers Decreasing.

The number of men employed as teachers in the public schools of this country, according to United States Commissioner of Education Harris is slowly but steadily decreasing. In 1870 41 per cent of the teachers were males, and in 1900 the percentage had fallen to 29. The reason for the abandonment of school teaching by men is that it does not pay well enough.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

While repairing a burned out arc circuit at Cedar Rapids J. W. Bell, having hold of a live wire accidentally touched an iron pipe in which the wires come up from the ground. He was instantly killed.

M. S. Krankheit, formerly a lineman in the employ of the Rock Island road, choked to death in a restaurant at Davenport. A piece of meat lodged in his windpipe and before a doctor could be secured Krankheit died.

Greeley Napier, who was sentenced to six months in the county jail for stealing chickens, made his escape at Keosauqua. He was employed sawing wood and as he was considered a "trusty" no guard was kept over him.

A terrific wind and hail storm visited the country in and around Denison a few days ago, shortly before six o'clock, doing enormous damage. On the Weatherby farm, seven miles from Denison, it became a veritable tornado and practically every building except the residence was razed to the ground and several head of high-priced stock were killed. In Denison the damage will exceed one hundred thousand dollars.

Edward O'Brien was perhaps fatally stabbed at Waverly by James Murphy, a fellow workman, in a quarrel over a pocket-knife. The knife was a long bladed one and kept very sharp as the men used it to shave with when they were unable to get to town. They are employed at the grading camp of the Chicago Great Western. A great gash was cut in O'Brien's neck and he almost bled to death before assistance could be secured. Murphy has been bound over to the grand jury under a bond of $1,000. Both were fast friends prior to the quarrel.

The jury in the case against Daniel Murphy, on trial at Clinton, brought in a verdict of guilty. Murphy was charged with conspiracy to rob residences in that city. He was indicted by the grand jury on twenty-five counts, and will doubtless be tried on some of the others. The case attracted wide attention and lasted nine days. The court house was crowded to the doors during the entire time. Michael Conroy, indicted on seventeen counts, is now on trial. The work of securing a jury is in progress. The charges against Conroy are about the same as those against Murphy.

While her husband was on extra police duty at the carnival festivities at Cedar Rapids, Mrs. Mary Smetena, wife of the night jailor, took her little 5-year-old daughter into the woodshed and hanged her with a clothes line. With the other half of the line she hanged herself. Just as Smetena came in from carnival duty the telephone message came into the station that the bodies of his wife and child had been discovered and he went down with his brother officers and helped to take down the bodies. The woman had been ill for two years with nervous trouble and anaemia, and had often expressed a wish for death, but had not made threats.

Matt McDermid, a laborer on the street at Muscatine, was arrested by Officers Cooper and Ziffren and is occupying quarters at the police station, all on account of a little neighborhood trouble. From McDermid's story it appears he went to Muscatine from Omaha with his family several months ago, and his means being small, he erected a small shanty on the river bank below the elevator. For some time, he states, there has been more or less trouble between his family and the other inhabitants of the flats, and finally he decided to put a stop to it. He says that while the women were having a mouth battle, he went into the shanty, loaded a double barreled shotgun with No. 6 shot, and poking the gun out of the window, fired. Mrs. McClosky, who occupies one of the cabins, claims that the shot was aimed at her and exhibited a bump on her head, where she said she was struck. As the wound did not bleed, the officers are of the opinion she was hit by the wad from the gun.

Ebenezer S. Blydenburg, formerly of Bryan, Ohio, but for a year a resident of Eldora, has been arrested for the alleged murder of his wife, Mrs. Jennie S. Blydenburg, in Eldora May 29, 1903. He has been released under $10,000 bonds. Mrs. Blydenburg died on May 29 last, and the remains were taken to Wauseon, Ohio, for interment. Her death was sudden and occurred a few months after her marriage to Blydenburg. At the instigation of the dead woman's sister the remains were disinterred and the stomach sent to Ann Arbor, Mich., where Professor V. C. Vaughn made an analysis of the contents. He reported that he found enough arsenic to have caused death. The dead woman, who was ten years older than Blydenburg, owned a valuable Iowa farm, of which Blydenburg now has possession. She was Blydenburg's third wife. They were married at Wauseon, Ohio, where Blydenburg was prominent in Sunday school work. Blydenburg's second wife is said to have died in Brooklyn, N. Y., in May, 1900, and it is stated that her life was insured for $7,000. Before her marriage she was a Miss Goddard, and lived at 999 LaFayette avenue, Brooklyn. During his residence in Eldora Blydenburg has manifested great zeal in religious work and his arrest has caused much excitement.

Lightning struck a hog house on the farm of Albert Dougherty near New Market and killed fifty-two head of hogs. A peculiar circumstance of the affair was that the building was not damaged to any great extent. The loss will amount to several hundred dollars.

Word has been received of the death of Miss Jessie Cherry at Hot Springs, Ark., where she was staying for the benefit of her health. The death recalls the famous and far known "Cherry sisters," who were once the leading advertisement of Iowa, being the main attraction in eastern vaudeville concert halls.

Edwin O. Soule, lately removed as cashier of the Home Savings bank at Iowa Falls, has been arrested on a charge of larceny by embezzlement. In default of $15,000 bonds he was taken to the county jail at Eldora. It is charged that Soule is short in his accounts and the reported amount is $30,000. Soule came from Monmouth, Ill., about seven years ago and has borne a good reputation. Dealing on the board of trade is reported as the cause of his downfall.

Safe blowers visited the offices of the Bell Implement company, at 811 Walnut street, and the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine company, at 408 Seventh street, Des Moines, a few nights ago and used nitro-glycerine and dynamite effectively. The sum of $12.68 was secured at the Bell Implement company place, while at the sewing machine store the robbers were unrewarded, except by taking a few trinkets and keepsakes belonging to M. E. Woods, the manager. Both safes were badly wrecked.

In a fit of jealousy, Chas. Sass, a laboring man of Boone, shot his wife three times a few nights ago. According to last reports the woman was still living, but was in a precarious condition. After the commission of the deed, Sass jumped out of the house and ran away in the darkness. He is a man about 42 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weighs about 160 pounds. He wears a light sandy mustache, and the lid of one eye is defective. He usually wears a dark suit of clothes and a light felt hat.

Four more inmates of the Boys' and Girls' home at Sioux City have been taken to the detention hospital, suffering from smallpox. The attending physician, and others who have investigated, believe now that the disease is traceable to a doll which was given to the children about two months ago. One doll was contributed by a family which had smallpox last winter. The children played with the doll up to the time the disease first appeared, when it was burned, along with other playthings of the children.

A new line of interurban railway is being projected at Oelwein that will connect a number of the principal towns in northeastern Iowa. The line, it is claimed, will be one of the best in the state, as it taps a country that has very poor railway facilities. The right of way has already been granted for the major part of the distance. It is the intention to follow the highways practically the entire distance. The board of supervisors will grant the use of the highways so that there will be little or no expense for right of way. Among the towns to be connected by it are Oelwein, Arlington, Fayette, Strawberry Point, etc. The road will be known as the Oelwein & Northeastern Iowa Interurban Railway company.

In a street fight at Farmington Mrs. W. W. Wicksome seriously wounded Mrs. Susan Dawson. Both women reside on Dry Ridge, two miles from this place. Mrs. Dawson's daughter has been working at the home of Mrs. Wicksome. Mrs. Wicksome appeared in town with Mrs. Dawson's daughter's cloak. When the two women met at the postoffice Mrs. Dawson accused Mrs. Wicksome of wearing her daughter's clothes. The two women left the postoffice and when outside Mrs. Dawson threw a heavy rock at Mrs. Wicksome, who, picking up the rock, hammered Mrs. Dawson on the head with it until she was unconscious and doctors say will die. Mrs. Wicksome was placed under arrest.

A cablegram from Rome announces that the congregation of the propaganda at its November meeting will erect a portion of the see of Dubuque into a separate bishopric. This is taken to mean that there will be another diocese of the Catholic church in this state. The see of Dubuque includes the diocese of Sioux City, Davenport, Omaha, Lincoln and Cheyenne. It is most unlikely that any of the western diocese are to be divided and the supposition is that the Davenport diocese is to be divided. In that event Des Moines will undoubtedly be made a see city. Ever since the division of the Dubuque diocese there has been talk of dividing the Davenport diocese. The people of the western part of the state have been asking for a bishop for some time, and it is understood Rome has decided to grant their request. Des Moines will be made the seat of the new diocese, there seems to be but little doubt, although there are many of the opinion that Council Bluffs would be a more acceptable see city.

BURGLAR GANG IS BROKEN UP

Great Nest of Cracksmen Are Captured at Ames and Nevada.

CITIZENS MAKE A BIG HAUL

Three Burglars Are Caught at Ames and Two at Nevada at Three in the Morning—Hid Their Booty in Robbed Store.

Des Moines, Oct. 12.—An organized gang of safe blowers and burglars, who are supposed to have committed robberies at Des Moines, Ames, Nevada, Colo and Ontario all in the last week, has been broken up by the arrest of five burglars Saturday. Two professional burglars were caught in the act and arrested at Nevada and three at Ames at 3 o'clock Saturday morning. At both places the burglars were caught in the act. They were surrounded by the citizens of the town armed with rifles, revolvers and shotguns, who waited from two to three hours for the men to come out of the buildings into which they had broken.

It is supposed that the burglars are those who cracked the Wheeler & Wilson and Bell Implement company safes in Des Moines.

After a wait of from midnight to 3 o'clock in the morning an armed posse of officers and citizens who had surrounded burglars in the Rackett store at Nevada, arrested them at the point of revolvers and shotguns.

In the Rackett store with the grips of swag which the burglars had taken was found over $50 worth of jewelry and cutlery identified by B. F. Shaw as having been taken from the general store of Heffley & Shaw at Colo, which was burglarized Friday night. The feature of the capture is the fact that the burglars robbed the store at Colo and then broke into the Nevada store to cache their swag. They had actually hidden the booty taken from the Colo store under the floors of the Rackett store in Nevada. Beside the window into which they had forced their way was found two valises full of jewelry, cutlery and other merchandise which had been taken from the Rackett store.

At 1 o'clock Saturday morning Night Watch O. I. Spencer of Nevada, noticed men lighting matches in the Rackett store. He immediately called out the responsible citizens of the town including the sheriff and deputy and surrounded the store. For two hours the mob with loaded guns waited for the burglars to come out of the building. Evidently they saw the surrounding party for they refused to emerge. Finally with commendable bravery Sheriff George Boyd and Deputy Sheriff Boyd entered the building and after a long chase around the counters captured both burglars at the points of their revolvers. The men were taken out, giving their names as Frank Howard and Dan Ward, and placed in jail. A search of the building revealed watches, chains, charms, knives, razors and other things hidden in the store which could not be identified by C. O. Nichols, proprietor of the store. A message from Colo, received a short time later announced to the sheriff that the general store of Hefley & Shaw had been entered and robbed. Mr. Shaw was ordered to come to Nevada and here he identified the goods as that which had been taken from his store the night before.

The burglars were taken before Judge Larson placed under $500 bonds each and bound over to the grand jury. They admit being professionals. Howard is about 23, dark and handsome and of heavy build. Ward is 35, slight of build, with a hideous scar on his right cheek. The men were arraigned on two counts. They had obtained entrance to the store by breaking a window on the north side.

Two general stores at Ontario between Boone and Ames, were robbed Saturday night of goods valued at about $100. There is no clue to the robbers.

Miss Elsie Sproul, a teacher in the Second ward school at Oskaloosa, is lying at her home seriously poisoned and suffering intensely. The teacher was instructing in drawing and some buckeye leaves were procured for models. Some were handled by the teacher and pupils. It is thought that poison was communicated by these. The teacher was badly poisoned and two of the pupils also suffered to some extent.

After a period of domestic strife Thomas N. O'Halleran, a grain buyer for an elevator in Cedar Rapids, shot his wife in the head and then turned the weapon on himself. The woman is now in Mercy hospital in a precarious condition with a bullet wound through her eye and the bullet in her head. The surgeons say there is a chance for her recovery. O'Halleran is at the police station with a broken nose, but little the worse for his suicidal shot. O'Halleran was recently arrested for wife beating and has a bad record. He says that his only regret is he did not kill both the woman and himself. Each accuses the other of infidelity. They have four children

The Two Captains

By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

Copyright, 1897, by P. F. Collier. Copyright, 1897, by Dodd, Mead & Co.

Then my lord withdrew to his little dungeon of a cabin, and the two captains went on deck to pace a while and smoke after their morning repast.

Dreadful as was the state of Lord Fitzgibbon it was not to last much longer, for in the morning watch a sail right ahead was reported by the man on the lookout. Grindal knew his duty. The captain was not yet turned out. The boatswain stepped below and knocked Pope's cabin door.

"Hallo!" roared Pope.

"A sail right ahead, sir," answered Grindal.

"Trim sail," cried Pope, "and keep your friend right under your flying jibboom-end."

"Ay, ay, sir."

The boatswain returned on deck, and in a very few minutes Captain Pope stood by his side with his brilliant telescope at his eye.

"She shall take my lord," said Pope, aloud, but to himself. "Grindal, we want to make nothing off our course; get studdingsail-booms rigged out and the sails set, and load Long Tom with a blank cartridge; he must be brought to a stand."

A little while after the gun was fired the stranger swung her foretopsail with a reel of her whole shape that made you think of a man staggering to a blow on the shoulder. The Earl strode up to Pope and said:

"Do you intend to speak that vessel, sir?"

"I hope, my lord, to transfer you to her," answered Pope, lifting his hat and making a low bow.

"But, Captain Pope, she is sailing into the Atlantic."

"She shall tell us her destination," exclaimed Pope with an engaging smile. And while he spoke the Gypsy floated abreast of the little brigantine, whose name, writ large upon her stern, was the Catesby of Sunderland.

A tall man stood near the taffrail,

Pope bawled in answer to the hail.

and a very little seaman in a yellow sou'west cap, clung and wriggled like a monkey at the end of the long tiller. A few sailors looked on from the forecastle.

"Brig ahoy!" sings out the tall man. "What brig are you, and why did you fire at me?"

"To bring you to," answers Pope. "We are the brig Gypsy, of and from London, and I' going to put a gentleman aboard ye."

"Stop," shouts the tall man. "We don't want no gentlemen aboard us. There's no accommodation for passengers 'ere." And he sings out to his me, "Lee forebrace," and immediately after, "I wish you a good voyage, gentlemen."

"Hold!" roared Pope, in a voice that arrested the motions of the brigantine's seaman, as though they had been paralyzed, "if you touch a brace, or attempt to proceed before I have put a gentleman on board of you, by"—and here he swore most horribly—"I will go on firing into you until I sink you."

"Captain Pope," exclaimed the Earl, "you are aggravating my misfortunes by sending me to New York. I have made my personal safety of great value to you; why will not you hand me over to a ship that is homeward bound?"

"The brigantine will do that for you, my lord," answered Pope. "We place the most perfect confidence in Earl Fitzgibbons' honor."

So saying he motioned, not without courtesy, but with very intelligible significance, to the gangway, under which the brig's boat lay rippling and bobbing with four men in her, while Crystay waited at the head of the short ladder. Pope preceded the Earl and Crystal descended into the boat.

"I wish your lordship farewell," said Pope. "A happy voyage and a safe return."

He spoke without a smile. Nobody could have seemed more in earnest. The Earl coldly bowed his head and with much caution and serious grasping of the man-ropes, put his legs over the side, and without disaster, though the swell sank and rose the little craft, gained the stern sheets. Crystal then put off and in a minute or two the Earl was on board the brigantine, and Crystal was returning to the brig.

Pope saw the Earl go up to the long man, and some gesticulation and pointing followed. The Earl seemed exhorting and endeavoring to persuade, and for twenty minutes this went on, the brigantine's fore-topsail remaining aback; then Pope, dropping his glass, burst into a roar of laughter.

"I'll be hanged," he cried to Crystal, "if that yellow skipper isn't sticking her straight off to New York after all."

CHAPTER XII.

The Julia Morton.

The pirate brig Gypsy duly arrived on the grounds where Pope proposed to cruise while he waited for the Madre de Dios to heave into sight. A man was stationed throughout the day and throughout the night, if the weather was clear, on the fore-topgallant yard, and reported every sail he described. Whenever a sail was sighted a course was shaped for her, but the chase was promptly abandoned when it was seen she was not the ship the pirates waited for.

They had been cruising three days. In these times they had trimmed sail for a few distant ships which did not turn out to be what they wanted. A fourth morning broke. Crystal was in charge and Pope walked the planks by his side. On high, seated upon the fore-topgallant yard, with a ship's glass slung on his back was the figure of a seaman. His white breeches shook with the flight of the wind. His left hand grasped the tie, and with continuous slow motions of the head, hungry with the passions of the expectant heart-sickened pirate, he sunk his frowning gaze into the distant sea-line.

Then he sung down loud and clear, "Sail ho!"

"Where away?" instantly shouted Pope.

"Shorten sail," said Pope to Crystal. "Let her overhaul us."

Canvas was reduced, and the brig washed slowly onward. A quality of swiftness resembling steam was in the vessel astern, for in less than an hour she was shining steadily upon the far blue throb.

"Run the ensign aloft, half-mast high," said Pope. "She shall think us in distress."

No sooner had the flag been hoisted than—

"No Earl this time," roars Pope. "By the devil, she's in chase of us!"

He had marked the flash at the schooner's bow. He saw the white smoke stream away like a veil of silk to leeward; the gun may or may not have been shotted. He instantly grew wild and excited.

"Rig out stunsail booms and hoist away. Put all your beef into this job," he shouted. "She's a government boat, and she's after us. Look at her!"

The pirates rushed about with wonderful swiftness and alertness, heaping on canvas, and hoisting studding-sails, till the little brig floated large as a moon. When the Gypsy shifted her helm, the schooner altered her course; there could then be no doubt she was in chase.

Another gun; and the flash of the round shot where it hit the heave of blue waters past the Gypsy's wake was like a feather of light.

When this shot flew, Pope ordered the stern-chaser to be loaded, and a dose was slapped at the pursuer in a roar of thunder.

"What do you make of her, Crystal?" said Pope, after a prolonged look through his telescope.

"Hanged if I can understand it!" answered the square man. "She's no government ship, I believe; do you twig the flicker of a pennant?"

Another flash from the schooner's bow. This time the shot fell close; the blast of the gun came in a dull thud on the wings of the wind.

"Captain Pope," says Grindal, with a strangely contorted face, looking round from the long brass piece upon whose breech his gnarled and knotted hand rested, "curse me, if I don't think she flies our flag."

The conjecture was a revelation to Pope. He took another long look, in the midst of which a flash of fire glanced like lightning of storm at the schooner's bow, and the ball struck the brig's quarter.

"Crystal," yelled Pope, "hoist the black flag; we'll chance it!"

In a minute the sinister rag of the rover went soaring to the main royal masthead, the helm was put down, the yards were braced sharp up, and the brig with quivering leeches lay waiting for the schooner, at whose main-topmast head was now blowing the black flag of the pirate.

When the brig's men saw that square of sable bunting, stirless as a painting in the wind, they roared, they shouted, they screamed; they went mad with excitement, and springing upon the bulwark rails cheered the on-coming stranger with extravagant demonstration of arm and cap.

"Gods, what would I give to exchange this butterbox for yonder beauty," groaned Pope.

When the schooner had measured a space within a quarter of a mile, she shortened sail with magical celerity, put her helm hard down, and with flattened-in sheets drove alongside of the brig.

A tall man whose beard shook like smoke at his chin, who was draped in a short yellow coat under which his long legs descended into a pair of sea-boots, hailed in good English but with a foreign accent:

"Ho! the brig ahoy! What brig are you?"

"We're the pirate brig Gypsy of and from London, cruising for a ship," Pope bawled, in answer to the hail. "What schooner is that?"

"We are the pirate schooner Julia Morton of Liverpool, but now from Cadiz, like yourselves cruising for a ship," was the reply, in good English whose articulation carried a foreign accent.

"Will you come aboard of me and have a yarn, and taste of my brig's hospitality?" shouted Pope, "or shall I go on board of you?"

The tall man raised his hand as though asking for a moment to consider, he then addressed a man dark as a mulatto, probably the mate of the schooner; a minute later he called out "Brig, ahoy! I will go on board of you," on which Pope lifted his hat and flourished it.

"Cadiz!" said Pope to Crystal, while they stood together in the gangway waiting for the arrival of the captain of the schooner, "on a cruise for a ship! Smite me, John, if I like it!"

"Bring half the crew aboard under pretense of entertaining them, clap 'em under, then foul the schooner and take her," said Crystal.

Pope scowled in thought with folded arms, but made no answer.

The schooner lowered a handsome boat. Twelve men entered her, and then the captain, he of the beard and the boots, sprang from the reel of the gangway into her sternsheets. In a few flashes of oar the boat was alongside the Gypsy.

The captain of the schooner climbed over the brig's side, and a number of his men followed him. All were armed. Pope extended his hand to the bearded pirate, and inquired his name.

"Captain Bland," he answered, with a countenance of religious repose and in the voice of one who reads at a grave-side.

"Are you straight from London?" said he, after looking hard at Crystal, and then round at the little ship whose character was abundantly proclaimed to his satisfaction by the readiness with which the brig's crew and his own men had fraternized, one or two of them indeed having been old shipmates, so that it was "Why, damn me, Tom!" and "Why, blast me, William!"

"Straight," answered Pope. "And you're from Cadiz!"

"Ha!" replied Captain Bland, in solemn delivery.

"Was there ever a ship left that port," inquired Captain Pope, "before you sailed, named the Madre de Dios?"

ALL TIRED OUT.

The weary, worn out, all-tired feelings come to everybody who taxes the kidneys. When the kidneys are overworked they fail to perform the duties nature has provided for them to do. When the kidneys fail dangerous diseases quickly follow, urinary disorders, diabetes, dropsy, rheumatism, Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney and bladder ills. Read the following case:

Veteran Joshua Heller, of 706 South Walnut street, Urbana, Ill., says: "In the fall of 1899 after getting Doan's Kidney Pills at Cunningham Bros.' drug store in Champaign and taking a course of treatment I told the readers of the paper that they had relieved me of kidney trouble, disposed of a lame back with pain across my loins and beneath the shoulder blades. During the interval which had elapsed I have had occasion to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills when I noticed warnings of attack. On each and every occasion the results obtained were just as satisfactory as when the pills were first brought to my notice. I just as emphatically endorse the preparation to-day as I did over two years ago."

ORIGIN.

Of a Famous Human Food.

The story of great discoveries or inventions is always of interest.

An active brain worker who found himself hampered by lack of bodily strength and vigor and could not carry out the plans and enterprises he knew how to conduct was led to study various foods and their effects upon the human system. In other words before he could carry out his plans he had to find a food that would carry him along and renew his physical and mental strength.

He knew that a food that was a brain and nerve builder, (rather than a mere fat maker), was universally needed. He knew that meat with the average man does not accomplish the desired results. He knew that the soft gray substance in brain and nerve centers is made from Albumen and Phosphate of Potash obtained from food. Then he started to solve the problem.

Careful and extensive experiments evolved Grape-Nuts, the now famous food. Grape-Nuts contain the brain and nerve building food elements in condition for easy digestion. The result of eating Grape-Nuts daily is easily seen in a marked sturdiness and activity of the brain and nervous system, making it a pleasure for one to carry on the daily duties without fatigue or exhaustion. The food is in no sense a stimulant but is simply food which renews and replaces the daily waste of brain and nerves.

Its flavor is charming and being fully and thoroughly cooked at the factory it is served instantly with cream.

The signature of the brain worker spoken of, C. W. Post, is to be seen on each genuine package of Grape-Nuts.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

DRAMATIC RACE FOR LIFE.

Galloping Through a Tunnel in Front of a Fast Railway Train.

A very dramatic incident took place recently during a run of the Carmarthenshire hounds when the master had a very narrow escape from death, says the London Tatler. The fox, hard pressed by the hounds, entered a railway tunnel and before they could be stopped the whole pack dashed in after him. Mr. Harries the master, realized their danger and without a moment's hesitation galloped into the tunnel to stop and turn them off. He had got some little distance into the tunnel when suddenly he heard the dread roar of an approaching train, which was thundering along at terrific speed. The headlights of the engine glared at him.

It now became a veritable race for life. Mr. Harries clapped the spurs to his horse. On and on they rode at breakneck speed through the black tunnel, with the train thundering behind in the hot pursuit and gradually diminishing the distance between them. Finally the engine driver caught a view of the flying horse and its rider against the sky line at the mouth of the tunnel and he slackened speed. Mr. Harries and his horse were saved. The fox and hounds also escaped unhurt.

Ambition for Yankee Soldiers.

A Congressman from one of the border states tells an interesting story illustrating the makeshifts on which pension claims are based, and incidentally affording a laugh at the expense of his Northern colleagues. "A good old colored auntie," said he the other day, "recently came to me to plead for financial assistance. By way of emphazing her husband's special claim to my bounty she said querulously, 'you done orter to had got my ale man a pension; dat's what yer orter had done.' Somewhat surprised I asked the old lady what her husband's claim on Uncle Sam's benevolence consisted in. 'He done go wif Marse Sherman in de wah. He done tote ambition for de Yankee soldiers.'"—New York Tribune.

Some real cute "lobster" without the fear of the law in his heart, and with but very little grey matter in the proper store room took advantage of the darkness on Saturday night and tramped the full length of the newly laid cement walk in front of Mrs. Hartnell's house, leaving the print of his "hoof" in about twenty different places on the walk. In order to get onto the walk it was necessary for the offender to climb over a fence. He went to all this trouble in order to do something which he thought was funny, but in the public's eye is contemptable.

RUSSIAN FLEET IS MOBILIZED

Ninety Warship of All Classes Said to Be South of Korea.

JAPAN'S SHIPS ARE THERE

Russian Quoted as Saying That His Country is Ready for War With Japan—London Knows Nothing of the Situation.

Paris, Oct. 9.—Official information received here shows that a formidable Russian fleet, comprising ninety warships of all classes, has left Port Arthur and has arrived at Ma-San-Pho, south of Korea, where the Japanese fleet had already arrived. The Russian ships have anchored within the Ma-San-Pho harbor alongside the Japanese ships. Several brigades of Russian troops have been moved forward to the Korean boundary, and are now encamped on the border. Diplomatic negotiations are still progressing at Tokio. These do not relate to the evacuation of Manchuria by the Russian troops, but to the future of Korea.

The Patrie in a special dispatch from Darmstadt, gives an interview with Alexander Savinski, the secretary of Foreign Minister Lamsdorff, who, it is claimed, spoke on the authority of his chief upon Russo-Japanese relations. M. Savinski is quoted as saying:

"Our agents at Tokio have informed us that Japan desires war and is prepared for it. We have enough troops in Siberia to resist all the Japanese forces."

Regarding Turkey and Bulgaria, M. Savinski said that the accord between Russia and Austria was stronger than ever, and that he did not believe war between those countries would occur.

London, Oct. 9.—The foreign office informs the Associated Press it has heard nothing of the reported gathering of Russian war ships at Ma-San-Pho. The foreign office reiterates that government advices give no indication of the possibility of a Russian-Japanese outbreak.

TREATY WITH CHINA SIGNED.

Means the Settlement of Long-Vexed Questions.

Washington, Oct. 9.—The state department was informed yesterday that the American-Chinese commercial treaty has been signed at Shanghai, and that the Japanese-Chinese treaty would be signed yesterday afternoon. The cablegram announcing the signing of the treaty was sent from Shanghai and was signed by Minister Conger, Consul General Goodnow and Mr. Seaman, the three commissioners who negotiated the instrument. An imperial decree by the Chinese government has made the treaty effective so far as that government is concerned, but it must be ratified by the United States senate before the ratifications can be exchanged and the treaty put in operation.

Great satisfaction is expressed at the state department at the outcome, as it makes certain that the two ports in Manchuria will be opened to the United States, no matter what the outcome as to the negotiations for the evacuation of that territory by Russia may be. The assurances that Russia has previously given, and to which this government would insist upon adherence, is that the treaty arrangements made with China covering Manchurian ports will be binding upon the Russian government.

The principal points of the treaty are briefly as follows:

First—Settlement of the long-vexed question of internal taxation in China.

Second—Recognition of Americans' right of residence throughout the empire for missionary work.

Third—Protection of patents, trademarks and copyrights.

Fourth—Protection of mining rights.

Fifth—Opening of new localities to international trade in the part of the empire in which the United States has vast commercial interests.

Sixth—Right to carry on trade, industries and manufactures in all parts of China.

RUSSIA DOES NOT EVACUATE.

Proceeds to Erect Extensive Buildings at New Chwang.

New Chwang, Manchuria, Oct. 10.—The Russians are taking no steps to restore the government of New Chwang to the Chinese. On the contrary, they are hastening the erection of extensive government buildings and have added another gunboat to the naval force here.

Reports from northern Manchuria indicate that no movement has been made towards the evacuation of that territory and Russian officials are discussing the permanent occupation of the points now held as being the settled policy.

The Russian viceroy, Admiral Alexieff, has been conducting joint naval and military maneuvers on a great scale in the vicinity of Port Arthur this week. Ninety Russian war vessels of all classes were engaged.

WAR PREDICTED FROM CHE FOO

Japanese Said to Be Ready for Hostilities at Expiration of Their Ultimatum.

London, Oct. 12.—The correspondent of the Morning Post at Che Foo, telegraphing October 10, says:

"It is stated that the Japanese have decided to declare hostilities tomorrow on the expiration of their ultimatum to Russia. The Russian fleet has cleared from Port Arthur. It is reported that the Japanese are landing troops at Yasanpho, Korea.

"There are strong indications that Germany favors hostilities on the ground that it would enable her to extend her sphere of influence in China.

"A number of field guns were embarked at Port Arthur yesterday for unknown destination. All the available force of workmen is employed on the fortifications.

"The cholera and the plague have broken out among the Russians at New Chwang."

Another dispatch to the Morning Post from Che Foo, dated October 11, 8:50 p. m., says:

"The situation is unchanged. All is quiet at Port Arthur. Hostilities are still believed to be imminent. It is asserted that the Russians have fixed Friday next for their commencement.

"There is an exodus of Chinese merchants from the Yalu valley. They are arriving at Che Foo."

The Daily Mail's correspondent at Shanghai telegraphs.

"Inquiries show that only the Japanese troops at Yasanpho are on the small territory conceded to Japan in connection with railway building, and their presence is therefore in accordance with treaty rights."

A Singapore dispatch to the Daily Mail says that the British admirals of the China, Australian and East Indian squadrons have arrived at that port and will confer abcard H. M. S. Glory tomorrow to discuss the questions of naval construction and strategy in the far east.

London, Oct. 12.—The Tokio correspondent of the Times telegraphs that the statement that Russia has proposed the partition of Korea is unfounded. It is generally asserted, but not yet officially confirmed, that Japan has obtained the concession for the Seoul-Kaisang section of the Seoul-Wiju railway and also for the Masan-Pho branch.

RESERVES TO BE MOBILIZED.

Bulgarian War Office Takes Important Action.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 12.—The war office today ordered the complete mobilization of the first and second classes of reserves resident in the Kostendil district and of the Thirteenth Macedonian infantry. This step it is understood, was taken as a precautionary measure, in view of the repeated provocative acts of the Turks on the frontier.

The war office has also ordered twenty thousand overcoats for delivery December 1, and has decided, in view of the situation, not to send home any of the recruits for the present.

PREPARES TO LAND TROOPS.

If Japan Persists War With Russia is Inevitable.

London, Oct. 12.—There has been no change for the better in the situation in the far east. If anything, the outlook is more warlike, and the news which reached here indicaes a condition almost equivalent to open war.

The most significent point in the day's news is to the effect that Japan is landing troops, or preparing to land troops in Korea. If this proves to be correct, it is almost equivalent to a declaration of war. As if in reply to this news comes the information that a powerful Russian fleet has left Port Arthur under sealed orders, presumably for Korean waters to prevent this landing.

There is no doubt the Japanese government will be backed by a unanimous public opinion, no matter to what lengths she may go, in opposing Russian aggression.

In addition to these facts, which seem to be fairly authenticated, and which are sufficiently serious to cause grave alarm, there are all sorts of rumors afloat. One is that Japan has sent an ultimatum to Russia demanding the evacuation of Manchuria, and fixing October 12 as the date on which satisfactory reply must be given. Another is that Russia has decided to bring on a fight, which is regarded as inevitable, rather than wait for it. No official confirmation can be secured of either of these reports, though they are received with more or less credence.

As to the evacuation of Manchuria, Russia has nothing to say, and apparently nothing to do. If she has made a move to get away from the hostage provinces, news of the fact has failed to reach any of the European capitals. On the other hand, Russian newspapers, which are generally regarded as semi-official, state plainly the czar is in Manchuria to stay, and has no intention of giving up a foot of land in Asia now in her possession.

England's position in the imbroglio is something of a puzzle. If the foreign office regards the position as menacing war in the near future, which is the general belief, neither the war office nor the admiralty is taking any steps to increase England's land or naval forces in the area of trouble, so far as the general public is aware. Whether this means that the government does not regard hostilities as possible, or in the event of hostilities does not intend to give material aid to her Asiatic allies, is a question to which as yet there is no answer. In the event that there is war, and that England becomes one of the parties to it, it is said Lord Kitchener will be sent from India to take charge of the British forces, and that in fact he will be in supreme command of the allied troops. There is a well defined feeling that the question of war or peace in Asia will be settled definitely for the near future within the next two or three days.

Convict Nearly Gains Liberty.

San Quentin Prison, Cal., Oct. 9.—The effort of one of the most daring prisoners confined at San Quentin to cut his way out of the incorrigible cells and escape has come to light. The floors of the cell are covered with three-quarter inch boiler iron and the convict had almost completely cut a hole through it.

This would have given him entrance to a store-room below where he could have procured a rope and a hook to aid him in his attempt to scale the walls.

Clearly the automobile is to be classed as a deadly weapon.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY ENDORSES PE-RU-NA.

Pe-ru-na Drug Co., Columbus, Ohio:
Gentlemen:—"I can cheerfully say that Mrs. Schley has taken Pe-ru-na and I believe with good effect."—W. S. SCHLEY, Washington, D. C.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY, one of the foremost, notable heroes of the Nineteenth Century. A name that starts terror in the heart of every Spaniard. A man of steady nerve, clear head, undaunted courage and prompt decision.

Approached by a friend recently, his opinion was asked as to the efficacy of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy. Without the slightest hesitation he gave this remedy his endorsement. It appeared on later conversation that Peruna has been used in his family, where it is a favorite remedy.

Such endorsements serve to indicate the wonderful hold that Peruna has upon the minds of the American people. It is out of the question that so great and famous a man as Admiral Schley could have any other reason for giving his endorsement to Peruna than his positive conviction that the remedy is all that he says it is.

The fact is Peruna has overcome all opposition and has won its way to the hearts of the people. The natural timidity which so many people have felt about giving endorsements to any remedy is giving way. Gratitude and a desire to help others has inspired thousands of people to give public testimonials for Peruna who heretofore would not have consented to such publicity.

Never before in the annals of medicine has it happened that so many men of national and international reputation have been willing to give unqualified and public endorsements to a proprietary remedy. No amount of advertising could have accomplished such a result. Peruna has won on its own merits. Peruna cures catarrh of whatever phase or location in the human body. This is why it receives so many notable and unique endorsements.

Address The Peruna Drug M'f'g Co., Columbus, Ohio, for free literature on catarrh.

The relations of a lady who had died, leaving a legacy to a favorite donkey in order to secure its comfort, recently came into court and asked for a decision as to who was to enjoy the legacy after the donkey's demise. "The next of kin," was the judge's verdict.

A certain nobleman, well known to society, while one day strolling round his stables, came across his coachman's little boy on a seat, playing with his toys. Mrs. Long (who recommended a servant)—"Yes, she was an excellent girl in every way, except she would imitate me in dress, and things like that." Miss Short—"Ah, yes, I noticed she began doing it when she came to me; but she's given it up now." Mrs. Long—"I'm glad to hear it. I expect she saw she was making herself didiculous."

The Frenchman did not know all about the English language. "I vould like to come see you ver' much. In fact, I vould have come, only I thought you vere ver' busy. I have got der gender of de verb wrong."

Still Another Case.

Franksville, Wis., Oct. 12th.—Many remarkable cures are being reported from all over the country but there is one right here in Franksville which is certainly worth publishing, and which has not as yet been given to the public.

Mrs. Louis Markison of this place had been a sick woman for quite a long time and could not find anything to give her any help. She suffered all the painful symptoms of what is generally known as female weakness. Every woman who reads her story will understand these distressing conditions which combine to make the lives of many women one long burden of weakness and suffering.

Mrs. Markison chanced one day to hear of a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, that was said to be a splendid medicine for women's weakness. She determined to try some and soon found herself getting better. She kept on with the pills and was cured. Speaking of her case, Mrs. Markison says:—

"I can and do praise Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for female weakness. They are the best medicine I have ever known, and have done me a great deal of good."

One reason women can't keep secrets is because they don't know what to do with them.

GENERAL GRANT'S BON MOT.

Witty Rejoinder That Is Credited to the "Silent Man."

A portrait of Jay Cooke, by Wm. M. Chase, is one of the best pictures at this year's exhibition of the Philadelphia academy of fine arts. Mr. Chase standing beneath the portrait the other afternoon, said:

"When Mr. Jay Cooke posed for me he told me of a bon-mot of Gen. Grant's. Grant was entertaining a clergyman one evening, and the clergyman had to make a certain train on a certain railroad or he would not get home that night. Therefore his host kept reminding him of the hour, but he would put the matter off and begin to talk in his fluent, clerical way again.

"'Now, doctor, remember your train goes at 10:20,' Grant for the tenth time said.

"'That is all right about the train, General,' returned the clergyman; 'the Lord controls the trains.'

"'Yes,' Grant chuckled, 'but if you want to get this A. & B. line train, you had better start now. The Lord has had nothing to do with the A. & B. this many a year.'"—Pittsburg Gazette.

REAL QUALITIES OF WORTH.

Loyalty, Charity and Generosity Most to Be Praised.

As a man grows older he perceives that the moral qualities are worth a good deal more in friendship than the intellectual qualities, and that no brilliancy of mind, no charm of conversation can make up for lack of loyalty, charity and generosity in social intercourse. Young men of brains are disposed to value mainly mental power in other people, and it is a human quality to forgive much in men and women of genius. This is a false appreciation of the respective values of mentality and the moral qualities. The time comes when a man learns that unselfishness and affection are better in wife or friend than intellectual power accompanied by intense self-love. Fortunate the man who does not come to this knowledge too late.—San Francisco Bulletin.

A Natural Question.

The youngster in the art gallery looked long and earnestly at the painting. Then he read the inscription. "Do you like it?" asked his mother. "Oh, I like it well enough," he answered, "but I don't understand it." "What is it you don't understand?" "Why, it says, 'Wild Horses—After Rosa Bonheur.' I see the horses all right, but where's the girl they're after?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE NEWS IN IOWA.

James Dobbs is now confined to a cell at the central police station at Waterloo on what may prove a serious charge. Guy Campbell, as a result of his experience with Dobbs, is now under the care of a physician, after being severely beaten over the head with a beer bottle.

Chief of Police Moyer, of Boone, received a telephone message from Carroll stating that Solomon J. Sapp, who attempted to kill his wife in the former place last week, was in custody at Carroll and would be held until officers from Boone arrived. It was stated that he had taken a dose of poison with the evident intention of ending his life.

Walter, the 2-year-old son of Mrs. Slocum, living in Orient, met with a very painful and what may prove serious accident. Mrs. Slocum was washing and had taken part of the clothes from the boiler and set them on a box while she went to attend to the rest of the washing. The child pulled the clothes from the box over on him in such a way that his clothing was soaked with the boiling suds, which severely scalded his body and hips. It is thought that he will recover, though badly scalded.

After remaining in hiding and thwarting the efforts of the officers to locate him since the night of July 4, William Cobley, formerly of Hocking was arrested at Novinger, Mo., and was brought to Albia to answer to the charge of murder as the result of the death of Robert Roe. Roe was killed during a fight over a can of beer in which Cobley, Roe and two others, James Campbell and William Fuller, participated. Fuller was arrested the day after the death of Roe and when tried in Abia recently he received a sentence of five years in the Fort Madison penitentiary.

An Iowa game warden paid $100 for violation of the state game law of Minnesota. H. S. Tubbs, deputy game warden of Manchester, was in the police court in St. Paul for having in his possession two deer hides, two carcasses of venison, five partridges and four black bass, which he was in the act of shipping to Iowa when arrested at the union depot. The explanation furnished by Mr. Tubbs corresponds closely with those usually given by men similarly circumstanced. The game, it appears from his statement, was killed in Wisconsin and was being shipped to Iowa via Minnesota. Under the game laws this makes no difference, and as Tubbs pleaded guilty of having the game in his possession, he was assessed the minimum penalty of $50 for each deer and the game was confiscated.

Some unknown parties blew out twenty-five feet on each end of the state dam at Milford a few nights ago. It is supposed they used dynamite. The report was terrific and was distinctly felt at Milford, two miles away. This is the second attempt recently made to destroy the dam. The dam is located at the south end of Okoboji and was put in by the state for the purpose of keeping the fish in the lake. During the past season the lakes have been so high that the dikes which protect farms in that section have been crumbling and some of the land inundated. The owners of the surrounding land want the dam taken out to protect the land, while the state maintains it to protect the fish. In a previous attempt to destroy the dam one man had an arm broken and two others were badly hurt.

That a widow retains her rights in property even though other parties have held the same by adverse possession for a period of forty years, has just been decided in the supreme court. The case came from Muscatine county and is entitled Phoebe Lucas vs. Maurice Whiteacre. In 1852 E. W. Lucas is company with Gilman Folsom secured possession of thirty-nine acres of land in Muscatine county. In 1853 Lucas was married. He died in 1900. After his death his widow commenced an action in district court to obtain her one-third interest in one-half of the land, which was in the possession of Mr. Whiteacre. Her claim was denied by Mr. Whiteacre on the ground that he owned the entire piece of land by adverse possession. The lower court decided in favor of the widow and the supreme court in an opinion written by Justice court, in an opinion written by Justice

Engineer Edward E. Fox has filed with the county auditor of Hamilton county his report of the contemplated county ditch known as the "Hassebroek Ditch." The proposed ditch starts at the northwest part of Mud lake and runs in a northwesterly direction, taking in the McFarland and Alex Groves ditches, thence north and northeast through the Studley farm to the present terminus at the second bridge east of the town of Kamrar. This ditch drains a territory estimated at about 14,000 acres, and is contemplated to be eventually extended as far north as the old Percheron farm as the water from the land that far north comes into this district. The present length of the ditch is four miles and the estimated cost $9,500. The town of Kamrar lies inside of this district and the ditch will drain portions of Blairsburg, Liberty, Independence and Hamilton townships.

Clarence Spurling, of Webster City, was sentenced to fifteen months in the penitentiary, having been found guilty of stealing a horse from Barney Brin, near there.

J. W. Bush, a top man working at the Consolidation Coal company's mines, at Buxton, died very suddenly and unexpectedly at his boarding place. Bush had not been previously ill, but had a tooth pulled the previous day, and it is possible took something to relieve his suffering.

Otto Christoffers, a retired farmer, near Palmer, shot himself through the heart. Three months ago he was arrested as a habitual drunkard. The judge permitted him his liberty during good behavior. He kept his promise not to drink but brooded over his disgrace and kept constantly at home. He was well known. He was a Mason and a leader in the Lutheran church.

A barn belonging to L. Lewis, of Hawarden, was totally destroyed by fire, the estimated loss being $500. The fire was started by Mr. Lewis' 12-year-old son, who in attempting to light a lantern set some hay on fire, and soon the whole building was in flames. In addition to the barn several tons of hay, seven head of hogs and two sets of harness were destroyed.

H. G. Stumpf, former treasurer of the town of Vincent, was bound over to the grand jury under $1,000 bonds charged with embezzling $300 of public funds which were in his possession when he disappeared September 8. He was unable to furnish bonds and is now in jail. When Stumpf left Vincent he went to Rockwell City, returning to Iowa September 29. He was arrested at Harlan.

A Washington dispatch says: A fraud order has been issued by the postoffice department against Letson Balliett, the White Swan Mining company, Limited, and the Pacific Securities and Trust company of San Francisco. The latter company was organized to float the securities of the White Swan Mining company. Balliett's mail business has netted him from $300 to $400 per month, all of which will be shut off by the fraud order.

Jos. C. Nieman, of Earlville, one of the best known implement dealers in northern Iowa, has filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy with Clerk Van Duzee of the United States court. His liabilities amount to $24,000, while his assets are given at $19,555. Nearly all the creditors are firms from which he has purchased machinery. The bank of Earlville holds some of his paper and while a number of small notes are cited in the petition, Mr. Nieman's assets are considerable and his creditors will lose but little.

Harry Goldfein, brother of William Goldfein, of Sioux City, confesses to being the "burglar" who broke into the safe in William Goldfein's second hand store at 413 Pearl street and robbed the cash box of its contents. Golfein was arrested in Dubuque, and at that place he made a complete confession to Chief of Police Davenport and M. Kroloff, his brother-in-law. turning over a little more than $100 which was all, he said, he had left of the $111 he admitted having stolen. The young thief had been working for his brother, and it was he who was left to lock up the store on the night of the alleged burglary. The young man did lock up the store, but he locked himself in the place, and then proceeded to do the burglar stunt.

G. G. Burcham of Blairsburg tells a remarkable story of a hold-up in a box car near Webster City. He was returning from Minnesota where he had been employed since harvest. During the night two masked men entered the car and at the point of a revolver ordered him to "shell out." He did, turning over a few dollars in cash and a gold watch. They were surprised at the small amount and asked what he had done with his money. He replied that he had sent it to his wife. Upon hearing this one of the robbers ordered the other to return the gold watch and money to Burcham, saying that they did not propose to rob a man with a wife and family. Burcham was riding in the box car in order to save his money and feels glad that he met highwaymen "of honor."

Secretary John Simpson of the Iowa department of agriculture has completed a statement of the finances of the department as they stood on October 1. The statement shows the agricultural department to be in an excellent financial condition, and that the recent fair netted $14,145.81. Despite the extraordinary expenditures of the past year and the fact that several days of the recent fair were most unfavorable for the attraction of crowds, Secretary Simpson reports the season closing on October 1 with $27,701.48 in the treasury. The balance in the hands of the treasurer on the first of December last year was $30,372.25. The receipts from the state fair of 1903 amounted to $61,128.42. The expenses for the fair were $21,789.62, and the association paid out $23,813.13 for premiums. During the time the association has expended $17,773.52 for permanent improvements on the fair grounds and $1,423.12 for expenses other than the fair.

MURDER AT BUXTON.

Negro Kills Wife of Another Colored Man While Getting Breakfast.

Buxton, Oct. 17.—Joseph Smith, the negro who shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Ida Canada, colored, here, yesterday morning, was captured last evening at Caulkins, where he went directly after the fracas. He made no resistance and was taken to the Albia jail at once, where he was guarded by a score of colored men to prevent any possible violence.

The shooting scrape occurred at an early yesterday morning. It appears that Smith had been pressing his attentions on Mrs. Canada, who rejected them. At one time he threatened violence and was placed in jail on an indictment by the grand jury. Mrs. Canada went before the jury later and exerted her influence in his behalf, stating she did not think he would harm her. On this ground the indictment was dissolved and Smith was given his freedom. Yesterday morning about 6 o'clock he went to her home and forced an entrance, shooting her twice in the breast when she appeared. She died a few hours later. Smith immediately skipped.

All day three hundred colored miners scoured the country in search of him. They were divided in posses, and the capture shows how thorough they did the work. Blood hounds were secured from a neighboring town, but their work did not assist in the capture.

George Woodson, a colored attorney from Des Moines, took a prominent part in the chase. It was on his advice that the armed guard was placed in the jail last night. It is not thought that any attempt will be made to mob Smith, but feeling is running high in Buxton. Mrs. Canada was a highly respected colored woman.

Smith lives at Hocking, where he has been working since coming from Virginia some months ago. He is said to have a wife and family living at Hocking. He has been connected with the Canada woman in the past and she has stood much in fear of him since he has been about the mines. He has abused and threatened her during the past several months and was recently before the grand jury of Monroe county charged with mercilessly beating the woman, but the jury refused to indict the man and he was permitted to come back to the place and continue his persecutions. Mrs. Canada has lived at Buxton with her husband and family. Mr. Canada is a miner and worked at night, and when the shooting occurred he had not returned.

The murderer and Mrs. Canada were friends in Virginia before coming to Iowa, and the jealousy that has ended in murder began in the south land.

"MOSE" GETS FORTUNE.

Jacobs, Newsboy, Recovers $12,752 of His Earnings on Streets.

Des Moines, Oct. 19.—A decree in the district court granting to Mose Jacobs, the newsboy, a judgment against his father for $10,000 and his stepmother for $2,725, with a receiver appointed and a lien on all the property of his mother's estate now held by his father, for the two amounts, closes one of the most interesting stories ever exposed by legal proceedings in Polk county.

The fortune, it was claimed, was earned by Jacobs by selling papers on the streets of Des Moines for the past twenty-five years. A lad below the teens, he was a familiar sight on the street corner early in the morning and late at night. He was the king of the newsboys as far as successful earnings were concerned, and every night took home his money to his mother. This, it is claimed, was hidden by the parent in the cellar or put in the bank until $25,000 had been accumulated. Then a home was purchased and improved with some of the money.

In his original petition Mose Jacobs claimed that he was emancipated by his father while yet a small boy and said that after he commenced selling papers his father did no work. His mother, Leah Jacobs, died August 11, 1901, but on the previous day assigned the property to her husband. Then he, within a few months, married again and Mose commenced suit for the property. He also asked for the thousands of dollars which he claimed his father had dug from the earth beneath the old house and appropriated to himself and bride.

The opinion of the court was filed several weeks ago, but Saturday the decree was signed, giving to the newsboy his money and appointing C. H. Martin receiver under bonds of $15,000. The amount to be recovered from the young man's stepmother is said to be a portion of the money given by the father to his wife. The homestead is by consent granted to the father and the costs are to be paid, one-third by Mose Jacobs as plaintiff, one-third as intervenor and the remainder by the defendant.

Robbers blew open the safe in the Linn Grove postoffice and secured $1,500 in money and stamps. The robbers escaped.

Apparently believing himself safe, P. H. Stumpf, former treasurer and prominent merchant of the town of Vincent, was arrested by Sheriff Olson at Harlan, where he had secured employment. Stumpf disappeared from the town two months ago, at which time it is alleged he left debts amounting to $6,000 and had possession of $300 of the town funds. On the latter charge he will be taken to Vincent for hearing.

It is a horrible disappointment, but we must face it like men. Before I take this fresh step I will call the crew aft and hold a council with them."

"They'll expect it," said Crystal, helping himself to a glass of the Earl's champagne.

Just then the boatswain called through the skylight:

"Three sail, right ahead, are reported from the t'gallant yard, sir. Heading for us."

"Right," and the boatswain's ugly face vanished.

After swallowing another tumbler of grog apiece, the two captains went on deck.

It was not until five bells, half-past two, that the three sail sprang into sight ahead; two showing from the deck before the third. It was plain they were keeping company and sailed close together. Pope and Grindal had been watching the ships on the bow through the telescope intently for some time in silence, when Grindal exclaimed:

"The little 'un to the right is a schooner. She's under small canvas while t'other shows all she's got to spread, and the amidship vessel," he added after a pause, letting the glass sink from his eye and speaking in a hollow voice, while he fastened his wicked bloodshot gaze on the commander's countenance, "is a frigate—as I should say by the histe of the taws'ls, of all fifty guns."

"Quick! the glass!" shouted Pope.

He wrenched it with the violence of a sudden passion of excitement out of the boatswain's hands, looked, and in a note of thunder bawled:

"It's an English frigate, as you say, convoying the Madre, that's half-wrecked aloft, and the schooner Julia Morton is her prize, by heaven!"

He then rushed aft, roaring, "Shift your helm two points; let the shift be gradual! Grindal, trim with caution! A hellish trap to stumble on! All of a sudden, too!" He was blood-red with sensations and passions.

Pope was perfectly right; but then no seaman aided by a glass could have mistaken; the schooner was undoubtedly the beautiful fabric commanded by Captain Bland, and the ship with her fore-topmast gone answered in every minute point to the description Pope had received of the Madre de Dios.

"Damnation! she's after us," bellowed Crystal.

And sure enough the frigate might be seen with yards slowly squaring, rounding slowly out from her consorts, and as she brought her bow guns to bear upon the Gypsy, flash! and her most intelligible hint of thunder veiled the fok'sle in blue powder smoke.

The brig was put dead before the wind. Her people toiled in frantic haste, and in a frenzy of desire to escape; for well did they know the penalty that many of them would have to pay if that shapely cloud of soft, swelling whiteness astern brought the grinning artillery of the hull below within easy reach of the Gypsy's spars.

"I expect that scoundrel Bland has peached," says Crystal fiercely to Pope, while the two captains stood together near the wheel watching their lofty, swaying pursuer. "Does he gain on us?"

"No," answered Pope, with the sudden decision of conviction. "But curse seize this swell! Is it the forerunner of a calm? Then we are dead men, Johnny. Or is there wind behind it?"

"I believe I see wind in that sky," answered Crystal, looking into the southeast. "What shall you do if she overhauls us?"

"Strike," answered Pope.

"I'll not be taken alive," said Crystal. "So help me God, I will shoot myself when you strike, if, after fighting them, I am alive. I'll not swing."

Again the frigate tried the range; to no purpose. All the pirates looking as one man could not see where the shot hit the water.

There could be no question that the Gypsy was not only holding her own, but that she was distancing her pursuer. When her people made sure of this, their savage exultations broke out. They filled cans of gin and rum, and Pope, flourishing a glassful, roared out:

"Here's to our brave little sweetheart. Here's to her darling heels, my lads. Drink to her—drink to her!"

And a roaring huzza went up from the crew.

"If they're going to broach the liquor casks in this fashion," muttered Crystal in Pope's ear, making a dreadful face as he slowly turned his eyes from the frigate, "there'll be no fighting when fighting's wanted."

"There'll be no fighting anyhow," answered Pope. "What! with a fifty-gun ship, and say four hundred and fifty of a crew? A single broadside would blow us into ribs."

At four o'clock in the afternoon the frigate was still in chase, but the light breeze and the keen entry of the brig had helped her as though with the gift of an auxiliary screw, and now when you looked at the man-of-war you saw that she was sunk to her ports, but still she hung astern, a full majestic moon of canvas deadly in resolved pursuit.

"Ain't the wind scanting," said Grindal to Captain Pope, creasing his nose and snuffling as he brought his wicked eyes to bear on his commander.

"We may have it out of southeast," answered Pope, "I shall keep all on, everything abroad, dead before it until we can sail her into darkness which can't be far off; though fire seize that sun! d'ye notice how slow he always is in his going when night's wanted in a hurry?"

It was a famous saying of Nelson, "that at sea a good deal must be left to chance," and very often chance which is another name for fortune, will show mercy to the undeserving even to pirates, though a meritorious frigate has been sweating astern all day in their wake. For by six o'clock the sky southeast was painted a threatening dark gray with a mass of loose stuff sulkily scaling off it; and now it was that both Pope and Crystal stood waiting breathlessly; it was life or death to them; they stared into the horizon and their faces looked their tremendous intentions. Each man as he gazed saw the brig filled with men-of-warsmen and his own corpse crimsoning the white plank with a great bullet wound in his head No! these starving master mariners had hoisted the abhorred flag for a fortune, not for a gibbet.

Then with no further scanting the wind shifted all of a sudden slap with the run of the swell.

"Starboard your helm! Starboard your helm!" roared Pope. "See what are they doing yonder?"

Such a cheer as a man reprieved from death would send up to heaven or being a scoundrel pirate would send down to the devil, broke from Pope's deep throat as he dropped the telescope and turned to Crystal. The frigate with a shift of wind had down helm and was bracing her yards up to join the two vessels out of sight behind the rim of the sea. She had abandoned the pursuit.

With a huge oath Crystal dashed his cap on to the deck, shouting, "What an escape!"

Scarce had he said this when all hands began to see what had happened and they fell mad. The decks were covered with dancing figures, the air was split with their hideous roars of joy.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Thetis, West Indiaman.

Nothing happened the next two days. The crew were bitterly disappointed by the escape of the Madre. They admitted that their commander had not deceived them. That sort of fortune over which the black star trembles had admitted them to a sight of the object of their cruise; but for Bland and his accursed schooner, the Spaniard might have been theirs.

However, it was to be the next ship; Captain Pope had sworn it. Captain Crystal had echoed the oath. The men, defeated in their greed, wild to get money and end the dangerous cruise, were furiously determined.

It was a Sunday morning, fair and peaceful; one of those sweet, warm mornings, which at sea make you think of the glad music of the mouning lark, while memory calls up the woodland scene, the dusty road, the little highway inn.

Crystal had come up from breakfast, leaving Pope at table, and Grindal, relieved from his watch on deck, was rolling forward, when a loud, clear voice, sang from the fore-t'gallant yard, "Sail ho!"

When the Lamb Comes.

As the time for the coming of the youngsters approaches, the shepherd will be making preparations, says A. D. Gamley. If the lambs are coming in May, very little is necessary to be done, but if in March, and the sheep pen is not warm enough for new-born lambs, then warmer quarters must be provided. My plan is to have a shed built of poles, covered with straw and well banked with manure, into which turn the cattle, making the vacated stalls into temporary pens by nailing a few boards across the ends. Now for the lambs. As the ewes bring them into the warm stable, where the pens have already been prepared, examine the udder, draw some milk, so that the lamb will get it more freely, clean all the wool and filth away from around it, so that the lamb will have no trouble in getting hold of the teat. If the lamb is strong, don't be in too great a hurry to get him to suck, he will soon find the teat, and the less they are handled the better. If the lamb is weak, assist it to the teat, holding it up for a few times, or until he finds his legs. If too weak to suck, draw some milk from the ewe into a warm tea cup, feeding two or three spoonfuls at a time, until strong enough to help itself. If a lamb is chilled and apparently lifeless, pour a teaspoonful of gin in a little warm water down its throat, and submerge it once, all but the head, in warm water, or put in a warm oven. The latter, the hot air cure, I think is much the surest plan. I have brought round lambs in that way that have been picked up for dead. Never give up a lamb that has been chilled and never sucked, without trying one of the aforesaid methods for its recovery; the chances for that lamb living are a good deal better than for an ailing lamb a few days or a week old.

As the lambing progresses, the shepherd will have observed that some ewes are much heavier milkers than others, and that the poor milkers very often have twins, put one of the twins on a ewe with a single lamb and a good milker. The best and easiest plan is to pick out a ewe giving indications of being a good mother, and watch for her lambing. As soon as she has lambed, and before she gets up, place the twin lamb beside the new-born lamb, and roll and rub them together, which will give the same appearance and smell to both, and when the ewe turns round to survey her progeny she will never suspect the fraud, but will commence licking both lambs. I have never seen this plan fail. If a ewe loses her lamb, make her foster a twin (aim to make every ewe raise a lamb). This requires a little patience. My plan is to skin the dead lamb and sew the pelt on to the twin lamb, putting the dam and foster lamb in a dark pen for a few days, always keeping a sharp lookout to see if the lamb is doing all right. It is as well in their case to tie up the ewe for the first day or so. Take off the pelt in 24 or 30 hours.

Effects of Feed on Teeth and Skull.

Schwartzkopf, of the Minnesota Station, treating of the influence of feed upon the dentition of pigs, writes:

1. The order of succession of teeth in our precocious pigs runs the same as in the primitive hog.

2. The times when the teeth appear are variable, according to race, feeding and health. The same breeds raised under the same conditions will show the same appearance.

3. The form of the skull depends upon nutrition, health and more or less employment of certain muscles of the head and neck. Skulls of poorly nourished pigs are long and more slender than from those well nourished. Pigs that are prevented from rooting will acquire a short, high and rounded head, while those that are forced to root to secure a portion of their food will develop a long and slender form of head.

Coops for Judging Fowls.

At the Wisconsin State fair last week we noticed what was to most people a new feature in coops to be used in judging. These were made open on both sides. This gives the light a full passage around the birds and the judges have no trouble in seeing the specimens they are to pass upon, without removing them from the coops. The judges do their work on the opposite side from the crowd, which is another advantage of this arrangement. Of course the birds are taken out of the coops and handled when necessary, in any event. With the old style of coops, those open on one side, there was always a semi-twilight when the judge, clerk and owners of the birds got around them. Then, too, it was always a nuisance to have people crowding in between the judge and the clerk making records for him. Now these two officials have a whole row of coops between themselves and other interested persons.

POULTRY

Feeding Squabs.

William E. Rice, in a United States Department of Agriculture bulletin on squab raising, says: No success can be expected unless proper kinds of food are procured and the birds are regularly fed. Long continued feeding on cracked corn and wheat alone invariably fails to produce as good squabs or as many as when a further variety of grains is fed. In their free state, pigeons can select a variety of grains, avoiding one kind and choosing another, as their appetites dictate, but when they are kept in a small enclosure they must of course take what the breeder gives them. Hence, it becomes highly important that the breeder have good judgment as to kinds and quality of food to set before them, and that he have interest enough in his flock to avoid stinting the quantity or feeding too largely of one kind.

Squabs ("peepers"), 12 hours old.

The six principal feeds are cracked corn, Canada peas, wheat, German millet, kafir corn and hemp. On the floor of each pen keep about a peck of clean sand evenly spread. Procure three boxes about the size of small cigar boxes; fill one about one-third full of fine table salt; the second with cracked oyster shells, pigeon size, and the third with ground charcoal, about as fine as ground coffee. These three substances are very essential to the health of pigeons. Clean out and replenish each of these boxes weekly.

For the morning ration give equal parts of cracked corn, wheat and peas well mixed. In the afternoon use cracked corn, kafir corn, millet and peas in equal parts. Twice a week feed hemp instead of millet. A small quantity of rice may be fed once a week with advantage. The morning feed should be at about 7 o'clock and the afternoon feed at 4 o'clock in summer and 3 in winter. This afternoon time is necessary in order that the birds may have ample opportunity to fill themselves and feed their young before nightfall.

Some wonder why squabs die in the nest or get on the floor and do not fatten up properly. Very frequently the reason is because the old birds are not properly fed. We should constantly bear in mind that a squab is very different from a chick. A newly-hatched chick can run about and help itself to food and water. The squab, on the other hand, is utterly helpless at birth. It is unable to walk and must be fed in the nest with whatever the parent bird brings to it. For about five days nature provides a special food commonly called "pigeon milk," a creamy substance contained in the crops of the pigeons, and which they have the power to eject from their mouth into the mouths of their young. After a few days of such feeding, the squab is fed on such grains as the pigeon gets, and by the same process of transfer from the parent's mouth to its own. Hence it is essential that proper food be given the pigeons.

The poultry judge should be a man of great ability in his line. The employment of a man to judge poultry just because he can be obtained for nothing is unfair to the men that are exhibiting fowls and that have spent large sums of money to be able to fairly compare their fowls with the fowls of others.

promotion from the company and will be transferred today to Trosky, Minn. Mr. Frahm has been a resident of our town about eight months and during that time has made a host of friends. He is a thoroughly competent man, and has attended to the company's business here in No. 1 shape. He is by far the most popular agent that has ever been here, and all regret his departure. That he will meet with success at Trosky is a foregone conclusion. Trosky is the home of his boyhood and his parents still reside there.

The following clipping from one of the Waterloo papers may be of interest to our readers being that among the principal stock holders of the concern are Henry and Chas. Gruetzmacher, well known to our people. The success with which this company has met far exceeds the promoters most sanguine expectations. The fact that 30 buggies and surries of their make have been sold in Klemme the past year is proof sufficient that our people have implicit confidence in this company's goods.

"The annual meeting of the Waterloo Carriage company was held yesterday afternoon at the office in the factory building. It was the first meeting since the company has completed a full year of business and the report of the officers for the year ending October 1st were of great interest because of this fact: These reports were of a most gratifying character and showed that the company has made a splendid beginning, and that it is now firmly established in popular favor. The volume of business has been beyond the expectations of the gentlemen who have invested their means in the venture. A large force of men has been kept constantly employed during the year and all the vehicles manufactured have been sold. Better than this the goods have given the highest satisfaction both to dealers and purchasers and the company has won for its goods a prestige for quality and service which will be of definite value in future years. The factory is now manufacturing 1,000 cutters and practically all of these have been sold in advance of their manufacture. It is the intention of the company to double its output this year."

H. W. Gruetzmacher was again elected president of the institution.

Makes Casks of Cordwood.

A resident at Guelma, in Algeria, has taken out a patent for the manufacturing of casks in corkwood. An interior coating isolates the contents from contact with the cork. A barrel of eleven gallons weighed thirty pounds. A barrel of eighty pounds, which is the weight of a wooden cask of the same capacity. Cork being a bad conductor of heat and cold the necessity of adding alcohol for the preservation of wine would be unnecessary, and the liquid would no longer be subject to the fluctuation of temperature. In warm climates these casks might be useful for conveying ice, meat, fish or fruits. A great saving on the freight expense would also be obtained, considering a cork barrel weighs two-thirds less than a wooden one. The influence of heat can not warp the staves, consequently the hoops remain in place.

Bash Nissen left on Monday for Mason City where he has accepted a position in a horse shoeing shop. Bash is a jolly, good fellow and as a horseshoer and all-around blacksmith has but few equals in this country. He is certainly a natural born mechanic, and a young man whose acquaintance wears well.

AMERICA WINS ALASKAN DISPUTE

Every Contention But One Is Conceded By the High Joint Tribunal.

ALL AMERICAN LAND IS HELD

Canada Is Given One of the Channels of tne Portland Canal, Which Is All They Gain from the Contest.

London, Oct. 19.—The Alaska boundary commission Saturday reached an agreement whereby all the American contentions are sustained, with the exception of those in relation to the Portland canal, which Canada wins. All that now remains to be done is for the commission to affix their signatures to the decision and complete the map which will accompany it. On the map will be marked the boundary definitely fixing the division of American and British territory on such a basis that no American citizen will lose a foot of land he already believed he had, while the United States will retain all the waterways to the rich Alaskan territory, with the exception of the Portland canal, which gives Canada the one outlet she so so much needed.

The long standing dispute was only settled after a week of keen trying, secret deliberation between the arbitrators. Even up to noon today there was an acute possibility that a disagreement might result, and the whole proceedings fall to the ground. Lord Alverstone, though openly inclined to believe in the justice of the American argument that the United States was entitled to the heads of inlets, as contained in question five, held out that Canada had established her case in questions two and three, dealing with the Portland canal.

The successful termination of the Alaskan boundary arbitration Saturday afternoon came as a complete surprise to all interested in the case except perhaps the commissioners themselves. When the tribunal adjourned at 3:30 p. m., it was understood that no decision had been reached. Indeed, so general was the impression that no decision would be reached till next week that several of the counsel and others employed in the case left London soon after the adjournment. However, the Associated Press learned that a vote had been taken and that the decision to grant all the American contentions except that for the Portland canal, which goes to Canada, had been arrived at. But, while the Americans throughout have been very confident, no vote had previously been taken and no one could before this say that the United States had won her case. No hitch occurred during the entire deliberations, and as these progressed the confidence of the American commissioners that a decision substantially upholding the American claims would be given increased considerably, but it was admitted that it would be necessary to agree to a compromise on the Portland canal.

One of the features of the situation during the last few days has been that Chief Justice Alverstone had concluded to take the American view, but seemed to be unwilling to go on record as believing in that way.

RIVAL FOR STEEL TRUST

Crucible Steel Company Will Make Hard Fight.

Pittsburg, Pa., Oct. 16.—Since the United States Steel corporation has declined to take over a half interest in the Clairton Steel company, now owned by the Crucible Steel company, and after a contract had been made to do so, the officers of the Crucible company have announced that they will go ahead with the original plans to make this great property a powerful competitor of the combine, and will themselves raise the necessary funds to do so. The fact that the company owns its ore lands, coking plants and coal mines, the officers say, puts it in an independent position for raw material. All it has to do now is to build finishing mills to its already enormous works at Clairton to have one of the newest and most modern steel works in the country.

After a long conference by the executive officers of the Crucible Steel company the above announcement was made by President Frank B. Smith. He also stated that "it is probable that the larger operations of the Clairton Steel company may require the company to discontinue the dividends on the preferred stock. If this proves to be so, the directors will not hesitate to suspend dividends while the necessity exists."

The change in the officers announced brings back into harness as chairman of the executive committee William G. Park, who had retired from active participation in steel business affairs, and also Reuben Miller, who has been anxious to retire and has been out of office for some time.

The Crucible Steel company has a capital of $50,000,000, half preferred and half common. Its own plants are large consumers of open hearth billets. It was organized in 1900, and while never paying a common stock dividend has accumulated a surplus of considerable size.

CAROLINA JURY FREES TILLMAN

The Slayer of Editor Gonzales Is Cleared of the Charge of Murder.

Lexington, S. C., Oct. 16.—The jury in the case of J. H. Tillman has found him not guilty. A demonstration followed the announcement, friends of the defendant giving vent to their feelings in a shout.

The court, previous to the reading of the verdict had admonished the spectators to refrain from any demonstration. Counsel for defense moved the defendant's discharge from the sheriff's custody.

No objections being made by the state the order was granted. The jury was out twenty hours. The defendant shook hands with the jury and judge and left the court room accompanied by his friends and counsel.

The count in the indictment charging the carrying of concealed weapons was ignored during the trial, and the jury took no action on it.

After the verdict was announced, the clerk held up the pistols which had figured in the trial and offered them to the defendant, who waved them off, saying:

"They are not mine."

James H. Tillman, after his acquittal, made the following statement to the Associated Press:

"I feel very grateful at the result of the verdict, but at no time did I apprehend any serious consequences. I, of course, deeply regret the death of Mr. Gonzales, but I was forced to do what I did. I have never apprehended a conviction, for I felt that I did no more than any man woud have done under the same circumstances and what I was compelled to do. My position was fully stated in the testimony I gave on the stand. I did ask for a change of venue because I was convinced that on account of the prejudice in Richland county that I could not get a fair and impartial trial in that county. I felt sure as soon as my case could be presented to an impartial jury I woud be vindicated. The verdict has verified the correctness of my judgment."

TRYING HARD TO GET PEACE.

And Yet the Japan-Russia Situation is Far From Solved.

Yokohama, Oct. 16.—The veteran statesmen's conferences with the cabinet ministers at Tokio Tuesday, while significant of a crisis, are understood to have been pacific, confirming the prior conferences before the throne June 23, stipulating the integrity of Corea and Chinese retention of Manchuria, with a recognition of Russian rights. These conferences indicate that the negotiations are progressing towards a pacific solution of the problem. Baron de Rosen, the Russian minister to Japan, and Baron Komura, the Japanese foreign minister, held their fourth conference yesterday. It lasted four hours. M. Lessar, the Russian minister to China, has informed Prince Ching, head of the Chinese foreign office, that if China rejects the demands of Russia, the occupation of Manchuria by the Russian troops will be permanent. The Russian forces at New Chwang have been reinforced by two battalions.

Peter Elliott Goes to Asylum.

Washington, Oct. 17.—Peter Elliott of Minnesota, who was arrested at the White house on the 5th inst., and who made a violent attack upon the officers who had him in custody, was today officially adjudged insane and recommitted to St. Elizabeth's insane asylum. Drs. Vale and Marbury, police surgeons, testified that Elliott is a paranoiac and is apt to be violent at any time. Elliott was entirely calm during the hearing and did not ask to be heard.

SARAFOFF IS DEAD.

Famous Macedonian Leader Who Has Been the Moving Spirit.

Salonica, European Turkey, Oct. 17.—The report of the death of Boris Sarafoff, the famous Macedonian leader, is confirmed. An imperial irade has been received here ordering severe punishment to be meted out to soldiers guilty of brutality, theft or drunkenness.

A dispatch from Salonica yesterday said that it was reported that Boris Sarafoff was killed October 12 in a skirmish at Pruva, near Florina.

Boris Sarafoff was the life and soul of the insurgent operations in Macedonia. All his life Sarafoff was an active enemy of the Turk. When he was a boy of 14 he saw his father and grandfather tortured and dragged in chains to a dungeon. He has been described as "the most romantic figure in the Balkans." He was popularly believed and stated to be the real instigator of the abduction of Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, in September, 1901, in order to procure through her ransom funds to enable the Macedonian revolutionary committee to organize the insurrection. In 1895, Sarafoff, after serving as an officer in the Bulgarian army, formed a band of desperadoes to raid Turkish territory. Since then he headed nearly 400 daring raids into Turkey. Once he captured the Turkish town of Malnik with forty men, putting the garrison to flight. Throughout the recent dispatches recounting the revolutionary movements in Macedonia, his name has constantly recurred. He was more than once previously reported to have been killed. He was only 30 years of age.

JURY UNABLE TO AGREE.

New Trial for Miller and Johns, Charged With Conspiracy to Get Bribe.

Cincinnati, Oct. 19.—The jury in the case of Daniel Vorhees Miller and Joseph M. Johns, on trial in the federal court here all week on the charge of an alleged conspiracy to extort a bribe, reported that it was unable to agree and was discharged by Judge Thompson. The trial attracted unusual attention as it was the first one under the many recent indictments for alleged frauds in the postoffice department. Four days were devoted to the taking of evidence and the fifth day to the very vigorous arguments of District Attorney McPherson and Assistant Attorney Darby for the government and Hiram D. Rulison and Charles W. Baker for the defendants. General Robb and many clerks from the department at Washington, Chief Cochran and many other postoffice inspectors and others from Washington were here to assist in the prosecution and the charge to the jury was an unusually strong one.

There were dramatic scenes during the closing day when the wives of the defendants and others wept during the arguments of the attorneys.

SENATOR PLATT STOPS SUIT.

He is Said to Have Settled with Miss Mae Woods for $15,000.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 16.—It is known here that Miss Mae Woods threatened suit against Senator Thomas C. Platt has been settled out of court. A telegram from New York says that a note was sent to Senator Platt's room at midnight, saying it was reported that Miss Woods' case had been settled. Senator Platt sent this reply:

"I have no doubt the report is true. I have had the same information myself."

Miss Woods appeared in person at the Manhattan hotel. Up to this time she had been invisible to reporters.

Late yesterday afternoon two strangers visited Senator Platt at his hotel. They were closeted with him for two hours. When they came away the news of the settlement also became public. It is said that $15,000 cash was the basis of settlement and that Platt's two visitors were Miss Woods' lawyers. Both of the principals in the threatened litigation assent that the most cordial relations of friendship exist between them.

AUDITOR'S RECOMMENDATIONS.

Carroll Favors Creation of Insurance Department.

Des Moines, Oct. 19.—In a letter of transmittal with his biennial report, which has been submitted to Governor Cummins, State Auditor B. F. Carroll devotes considerable space to the discussion of insurance matters and makes several important recommendations for action by the coming session of the legislature. Most important among these recommendations is one arguing to some extent for the creation of an insurance department for the state distince and separate from the office of the state auditor. Mr. Carroll cites the enromous increase in the insurance business in Iowa and declares the business has grown to such importance that the entire attention of one man should be given to its supervision. The report also deals largely with insurance companies other than those selling life policies, the state and county mutuals, and says as a general thing these companies are well conducted and doing a good business for their policy holders, but he declares there are some, especially a few doing a hail insurance business which have been exceedingly extravagant, in the matter of expenses and salaries to their offices, the latter item sometimes exceeding the entire amount paid to the policy holders. He believes the legislature should in some way limit the amount these companies shall pay for salaries and expenses.

The report shows that at the end of the biennial period Iowa is richer than even in the history of the state, having in the treasury in cash $1,531,826. This is an increase of $417,826 over the amount on hand when the last biennial report was issued. The report is interesting throughout and deals with banks and banking, showing a wonderful increase in this business throughout the state, with building and loan associations, revenue and taxation, the state school fund, investment companies and telegraph and telephone companies. In nearly all of these matters recommendations are made which the auditor believes would be to the credit of the state and for the better regulation of the affairs of the corporations.

The report follows:

The auditor's biennial report for 1901 shows a net cash balance in the treasury of $1,114,000.00, after deducting all outstanding warrants. This has been increased to $1,531,826.00 at the end of the biennial period just closed, showing an increase of $417,826.00. The receipts from all sources for the preceding biennial period amount to $5,120,059.54, and for the period just closed $6,177,855.50, making an increase of $1,057,795.96. This, however, includes $34,866.68 refunded by the United States government on account of the Spanish-American war claim, and $456,417.89 on account of civil war claim, leaving a net increase from ordinary sources of $566,511.39.

Since the legislation enacted by the Twenty-Eighth General Assembly, reducing the rate of interest on the permanent school fund from 6 per cent to not less than 5 per cent, and increasing the amount which counties may loan to one individual from $1,000 to $3,000, this fund has all been placed at interest, and at a profit to the counties, as all interest on the fund above 4 1-2 per cent charged against the counties by the state accrues to such counties as a commission or profit for handling such funds. In a few instances the counties are still loaning these funds at 6 per cent interest. The amount of the state school fund is now $4,754,444.52. Further sale of school land or funds from escheat estates will not greatly increase this amount, the increase during the biennial period being only $2,139.19.

20,000 QUARTS A DAY.

Takes 2,500 Cows to Furnish Lacteal Fluid for Des Moines.

Des Moines, Oct. 19.—It requires over 20,000 quarts of milk daily, to supply the city of Des Moines, or about one-half pint to each man, woman and child in the city. To furnish this enormous quantity of milk more than 2,500 cows are pailed twice a day. Nearly 1,200 of these are owned by dairymen living near Des Moines, who bring the milk to town in their own wagons for delivery. Half of the milk supply is shipped in over the railroads and the interurban line, 250 points contributing to Des Moines markets. Over sixty wagons are employed in delivering milk over the city and they require 200 horses. One team cannot stand the work of pulling a milk wagon steadily, so that from three to four horses are kept for each wagon. Among the dairies near Des Moines alone, over 100 men are employed as milkers and in caring for the cows, one good milker handling from ten to twenty cows daily. Many more are employed in caring for the cows which furnish the milk shipped in from railroad points.

Much of this supply comes from farmers who milk comparatively few cows, and sell the milk to creameries, whose wagons collect it for shipment. The most of the cream sold in the city is skimmed or separated by county creameries and consigned to local dealers who deliver it in the city.

The price of milk a few weeks ago rose from 5 to 6 1-4 cents per quart; and will likely go to eight and one-third. This is not due to any combination on the part of the dairymen, they say, but is because of the shortage in the supply. The dairies are cutting down their herds as a result, they declare, of difficulty in getting efficient helpers and milkers at a reasonable price.

STORIETTES.

Some time before the civil war, and while he resided in southern Illinois, John A. Logan once found it necessary to doubt the veracity of a man considerably older than himself, and told him so. "Don't you call me a liar, sir," said the man, excitedly; "I have a reputation to maintain, and I mean to maintain it if I have to do so at the point of a pistol." "Oh," Logan is said to have calmly retorted, "that won't be necessary. You maintain your reputation every time you tell a lie."

Andrew Carnegie is only a few inches above five feet in height. Henry W. Phipps, his old partner, is not an inch taller, and John Walker, the other member of the trio who revolutionized the manufacture of steel, has perhaps a little the better of both Carnegie and Phipps. As for Henry C. Frick, his head would just about reach to the shoulder of a man of ordinary height. It is said that one day, when these four steel masters were walking together on the streets of Pittsburg, a bootblack called out to his business rival further down the block, as the millionaires passed: "Eh, Jimmy, git onto der runts!"

Some curious anecdotes are related of Hermann Zumpe, the Wagnerian conductor at Eunich who died suddenly a few weeks ago. He was well known to be a spiritualist, and believed that the ghosts of dead composers inspired his conducting of their works. One day Zumpe told another conductor of note how Beethoven's spirit was present during the performance of one of the symphonies, and so pleased was the ghost that, after the end of the first movement, he exclaimed, "At last!" "Ah, my dear fellow," exclaimed the other conductor, "surely Beethoven made a mistake. He thought it was the end of the last movement!"

Henry Labouchere, as a young diplomatist, was fond of amusing and bewildering his superiors. For instance, it is said that once he was instructed to come home to London from Constantinople. He wasn't heard from for some time, and was apparently lost in the midst of the Black Forest, or some of the other lands that intervened between him and home. He was at last traced; and then calmly wrote that he was obeying orders, and was making his way homeward; but that as his chief had forgotten to send him any money to pay the expense of the ordinary methods of traveling, he was working his slow passage on foot!

For a Bad Back.

Sabra, Montana, Oct. 19th.—A great many men in this neighborhood used to complain of pains in the back, but now scarcely one can be found who has any such trouble.

Mr. Gottlieb Mill is largely responsible for the improvement for it was he, who first of all found the remedy for this Backache. He has recommended it to all his friends and neighbors, and in every case it has had wonderful success.

Mr. Mill says:—

"For many years I had been troubled with my Kidneys and pains in the small of my back. I tried many medicines but did not derive any benefit until last fall, when I bought a dozen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using them a few days I began to improve, my back quit aching and I felt better and stronger all around.

"I will keep them in the house right along for in my opinion they are the best medicine in the market to-day, and if my back should bother me again, I will use nothing else."

"Is Samson Huskiman going to coach your football team this season?" asks the visitor of the quarter-back. "Samson Huskiman." Don't repeat that name on the campus." "Why, is there anything wrong about——" "Wrong? Listen. Instead of playing with the boys this year, what do you suppose he is going to do?" "Going into professional athletics?" "Worse—infinitely worse! He has accepted the offer of a thousand dollars a week as demonstrator for a hair-tonic."

WEST BRANCH, MICH.—"Doan's Kidney Pills hit the case, which was an unusual desire to urinate—had to get up five or six times of a night. I think diabetes was well underway, the feet and ankles swelled. There was an intense pain in the back, the heat of which would feel like putting one's hand up to a lamp chimney.
